RELATION OF A Voyage to SPAIN IN Seberal Letters.

LETTER L

E E I N G you are so carness with me to let you know all my Adventures and whatsoever I have observed during my Travels, you must therefore be contented my dear Cousin) to bear with a great many trisling Occurrences, before you can meet with what will please you: I know your fancy is so nice and delicate, that none but extraordinary Accidents can entertain you; and I wish I had no others to relate: but recounting things faithfully, as they have hapened, you must be contented therewith.

I gave you an Account in my last, of what I met with as far as Bayonne: you know this is a Town in France, Frontier to Spain; wash'd by the Rivers Dadour and Mivelle, which joyn together; and the Sea comes up to them. The Port and Trade are considerable: I came from Axe by Water, and observ'd that the Boat-men of Adour have the same Custom as those of Carrone; which is to say, That in passing by one another, they set up a Hollowing; and they had rather lose their Wages than to sorbear these sort of shoutings, although exceeding vexations to those who are not used to them. There are two Castles strong enough to defend the Town, and there are about it several pleasant Walks;

At my Arrival there, I intreated the Baron de Castlena, who had accompany'd me from Axe, to bring me acquainted with fome Women, with whom I might spend my time with less impatience, till the Litters came, which were to be sent to me from St. Seballian.

He readily complied with my Request: for being a Person of Quality and Worth, he is much esteem'd at Bayonne. He fail'd not the next Morning to bring feveral Ladies to visit me.

These Women begin here to feel the Scorching Heats of the Sun; their Complexion is dark, their Eye sparkling; they are charming enough, their Wits are sharp: And I could give you a farther Account of their Capacities, could I have better understood what they said; not but that they could all speak French, yet with such a different Dialect, as surpast my Under-

Some who came to see me, brought little sucking Pigs under their Arms, as we do little Dogs: its true they were very spruce, and several of em had Collars of Ribbons, of various Colours: However, this Custom looks very odd, and I cannot but think that several among themselves are disgusted at it: When they danced, they must set them down, and let these grunding Animals run about the Chamber, where they made a very pleasant Harmony. These Ladies danc'd at my Intreaty, the Baron of Cassenau having sent for Pipes and Tabors.

The Gentlemen who attended the Ladies, took each of co her whom he had brought with him, and the Dance began in a Round, all holding Hands: they had afterwards long Cane brought them, and then each Spark taking hold of the Lady's Handkerchief, which separated them from one another moved very gracefully at the Sound of this Martial fort of Musick, which inspired them with such Heat that they seem'd not to be able to moderate it. This feem'd to me to refemble the Pyrit Dance fo much celebrated by the Ancients; for these Gentlemen and Ladies made so many Turns, Frisks and Capers, their Canes being thrown up into the Air, and dexteroufly caught again, that it is impossible to describe their Art and Agility And I had a great deal of Pleasure in seeing 'em: but methought it lasted too long, and I began to grow weary of this ill-ordered Ball: When the Baron de Castleneau, who perceived it caused to veral Baskets of dried Fruit to be brought in. They are the 7em who past for Portuguises, and dwell at Bayonne, who trans them from Genoa, and furnish all the Country with them. wanted not for Limonade, and other refreshing Waters, of wh these Ladies drank heartily; and so the Entertainment end who came to see me, though much troubled with the Gout, invited me to Dine at his House, where I was most deliciously entertain'd'; for this is a Country abounding with good Cheer, and at cheap Rates. I found here Women of Quality, that were very handsome, whom he had invited to bear me Company. The sight of the Castle, which faces the River, is very pleasant, and has always a good Garrison in it.

I was carry'd the next Morning to fee the Synagogue of Jews, in the Suburb of the Holy Spirit, but met with nothing

At my return to my Lodging, I was surprized to find several Pieces of Linnen, which were brought to me from the Ladies who came to see me, with Baskets full of dried Sweet-mean. This Treatment seemed to me very obliging, to a Lady whom they had not known above sour or sive Days. But I must not forget to tell you, there is not any finer Linnen in the World than that which is made in this Country, some of which is open like Net-work, and the Threads of it finer than Hair And I remember, that travelling thro the Villages of Bourdeaux, which may be rather call'd Defarts, the poor Peasants living so wretchedly; yet I sound among them as neat Napkins as those need amongst People of Quality at Paris.

I fail'd not to send these Ladies such little Presents which I thought might please them: I perceiv'd they were great Admirers of Ribbons, and wear a great many on their Heads and Ears, which made me send them a great many; to which I added several Fans: and they, by way of Return, presented me with Gloves, and Thread-Stokins, most delicately knit.

In sending them to me, they defired me to go to the pext. Chapple, which was not far from my Quarters, where they intended to Regale me with the best Musick the Town would afford: but though they were very good Voices, yet there is no great pleasure in hearing them, because they want both Air and Skill.

The Litters which I expected from Spain being come, I prepared for my Departure; but I never met any thing dearer than these sort of Equipages; for each Litter has a Master that accompanies it, who keeps the Gravity of a Roman Senator, being mounted on a Mule, and his Man on another, with which they release ever and anon those that carry the Litter. I had two, I took the greatest for my self and my Child, and had besides four Mules for my Servants, and two others for my Baggage; to conduct them, there were other two Masters and two Men. You see what Charge one is at, to go to Madrid, seeing you must pay not only for their Attendance on you wards, but the same Price for their return back: However,

I found at Beyonse leveral Tinks and Mores, and I think a worse fort of People, and these are Custom-House Men: I had caused my Trunks to be weigh'd at Paris, that I might have the less to do with these fort of People; but they were more subtle, or to speak better, more obstinate than I; so that I was forc'd to give them whatsoever they demanded. Scarcely was I got clear from them, when the Drums, Trumpets, Pipes, and Violins of the Town, came thundring upon me; they soliow'd me further than St anthony's Gate, through which you pass for Spain through Bisease; they play'd each of them in their way, and all together without any Harmony, which was enough to drive any one out of their Senses: I ordered some Money to be given them, upon which they lest persecuting me. As soon as we had lest Bayonne, we entered into a large, barrent Meath, where we saw nothing but Chesnut-Trees; but we afterwards past along by the Sea, whose Sand makes a delightful way, and a pleasant Prospect.

We arrived in good time at St, John de Luz : nothing can be pleasanter than this Borough, which is the greatest in France, and the best built; there are several smaller Cities: its Port lies between two Mountains, which Nature feems to have exprefly placed to defend it from Storms; the River Nivelle diff gorges it felf therein; the Sea comes up very high in it, and the greatest Barks come up commodiously to the Key. Seamen here are very skilful at catching Whales, and other large Fish. We were here very well entertain'd, to that our Tables were covered with all forts of Wild Fowl, but our Beds were not answerable, being stuck with Feathers whole Pinions ran into our fides, and we wanted Quilts to lay on the top of them: I thought when we were to pay, that I should have had a large Reckoning, but they only demanded of me half a Lewis Dor, when they would have cost more than five Piftoles at Paris. The Situation of St. John de Luz is extreamly agreeable.

In the most spacious part of the Town you see here a very sine Church, built after the Modern Fashion; and here is a Passage over the River Nivelle, on a Wooden Bridge of great length. Here are Toll-Gatherers, who make you pay for every thing you earry with you, not excepting your Gloatis. This Tax is demanded at their Pleasure; and it is excessive on Strangers. I was weary with speaking French to em, and projecting I was no Spaniers; they seigning not to understand me, incering in my Face, and wrapping up their it their Hooded-Gowns; they feemed to me to be This guiled in Capubles . In short, they tax'd me eighter and would perswade me they used me well, tho'd contrary. But I have already told you (dear Co when you travel this Country, you must flock your

I faw the Callie of Arrais, which feems a frong plantific farther Grognes, where the Bifenye is spoken either French or Spanish. I designed to bye at Indian but three Leagues distant from St. John de Luz, and I had that after Noon, but the Difpute which we had with t on the Bridge, the Difficulty we had in passing the of Bestia, and the ill Weather, joyned to other lit ties which happed, were the Caufe that it was Night barriv'd on the Borders of the River Bidaffon, which France from Spain. I observed along the way from Bayes ther, little Carriages, on which they transport every which having only two Iron Wheels, and the Noise the is fo great, that they are heard a Mile off, when they arom ny of them together, which often happen; for you of with Sixty or Seventy at a time; they are drawn by O I have feen the fame in the Villages of Bourdeaux, and especi ally on the fide of Axe.

The River of Bidaffoe is usually very small, but the Snown melting, had increas'd it to fuch a degree, that we had no small trouble to pass it, some in a Boat, and others swimmin on their Mules: The Moon shined very bright, by mean of which I was shew'd on the right Hand the Isle of Conference, where the Marriage of our King was made with Maria Ther Infanta of Spain. I saw a while after the Fort of Pontarab which belongs to the King of Spain, standing on the Mouth of this small River: the Flux and Reflux of the Sea arrives here. Our Kings heretofore pretended it belong'd to them : there have been such great Contests hereupon, especially by the Inhabitants of Fontarabia, and those of Indage, that they have several times come to Blows, This oblig'd Lewis the and Fundinand, to agree, That it should be common to both I tions : the French and the Spaniards take Toll equally ; thele last making those pay who pass into Spain, and the former doin the like in relation to those who pass over to Prance.

War does not hinder Commerce on this Frontier : it's th they cannot hibfift without it, feeing they must perish through

Want, did they not affift one another.

This Country call'd Biscaye, is full of high Mountains, where are several fron Mines: The Biscays climb up the Rocks as easily, and with as great swiftness as Stags: Their Language if one may call such Jargon Language) is very poor, seeing one Word signifies abundance of Things: there are none but those born in the Country that can understand it; and I am told, that to the end it may be more particularly theirs, they make no use of it in Writing; they make their Children to read and write French and Spanish according to which King's Subjects they are. It's certain, as soon as I past the little River of Brdasson, I was not understood, unless I spake Castilian: and not above a quarter of an Hour before, I should not have been understood had I not spoke French.

I found on the other side of this River a Banker of St. Sebelian, to whom I was recommended: he tarried for me, with two of his Relations; they were cloath'd after the French manner, but ridiculously, their Justau Corps being short and large, and their Sleeves hanging down very short; those of their Shirts were so large, that they hung down below their Justau Corps: they had Bands without Collars, and Periwigs, one of which had enough Hair for four, and so frizled, as made 'em look as if they were frighted, iller drest People you cannot meet with. Those who wear their own Hair, wear it very long and close, parting it on the Crown, and pass part of it behind their Ears: But what kind of Ears think you? those of Midas were not larger; and I belive, that to lengthen them, they are stretch'd when they be young; without question they find some kind of Beauty herein.

Any three Spaniards made me in bad French most tedious and dull Complements. We past through the Borugh of Tran, which is about a quarter of a League from the River, and came afterwards to Iran, which is distant about another quarter of a League; this little Town is the first of Spain which you meet with, leaving France: it's ill built, the Streets are unequal, and there's nothing one can speak of: We entered into the sin through the Stable, where are the Stairs on which you must ascend to your Chamber; this is the Country's Fashion. I found this House very light, by a great many Candles, which were as small as Pack-thread; there were at least forty in my Chamber, fixt on little bits of Wood; in the midst of emsead and a Pan of Coals burning, made of Olive Rhine, to take away the scent of the Candles.

Thad a great Supper, which my Gallants, the Spaniards had caus'd to be made ready for me; but all was fo full of Garlick, Saffron and Spice, that I could eat nothing: and I had made very bad Cheer, had not my Cook made me a little Ragon of what he could find.

Determining to go but to St. Sebastian the next Morning which is but seven or eight Leagues, I thought to Dine before I set out: I was sitting at Table, when one of my Women brought me my Watch to wind it up, as it was my Custom a Noon, it was a striking Watch, of Tompion's make, and cosme fifty Lewises: My Banker, who was by me, shewd some defire to see it; I gave it him, with a customary Civilly. This was enough: my Blade rises, makes me a prosonne rence, telling me, 'He did not deserve so considerable.

was deeper than a Sack. You'l take me to be a very great Sot in faying nothing to all this, and I do not wonder at it; but I confess ingenuously, I was so surprized at his Proceeding, that the Watch was out of sight before I could resolve on what I was to do. My Women, and the rest of my Servants which were about me, stared on me, and I on them blushing with Shame and Vexation to be thus caught. However I recollected my self, and considered, that this Man was to pay me a good round Sum of Money for the Charge of my Journey, and to return Money to Bourdeaux, where I had taken it up: that having Bills of Credit on him, he might use several Tricks to me, and Puts-offs, which might make me spend twice the Value of the Watch: In fine, I let him part with it, and endeavour'd to do my self Honour from a thing which gave me great Mortification.

I have learnt, finee this little Adventure, that 'tis the Custom, in Spain, when any thing is presented to one, if he likes it, and kisses your Hand, he may take it with him. This is a very pleasant Fashion, and being sufficiently acquainted with it.

'twill be my Fault if I am Trapt again.

I left this Inn, where they peel'd me sufficiently; for this is a grievous dear Country, and every one strives to be Rich at his Neighbour's Cost. A while after we had lest the Town, we entered on the Pyrenean Mountains, which are so high and steep, that looking down you see not without Horror, the Precipices which environ them: we went thus as far as Rensery Don Antonio (which was my Banker's Name) went before me and for my more commodious Paffage, he oblig'd me to quit my Litter; for although we had traverif feveral Mountains, yet there remain'd more difficult to pass: he made me to enter into a little Boat, which he had prepar'd to go down the River of Andaye, till we were near the Mouth of the Sea, where we saw the King of Spain's Gallions; there were three very fine and large ones. Our little Boats were set forth with Gilt Streamers; they were manag'd by Girls, who were very lusty and handsome; there are three in each, two that Row, and one who holds the Rudder.

These Wenches are very well shaped, of Chesnut Complettion, have very good Teeth, Hair Black, which they tie up with Ribbons, in Knots, and so let it hang behind them: They were a kind of Veil on their Heads, made of Musling, emported with Flowers of Gold and Silk, which hangs loose, and overs their Breasts: they wear Pendants in their Ears of seed and Pearls, and Bracelets of Coral; they have a kind of Justine Corps, like our Gypsies, whose Sleeves are very strait: I can assure you they charm'd me. I was told, these Wenches swim like Fishes, and suffer neither Women nor Men among them. This is a kind of a Republick, where they repair from all parts, and where their Parents send them very young.

When they are willing to marry, they go to Mass at Fonturabia, which is the nearest Town to 'em; and there the young Men come to chuse 'em Wives to their Humour. He that will engage himself in Hymen's Bonds, goes to his Mistress's Parents, declares to them his Intentions, regulates every thingwith them; And this being done, notice of it is given to the Maid: If she likes the Party, she retires to their House.

where the Nuptials are celebrated.

I never saw a more gay Air than that on their Countenances; they have little Habitations along the Water-side, and there are old Maidens, to whom the younger pay respect, as to their Mothers. They related these Particulars to us in their Language, and we hearken'd to 'em with great Delight, when the Devil, who never sleeps, disturb'd us with a vexatious Adventure.

My Cook, who is a Gascon, and exactly of the Humour of those of that Country, was in one of our Boats behind us, at some distance, very near a young Biscaneer, who appeared to him very handsome; he contented not himself with telling her as much, but would have rudely turn'd up her Veil. She being not used to this fort of plain Dealing, without any Words broken his Head with her Oar; Having done this Exploit, Fear seizing seizing on her, the threw her self immediately into the Water, tho' the Season was very cold, and swam with great swifteness; but having all her Cloaths on, and it being say to the Shoar, her strength began to sail her. Several of these Wenches who say this at Land, leapt immediately into these Boats to her Assistance, when those who had remain'd in the Boat with the Gook, searing the loss of their Companion, self on him like two Furies, resolving by all means to desire had and had like two or three times to have overtured them. Vessel, which we beholding from ours, had smet a desired to the contract of the contrac

I affure you, the foolish Gascon was so crue he was all over blood; and my Banker told young Biscaneers provoked, are worse than L we came to Land, but were scarcely on Shoar, Wench which was faved out of the Water, wards us, with near fifty others, each with an Shoulder, marching in Battle-ray, with Fife and Dru the who was to be the Mouth of the Company, advance calling me several times Andria, which is to say, (so that's all I could retain of her Speech) gave me to fland. That they would have my Cook's Skin, if Satisf were not made proportionably to the Damage done their C panion's Gloaths. At the ending of which words, the Drummers fell loudy beating their Drums, and the reft their Amazons fet up an Hollowing Leaping and Dancing, and Fencing with their Oars in a most astonishing manner.

Dan Antonio, to make me amends for the Present he had wrung from me, (I cannot but often mention it lying on my Heart as it does) undertook to make Peace: He found that my Cook, who thought himself sufficiently beaten, had Reason to give nothing; and therefore he distributed some Pieces of Money among this Marine Troop: On receipt of which they set forth lowder. Hollow's than before, and wish'd me a good Journey, and speedy Return, each of 'em dancing and singing.

We entred into a very rough Way, and alcending a long very narrow Path, on the fide of which there are Precipices; so that I was greatly afraid lest the Mules which carry'd my Litter should sumble: we afterwards past over a large Study Field. I tarry'd some time in the Convent of St. Provide which stands near the River of Andaye: We past over at a very long Wooden Bridge; and though we were near the Schaffing, yet we could not then perceive it, because a Manual of Sand hid the Town . It's fituated on the Foot of a Mountain, which ferves on one fide as a Rampart against the Sea. and the Veffels come to the Poot of this Mountain, to theker then from the Storms; for here arise extraordinary Tempests. that the Ships at Anchor perish in the Port : it's deep, and defended by two Moles, which leave only as much room as is requilite for one Veffel puffing at a time. They have rais'd here a great four Square Tower, where there is ever a good Garrison to efend the Place, in case of Assault : it was a fine Day for the Lifound the Town very pleasant, being forrounded a couble Wall: there are mounted feveral Pieces of Canon that part towards the Sea, with Bastions and Half ions the Town is fituated in a Province of Spain, called pulcoa; the Out-parts are exceeding pleafant, by reason that Sea, as I now faid, ferves for a Channel to it: the Streets this Town are long and large, pav'd with great White Stones, which are always clean : the Houses are well enough : and the Churches decent, in which the Altars are of Wood. on which are hung little Pictures, from top to bottom. Mines of Iron and Steel abound in this Country, finer and purer perhaps than in any other Parts of Europe; and this is the greatest part of their Trade. Here the Wool which comes from Castille, is embark'd, which makes a considerable part of their Traffick. Bilbo and St. Sebastian are two of the most considerable Ports which the King of Spain has on the Ocean : The Caffle stands very high, and may make an indifferent Defence: here are mounted several fine Pieces of Cannon, and there are a great many along the Ramparts; but the Garrison is fo weak, that the Women might conquer them with their Diffaffs, named eld : 2020 2 system of hoperships (2000 it as 1120)

Every thing is as dear in this Town as in Paris, yet they fare wellhere: Fifth is excellent, and I was told Fruit was the fame, I lay in the best Inn, and when I had been there some time, Don Fardinand de Toledo, sent his Gentlemen to enquire, whether his Visit would not be troublesome to me; My Banker, who knew him, and who was then in my Chamber, told me, he was a Spaniard of great Quality, Nephew to the Duke D' Alva; that he came from Flanders and was going to Madrid.

I receiv'd him with that Civility which was due to his Birth, and foon thereunto adjoyn'd particular Respects to his ownMerrit: He is a Gentleman of good Presence, has Wit and Politeness, is Complaisant and agreeable; he speaks as good French as I do; but understanding Spanish, and being desirous to speak it better, we therefore discours'd only in that Language.

I was very well fatisfied with his Carriage, he told me he came Post hither from Brussels, and if I pleas'd, he would increase my Train, and be one of my Company. I thought he jested, and answered him accordingly; but he added, The ways were so full of Snow, that indeed they could not ride Post; that he could make more speed on Horses than in Litters, but the Honour of accompanying me, made abundant Recompence for that. In a word, I say he was a civil Person and came no way short of the Gallantry natural to the special liers: I therefore consider'd how advantageous traight to have a Man of this Quality, and Country, who could not himself be heard and obey'd by the Honour Souls and no Consciences.

I told him, I was very glad I met with him, and the gue of the Road would be lefs'ned by his Company. He mediately thereupon ordered his Gentleman to find a Litter him: It being late, he took his leave of me, and I betook my felf to cat a good Supper; for My dear Coufin, I am none of those Romantick Ladies that never eat.

Scarcely did I begin to fleep, when I heard fome-body speak French so near me, that I thought at first 'twas in my Chamber; but having hearkned with more attention, I found 'twas a Chamber separated from mine by only some thin Boards, and those ill joynted: I drew my Curtain, and saw Light through the Crevices, and at the same time two young Women, the eldest of which appeared not to be above Seventeen or Eighteen; neither of 'em were of those Beauties without Defect, yet were they so pretty, spake so sweetly, and had such great sweetness on their Countenances, that I was much taken with 'em.

The youngest, who seem'd to continue the Conversation, said to the other, No, my dear Sister, there is no Remedy to our Missortunes; we must die, or get them out of the Clutches of this vilanous Dotard. I am resolute for any thing, reply'd the other, in uttering a deep sigh, shouldit cost me my Life: What remains? Have we not sacrific'd all for them? Then considering a while their Missortunes, they mutually embrac'd, and began to weep in a most piteous manner: And having consulted a while, and spake some other Words, the greatest part of which were interrupted by their Sighs, they concluded on Writing, which they did; and here is most of what I heard them east to one another:

to one another:

Judge not of my Love and Grief by my Words, I have none can express either the one or the other; but remember you frame me unless you betake your felf to she greatest Eutremities against him that persecutes us. He base now sent me word. That if we delay our Departure, he will have us seiz'd. Consider what he deserves from this hase there of as a and remember you owe me all, seeing you owe me all, seeing you owe me me my stears.

I think the other Billet was in these Terms,

Could I seems thee thy Happiness, in losing mine, I love thee sufficiently of the thee such a Sacrifice: Tes, I would sty from Happy without me; but I know thy Heart to be believe that Tet thou remainest as Quiet in thy Primary II were with thee: Break thy Chains without more demains to the Emmy of our Loves. ving made up these Billes, they went outtogether; and I was not a little uncasse for 'em, and no less curious w these poor Ladies Misfortunes. This hindred me from coing, and I was expeding their Return, when immediatere was a great Uproar in the House : I saw an old Man enter the Chamber, attended by a great many Servants : He ed one of these young Women by the Hair of the Head, hich he had wound about his Arm, and drew her after him. na wretched Sacrifice. The poor old Wretch was to afrighted, that he could hard make any Answer: However, he twore more than the Thumb laid a-crofs one of his Fingers, efter the Yet he told them, whatever be had thee, was only in re their Interests; however, he would not it any fort, for the oppose their Inclinations, in reference to this Marriage. the Domefticks took him under the Arm, and rath PT CATE away than led him. Then the Gentlemen feeing themselve free, threw themselves in their Millresses Arms; they faid to one another, whatever Grief, Love and Joy do ultidly infpire in fuch Occasions. But in Troth, one must have a Heart as affefted and content as theirs, to repeat all these things: they only proper to Persons more tender than you are my dear Colin. But I hope you will excuse this Relation; I was so tired, in having not yet slept, that I could scarce hear any more, but confusedly; and to hear no more, I got farther into bed, as hrew the Quilt over my Head.

The next Morning DonFernando de Toledo, sent me some choice Wines, with great quantity of Oranges and Sweetmeats. As soon is he thought it a proper time to Visit me, he came: Having hankt him for his Present, Task'd him, Whether he had head nothing of what had past in the Night? He told me, No, so he had lain in another part of the House. I was about relating to him what I knew, when our Hoffels entred into the Chamber: the came from the Two Gentlemen who had given me that Diffurbance, with the Swords in their Hands, intreating me to receive their Excules. She likewife told me, that two young Ladies defired they might wait on me, and kils my Handanswer'd these Givilities as I ought; and they soon entred

What charming effects does the Return of Joy produce? I found these Gentlemen very well shaped, and these Ladies very levely; neither one nor the other had any more on their Countenances the Characters of Delpair; an Air of Gaiety display'd it felf in all their words and geftures. The Eldest of the two Brethren made the most handsome Excuse as is possible for his Mistake in entring my Chamber : he added, " He had well observ'd the Fear he had caus'd me; but s told me, that in that Moment he was fo transported, that he was capable of no other Thought but the Rescuing his " Miftress. You would have been to blame, said I to him, should you have thought of any thing elle : However, if it be true, you are willing to make me Satisfaction for the Alarum you have giv'n me, you must not refuse the gratifying my Curiosity: With these fair Ladies leave, inform we what has reduced all of you to these Extremities you were in. He lookt on them, as if it were ask their Approbation, which they willingly granted; and h thus began : We are two Brothers, Madam, Natives of Burgo. and of one of the best Families of this City. We were very young when we fell into the Hands of an Uncle, who took care of on Education, and Estates, which are so considerable, that we nee not envy others on that account; Don Diego (is our Uncles Name) he had made long fince a firm Friendship with a Gentle man living near Blave, a bole Merit is far above his Fortune; is call'd Monfieur de Mellignac : Our Uncle refolving to fend for some time into France, he wrote bereupon to his Friend, wh offered him his House, which he joyfully accepted. He made fet out, and it is a Tear fince we were received there with great Civility; Madam de Meffignac ufed us as ber own Children; has several, but of her four Daughters, those you see are the mo amiable. It would have been very difficult to have feen them ev ry day, to dwell with them, and yet not to have loved them.

My Brother at first conceal d from me his growing Passion, a I bid mine from him; we were both of us very melancholly; brouble of loving, without being lov'd again, and the fear of pleasing those who caus'd our Passion, all this cruelty tormen us; but a new Vexation did greatly increase our Disquiet; who was a restless Jealouse we had one of another: My Broth plainly saw I was in Love, and thought 'twee with his Mistress' I lookt on him likewise as my Rival; and we here such Hatress one another, as might have transported us to the greatest Eastermities; but that I resolutely determin'd one day to discover me Sentiments to Mademoiselle de Messignac; but wanting Caurage to speak to her my self, I wrote some Verses in a little Book touching my Passon for her, and dextrously slid it into her Pocket without her perceiving me. My Brother who had always an Eye on me observed it, and playing with her, he took out the Verses, and found them to contain a respectful and passonate Declaration of Love to her: he kept them till Night, when being withdrawn into my Chamber, with the greatest Inquietude, he came to me and tenderly embracing me, he told me, he was heartily glad at the notice he had of my being in love with Mademoiselle de Messignac.

I remain'd as one Thunderstruck; I sawmy Papers in his Hands; I imagin'd she had made them a Sacrifice to him, and that he came to insult on my Missortume. He saw in my Eyes and Countenance part of what I thought: Undeceive your self, continued he, she gave em not to me; I have taken 'em without her seeing them: I'll be serviceable to you for the obtaining her; he you the same to me in relation to her elder Sister. I then embraced him, and promis'd him all he desired. Thus we mutually rendred tood Offices to one another; and our Missresses, who were not then equainted with the power of Love, began to accustom themselves.

It would be to abuse your Patience, to tell you, Madam, how we came at length by our Cares and Assiduities to win their Hearts. That happy Moments! what sweet Hours! to see without ceasing what one loves, and to be beloved! to be together in the Fields, where an Innocent and Country life, let's one taste, without disturbance, the Pleasures of a growing Passion; this is a Felicity which annot be exprest.

Winter being come, Madam de Messignac was at Bourdeaux, where she had a House; we accompanied her thither; but this House was not great enough to lodge us, with all our Family; we ook one near hers.

Though this Separation was only the Nights, yet we had lively referements of it; we were not now every Moment with 'em; our lifts were accompanied with a certain Air of Ceremonies, which lifting b'd us. But our Alarums were much increas d when we faw no rich handsome Sparks address themselves to Mademolelles de lessingere, and earnestly Court them, and that with the Apprehation of their Parents. Good God, how we look d! Their Proceedings sent on at a great rate, and our dear Mistresses, who shared in our Sorrow, thingled every day their Tears with vars. In finishaving throughly tormended our felves, by devising a thinfand fraitlescays, I rejoived to Address, my felf to Montheur de Mellignac: I spake to him, and told him what my Pussion impired me to persuade him to defer these Marriages. He unsweed, He accepted, with the greatest Acknowledgments, the Offers my Brother and I made him; but being not of Age, what we might do at present might be afterwards Cancel'd: That his Honour was dear to him, though his Estate was small; however, should always esteem himself Happy, in living without Reproach. That my Uncle, who had entrusted us to him, might justly acouse him of Seducing us; and that in short, we must to

I withdrew in the greatest Affliction, which I shared with my Brother; and this was a dreadful trouble among us. Montieur de Mesfignao, to compleat our missortuhes, sent an Account to wi Uncle of what had paff, and earnestly intreated bim to tay his Commands on its to be gone. He did for and feeing no remedy to an Mi fortunes, we went, my Brother and I, to Mademoifelles de Messignac, we threw our selves at their Feet : We told them what might perswade Heart's already pre-posses we gave then our Faith and Pramifes, Sign'd withour Blood : In fort Loveman an end of sungailhing them; they conferted to go wirbus. In fine took such Mensures, that our Passage was happy enough till Arrival here; and it is not two days fince entring this House, the fuft Perlin offering himself tous was Don Diego; He was impatient of our Return; and to fatisfie himself, be came in quest of m How did we look at this fight! Hecaus'd us to be apprehended Criminals; and forgetting that Mademoifelles de Meffignac were the Daughter's of his best Friend, and Persons of Quality, & leaded them with Injuries, and over-whelm'd them with Threat nings, after he had learnt from one of my Servants, that w bud refoludto pals incognito in far in Madrid, to some Relation we had there, to tarry in this place for a full liberty of declaring our Marriage. He lock't us up in a Chamber next to bis : and w were there, when these Ladies came by Moon-light, coughing w der our Windows. We heard them, and run to them They them m their Liebters; and we were devising on our Deliverance, who my Uncle, being notice of what past, friently came upon in w all his Servants, and before our Faces misused these umiable On tures. The Gentleman here flopt, and I found he had rela

Some Ladies of the Town, who came to fee me, would from me ; they proposed to me to go to the Religious, whose Convent is so pleasantly situated, that the Prospect has no Bounds: You may see thence, at the same time, the Sea, Ships, To Woods and Fields. They spake much in praise of the Voices. Beauty, and good Humour of these Religioses. Add to the that the ill Weather was so increast, and the Snow fal'n in so great abundance, that no body advised me to proceed in my Journey. I was in suspence a while, but the Impatience I had to he at Madrid, prevail'd over all these Considerations, and I parted the next Morning. I have received of my Banker the Money I want.

But I must not forget to tell you, that the Inhabitants of this Town have a particular Priviledge, and of which they are not a little proud; which is, That when they Treat of an Affairs with the King of Spain, and that it is directly wif him, he is oblig'd to speak with them bare-headed. I could not get the Reason from 'em for this.

I am told I must furnish my self with good store of Provision, to prevent starving in some places through which we must pals; and Gammon of Bacon, dried Tongues, be much esteem'd in this Country, I have therefore taken a good quantity; and as to the rest, we have sufficiently provided. Now this being the Post day, I would not omit this occasion of informing you of what has hapned to me; and teftifying that I am,

LETTER H.

Re-affume, Dear Coufin, without any Compliments, I Sequel of my Travels: In leaving St. Sebastian, we c into a very rough Way, which brings you to fuch to ing; they are call'd Sierra de St. Adrian. Precipices and Rocks, on which a puli with certain Death, if he has a mind to it. Pie extraordinary heighth crown the top of these Mountains. As far as the Sight will reach you see nothing but Desarts, cut with Streams clearer than Crystal. Near the highest part of Mount St. Adrian, you meet with an elevated Rock, which seems to have been placed in the midst of the way to Block up the Passage, and thus separate Biscaye from the Old Castille.

A tedious and painful Labour has pierced this mass of Stone in manner of a Vault; you may walk forty or fifty Paces under it, without fight of Day, but what comes by the Overtures at each Entry, which are flut by great Doors : You find under this Vault an Inn, which is left in the Winter, by Reafon of the Snows: You see here likewise a little Chapel of St. Adrian, and feveral Caverns, where Thieves commonly retreat; fo that it is dangerous paffing here without being in a condition of Defence. When we had traverst the Rock, we still a little ascended, to arrive to the top of the Mountain, which is held to be the highest of the Pyranea's; it is wholly covered with great Ash Trees. There was never a finer place of Solitude; the Springs run here as in the Vallies: the fight is only bounded by the Weakness of the Eves: Shades and Silence here reign, and the Eccho's anfwers on every fide. We began afterwards to descend down faster than we climed up : We saw in some parts little barren Plains, many fandy places, and ever and anon Mountains covered with great Rocks. It is not without Reason, that in paffing so near, you fear, lest some one of 'em should get loofe, which would certainly over-whelm one; for you see some which are fall'n from the top, and hang in their passage on other Clefts; and these finding nothing in the way, would give a forry Diversion to a Traveller. I made all these Reflexions at my ease; for I was alone in my Litter, with my Child, who did not at all disturb my Thoughts. A River call'd Vrrole, big enough, but which was increased by the Torrents, and melted Snow flides along the Way, and breaks forth into particular Streams in some places, which fall with a great impetuofity and noise, and make a very pleasant found and fight.

We meet not here with those fine Casiles to be seen on the Banks of the Loire, which make Travellers call it the Country of Faries. Here are on these Mountains only some Shepherds Cottages, and some sew Hovels, and at that distance, that you must go a great way before you can find them; yet all these Natural Objects, though very melancholly ones, yet have something that is very taking in them. The Snows were so high, that we had always swenty Men, who made way for us

r us vith with Shovels. You will perhaps imagine this cost me very much; but here are so well establish Orders, and those so well observed, that the inhabitants of a village are obliged to meets travellers, and be their Guides to the next; and no one being bound to give them any thing, the least Liberality therefore satisfies them. To this first Care there is added another, which is that of Ringing the Bells without-ceasing, to give notice to Travellers, where they may retreat in stormy weather. They told me, there had not fall no this forty Years so much Snow as we met with, there having been no Frost for a great while in this Province.

Our Troop was fo great, that we might count our felves no ways inferiour to those F-mous Caravans which go to Mecha; for without reckoning my Train, and that of Don Farnand de Toledo, there joyn'd with us near St. Sabaltian, three Knights, with their Attendants, who return's from their Commanderthips of S. James; there were two of this Order, and one of that of Alcantara: The first wear Red Crosses, in form of an embroidered Sword, on their Shoulders; and he of Alcantara had a Green one. One of the two first is of Andalousia, the other of Galicia, and the third of Catalonia; they are of good Families; he of Andalousia calls himself Donesteve de Carvatal he of Galicia, Don Sancho Sanniento, and the other of Cata lonia, Don Frederic de Cardonne; they are Persons of good Meine, and well acquainted with the World. I receiv'd all poltible Civilities from them, having much of the French Humour in them. They have travelled over the greatest Part of Europe; and this has rendred them to Polite. We went to lye at Salareta; this is a Borough a little distant from Mount Adrian, fituated in the little Province of Spain, I now mention'd, na med Alava, which makes a Part of Bifesiye, we had there but bad Entertainment. They reckon it eleven Leagues from thence to St. Sebastian.

We had better way from Galareta to Villoria than we had before: The Country here yields much Corn and Grapes; and the Villages lie very thick together: We found here Custom-House-Men, who made us pay both for the Cloaths and Money we carried with us: they were not very exacting with us, because our Company was too large to be imposed on. Don Farnand de Toledo had inform'd me over Night, that we were to travel near the Castle of Quebare, which was said to be imposed with a Spirit, telling me a thousand extravagant Stores, which were readily swallow'd by the Innabitants of the Country, and which were so effectually believ'd by them, that no body would live there. I had a great defire to fee this place; for although I am naturally as fearful as another, yet am not afraid of Gholls; and if I were, our Company was fo numerous, as would animate the greatest Coward: we struck off a little to the left, and came to the Borough of Quebara; the Mafter of the Inn where we entred, had the Keys of the Cafile; he told us, in going along with us, That the Duende, which is to fav the Spirit, could not endure Company; yet if we were a thouland together, he would, if he were minded, beat us all, in such a manner, as to leave us for dead. I began to tremble : Don Fernand de Toledo, and Den Fredric de Cordonne, who gave me their Hands, perceiving my Fear, burst out into Laughter : I grew alham'd, and pretended to gain Courage; and fo we entred the Caftle, which might have past for a fine one, had it been kept in order; it had no Furniture, except an old Tapiftry Hanging in a great Hall, which represented the Amours of Den Pedro the Cruel, and Donna Maria de Padilla: she is represented fitting like a Queen in the midft of other Ladies, and the King placing on her Head a Crown of Flowers: In another part the late under the shade of a Wood, the King shewing her a Hawk on his Fift: And again, in another, the appears in a Warrier's Drefs. and the King in Armour presents her with a Sword: which makes me believe that she had been in some Warlike Expedition with him. She was very ill represented; and Don Fernan told me. ' He had feen her Effigies elsewhere, by which she appeared to be the most beautiful and most cruel Woman of her time; and that the Figures in this Tapistry refembled neither her nor the King: his Name, Cipher and Arms were every-where on it. We went up into a Tower, on the top of. which was a Dungeon, and 'twas there where the Spirit inhabited; but without doubt he was abroad, for we neither faw nor heard him, or any of his Companions; and having feen fufficiently this great Building, we left it to purfue our Journey. In approaching Villoria, we past over a most delightful Plain. at the end of which flands a Town fituated in this Province of Spain, I lately mention'd, call'd Alawa; this is the Capital Town of it, as well as the first of Castille: It is inclosed with two Walls, one of which is old, and the other new; befides this, it has no other Fortifications. After I had refresh'd my felf a while here, 'twas proposed to me to go to a Play; but is carrying till it began, I had no small Divertion, in seeing come into the most spacious place of the Town, four Companies of young Men, preceded by Drums and Trumpets: they marched fereral times round, and in fine, immediately began the Figh with Snow-balls, which they threw on one another with factorizations, that they were all very well pelted in the end; they were above two hundred who fought this Battle. To tell you of those who fell, or recovered their Feet again, and the Shouth and Acclamations of the People, will be needless; and I was obliged to leave them thus engaged, to go to the place where

When I entred into the Room, the People fet forth an hollowing, Mira, mira. which is to fav, look, Look! The Decoration of the Theatre was not over Magnificent; it was rais'd on Barrels, and ill-rang'd Plancks; the Windows of the Room were open, for they used no Gandles or Flambeaux; whence you may eafily imagine this much takes away from the Beauty of the Sight. They acted the Life of St. Antbony; and the Players faid any thing which pleas'd the Company, all the People cried out, Vistoria, Vistoria; I was informed this was the Custom of the Country. I observ'd the Devil was no other ways clad, than the reft, having only a pair of Stokins of a Flame-colour, and a pair of Horns to diftinguish him. This Comedy confifted only of three Acts, and they are all no more at the end of each ferious Act, another began of Farce at Pleasantry, wherein appear'd him they called El Graciofo, which is to fay, the Buffoon, who, among much inlipid Stuff, fave fometimes fomething that is less nauseous: The interludes were mixt with Dances, to the found of the Harps and Guitars: The Actors had Caftagnets, and a little Hat on their Heads. without which they never Dance, and then 'tis a Saraband ; they feem not to walk, they flip along to lightly. Their manner is wholly different from ours: they move too much their Arms, and often pais their Hands on their Hats and Face, and that with no ill Grace; they play admirably well on the Castagnets.

As to the rest, (Dear Cosin) I would not have you think these Actors, for being in a little City, do much differ from those of Madrid. I was told, that those of the King are a little better; but, in a word, both act what they call Las Comedias Famojas, which is to say, The finest and most famous Comedies; which in truth are very ridiculous: For Example, when St Anthony said his Consiteor, which he did often enough, all the Spectators sell down on their Knees, and gave themselves such rude Mea Culpa's, as was enough to beat the breath out of their Bodies.

Here would be a proper place to speak of their Habits, but you had better excuse me till I come to Madrid, lest I tire you with Repetitions: Yet I must tell you, that all the Ladies I

fay in this company, had a prodigious quantity of Red which begins just under the Eye, and passes from the Chin to the Ears, and Shoulders, to their very Hands; so that I never saw any Radishes of a finer Colour.

The Lady Governess of the Town drew near to me; the just toucht my Cloaths, and hastily drew back her Hand, as if she had burnt her Fingers. I bid her in Spanish not to be asraid: She at length samiliarized her self, and told me, 'Twas not through sear of any thing else but of displeasing me: that 'twas no new thing to her to see French Ladies: and that if she might, she would gladly dress her self after their sashion. She ordered Chocolate to be brought her, with which she presented me; which is far better here than in France. The Play being ended, I took my Leave of her, having thanked her for her Civilities.

The next Morning, as I entred the Church to hear Mass I espied an Hermit, who had the Air of a Person of Quality, and yet begg'd an Alms of me, with such great Humility, that I was greatly surprized at it: Don Fernand having notice of it, drew near, and faid to me, The Person whom you behold, Madam, is of an illustrious Family, and of great Merit, but his Fortune very Unhappy.

You raife in me, faid I to him, a great Curiofity to know more; and therefore I must beg your Favour to satisfie it. You may command any thing of me, replied he, Madam; but I am not fo throughly inform'd of his Adventures, to undertake the relating them to you; and I believe 'twere better I eneage him into a Recital of them him/elf. He left me, and went immediately to embrace him, with the greatest Civilities and Tenderness: Don Frederic de Cardonne, and Don Esteve de Carvajal, had already accosted him, as their old Acquaintance; and when Don Fernand had abyn'd them, they all earnestly intreated him to come with them when Mass was over. He as earnestly excused himself; but being told. I was a Stranger and much importuned, that I might learn from himself, what had oblig'd him to turn Hermit; he at length confented, on condition I would permit him to bring one of his Friends, who was perfectly knowing in what related to him: Do us Justice, continued he, and judge whether 'tis fit for me torelate such Particularities in this Habit I wear. They found he had reason, and pray'd him to bring his Friend which he did a while after I was at my Lodgings: He prefente a very fine Cavalier to me; and taking leave of us very civil he told him, ' He should be oblig'd to him, if he would ! s tisfie, the Curiofity which Don Fernand De Toledo had give me, of knowing the Spring of his Misfortunes. This Go f tleman took place by me, and began in these Terms:

I think my self very Happy, Madam, that my friend has chosen me to satisfie the Desire you have of knowing his Adventures; but I sear I shall not acquit my self so well as I would: The Person whose History you would learn, has been one of the finest Gentlemen in the World; it would be hard to make a Judgment of him now; he is buried, as it were in his Hermit's Habit. He was an exceeding graceful Person, well shaped, of an excellent Meine, and Noble Air: And in fine, had all the Accomplishments, both Natural and Acquired, of a Person of Quality, being liberal, witty and brave. He was born at Cagliari, Capital of the Isle of Sardagne, one of the most illustrious and richest Families of all that Country.

He was brought up with one of his Cosin Germans; and the sumpathy which was found in their Humours, and Inclinations, was so great, that they were more strictly united by Friendship than Blood: they hid no Secret from each other. And when the Marquis Barbaran was married (which was his Cosin's Name,) their

He married one of the finest women in the World, and the most Accomplisht; the was then not above Fourteen: She was Heirels to a very Noble Estate and Family. The Marques every day difcovered new Charms in the Wit and Person of his Wife, which like wife increased every day his Passion. He speaks without ceasing of his Happiness, to Don Lewis de Barbaron; which is the Name. Madam, of my Friend; and when any Affairs oblig'd the Marquels to leave her, he conjured him to stay with the Marchieness. thereby to lessen the Trouble of his absence. But alas! bow bard is it when one is at an Age uncapable of levious Reflections, to fee continually fo fair a Woman, fo young and aimable; and to fee ber with Indifference! Don Lewis was already desperately in Love with the Marchioness, and thought then 'twas only for her Husband's fake: Whill he was in this Mistake, she fell dangerously fick; at which he grew to dreadful melarcholly, that he then knew but too late, this was caused by a Passion which would prove the greatest Misfortunes of his whole Life. Finding himself then in this condition, and having not strength to resist it, he resolved to use the utmost Extremity, and to fly and avoid a place where be was in danger of dying with Love, or breaking through the Bonds of Friendship. The most cruel Death would have seemed gentler than the Execution of this Design: When the Marchioness beginning to grow better, he went to her to bid her Adieu, and fee her no more.

He found ber busied in choosing among several Stones of great Price, those which were the finest, which she intended to have set in a Ring, Don Lewis was scarce entred the Chamber, but be desired him, with that Air of Familiarity usual among Relations, to so and fetch her other Stones which the moreover had in her Cabinet. He ran thither, and by an unexpected good bap, found armen what he looks for, the Pillure enamill'd of the Marchionels. in little, let with Diamonds, and introled with a Lock of ber Hair ; it was to like, that he had not the power to withfland the defire he had of flealing it : I am going to leave her, faid be, I shall fee her no more; I facrifice all my quiet to her Husband Alas! is not this enough? And may I not without a Crime. fearch in my Pain a Consolation so innocent as this. He kift leveral times this Picture; he put it under his Arm, he carefully hid it; and returning towards her with thefe Stones, he trembling. told her the Resolution he had taken of Travelling, 'She appear'd much amazed at it, and chang'd her colour. He looks on her at this moment : he had the pleasure of perceiving it : and their Eyes being of Intelligence, spake more than their Words: Alas! What ean oblige you, Don Lewis, Said the to him, to leave us? Your Cofin loves you fo tenderly: I effeem you; we are never pleas'd without you; he cannot live from you: Have you not already travelled? You have without doubt some other Reason for your Denarture, but at least do not hide it from me. Don Lewis. sierc'd through with forrow, could not forbear uttering a deep Sigh. and taking one of the delicate Hands of the Charming Person, on which he fixt his Mouth, Ah Madam, what do you ask me? faid he to her. What can I fay to you? And indeed, What can I fay to you, in the Condition I amin? The Violence he used, to conceal bis Sentiments, caus'd him such a great Weakness, that he fell half dead at her Feet. She remained troubled and confused at this sight: She oblig'd him to fit down by her; the dared not lift up her Eyes to look on him; but the let him fee Tears, which the could not for hear Bedding, nor relobue to conceal from bim.

Scarcely were they come to themselves, when the Marquess entred into the Chamber. He came to embrace Don Lewis with all the Tastimonies of a perfect Friendship, and he was in the greatest trouble, when he understood he parted for Naples. He omitted marguments to perswade him from it, prest his stay with the greatest Earnestiness, but all in vain. He there immediately took his leave of the Marchioness, and saw her no more. The Marquest went out with him, he list him not till the moment of his Departure. This was an Augmentation of Don Lewis's Sorrow; he would have willingly remained alone to have an intire Liberty

The Marchioness was sensibly afflicted at this Separation:

had bereined he loved ber, before he had known thus much himse and the had found in him such singular Merit, that for her too (he had loved him without knowing it; but the found this to be Cost after his Departure : Recovering but lately from a dangero Sickness, of which she was not perfectly cured, this unhappy Accident made her fall into a languishing Indisposition, as foon rendre her quite another body; her Duty, her Reafon, her Vertue equally persecuted her: She was greatly sensible of her Husband's Respects to her, and the could not suffer but with great Sorrow, that a ther (bould take up ber thoughts, and have fo great a place in bei Affections. She daved not any more mention the Name of Box Lewis; the never made and Inquiries after him; the made it as indiffentable Duty to forget him : This Violence which fee ujed to her self, was like a continual Martyrdom; she made one of ber Women, in whom the mast consided, the Repository of this Secret: Am I not very anhappy? faid fie, I must with never again to fee a Man, towards whom it is impossible for me to be in a frate of Indifference; his Person is always before mine Eyes; nav I think fometimes I see him in the Person of my Husband; the Resemblance which is between them, serves only to nourish my Affection towards him. Alas! Mariana, I must die, to expu ate this Crime, although it be an involuntary one : I have only this means to get rid of a Paffion of which I cannot hitherto be Mistres: Alas, what have I not done to stifle it, this Paffion which yet is dear to me. She accompany'd these Words with a thousand Sighs : She melted into Tears, and though this Woman had a great deal of Wit and Affection to her Mistress, yes the could fay nothing to her, could yield her any Comfort.

The Marquels in the mean time, every day reproache his Well with her Indifferency to Don Lewis: I cannot luffer, said he to her, that you should think so little on the Man I love above all the World, and who had so much Complainance and Friendship for you : I must needs say, this is a kind of Hardness, which would make one judge untowardly of the Tendernels of your Heart : At least, you must grant, Madam, that he was scarcely gone, but you forgot him. What good would my romembring him do him? faid the Marchioness with a languishing Air, Do not you fee he avoids os? Would he not have been still with us, if he had any real Kindness for us? Believe me, my Lord, he deserves a little that we should forsake him in our turn. Whatever she could say, repel'd not the Marquess; be still importun'd ber to write to Don Dewis to Return. One Day among the rest, she was gotten into his Closet to speak to him about some Affairs, the found him busted in reading a Letter of Don Lewis which he lately receiv'd.

She would have retir'd; but he took this opportunity to obline her to do what he would have her; he told her very seriously, That he could no longer bear the Absence of his Cosin; that he was resolved to go find him ; that 'twas already two Years since he had been gone, without intimating any defire of returning to his Friends and Country; that he was perswaded he would yield a greater Deference to her Requests than his; that he conjured her to write to him: And that in fine, the might chuse either to give him this Satisfaction, or be content to fee him part for Naples, where Don Lewis was to make some stay. She remain'd surprized, and perplext at this Proposal; but knowing be expelled with great Impatience her Determination, What would you have me fay to him, my Lord? faid fbe to him with a forrowful Countenance, Dictate this Letter to me, I will write it I can do no more; and I believe this is more than I ought. The Marquess, transported with Joy, most affectionately embrac'd ber; he thank'd her for her Compliance and made her write thefe Words:

I F you have any Kindness for us, defer not your Return; I have very urgent Reasons to desire it. I am not a little concern'd that you shew such Indisserence towards us, which is an unquestionable Indication that you take no Delight in our Company. Return, Don Lewis, I earnestly wish it; I intreat you: And if it were sit for me to use more urgent Terms, I would say perhaps, I command you to do it.

The Marquess made a single Pacquet of this fatal Letter, to the end Don Lewis might not think 'twas by his Order the Marchioness bad wrote it; and having sent it to the Currier, be expetted the Success with extraordinary Impatience. What became of this Lover at the fight of so dear and unexpected an Order ! Although he had remarkt Dispositions of Tenderness in the Countenance of this fair Person, yet he dared not promise himself she could defire his return; his Reason revolted against his Toy : How Unhappy a Wretch I am? faid he, I Adore the most Amiable of all Women, and yet I dare not offer to please her ? The has a Kindness for me, yet Honour and Friendship with hold me from making the least Advantage of it. What shall I do then, O Heavens! What shall I do! I flatter'd my felf, that Absence would cure me : Alas! this is a Remedy which I have fruitlefly tried; I have never cast mine Eyes on her Picture, but have found my felf more in Love, and more Miserable than when I faw her every day. I must obey her, she commands Return; the defires to fee me, and the cannot be ignorant my Paffion: When I took my Leave of her, my Eyes det red to her the Secret of my Heart: And when I call to mind what I saw in hers, all my Reflections then are to no purpose; for I resolve rather to die at her Feet, than to live remote from her.

He parted without any delay, and without taking leave of his Friends. He left a Gentleman to Excuse him towards them, and to order his Affairs. He was in such great haste to see the Marchioness, that he used such Diligence to be with her, that no hody but he could have done: arriving at Cagliary, Capital of Sardagne, he understood that the Marquess and his Wife were at a stately Country-house, where the Vice-Roy was gone to give them a Visit, with all his Court. He learnt moreover, that the Marquess de Barbaran prepared for him a great Feast, where there were to be held Justs or Turnaments after the Ancient Manner of the Mores: He was the Defendant, and was to maintain, That a Husband beloved, is Happier than a Lover.

Several Gentlemen that were not of this Opinion, were preparing themselves to go and dispute the Prize, which the Marchioness, at the Vice Queen's Intreaty, was to give to the Conquerour; Twas a Scarf embroidered with her own Hands, wrought with Cyphers: No one was to appear but, maskt and disguised, to the end all might be freer and more gallant.

Don Lewis had a fecret Despight, in comprehending the Marquess so well satisfied: He is belov'd, said he, I cannot but look on him as my Rival, and as an Happy Rival; but we must endeavour to disturb his Happiness, in triumphing over his vain Glory. Having formed this Design, he would not appear in Town; he caused to be made a Suit of strip'd Green Satin, embroidered with Gold, and all his Liveries were of the same Colour, to denote his new hopes.

When he entred into the Lists, every body had their Eyes on him; his Magnificence and his Air gave Emulation to the Cavaliers, and great Curiosities to the Ladies. The Marchioness felt a secret Emotion, of which she could not discover the Cause: He was placed very near the Belcony, where she sate with the Vice-Queen; but there was no Lady there which did not lose all her Lustre near that of the Marchioness; her youthful Air, which exceeded not eighteeen Tears, her lovely white and red Cheeks, her Eyes so sweet and graceful, her Scarlet and little Mouth, agreeable Smile, and her Shape, which surpass the Fairest, made her the Admiration of all the World.

Don Lewis was so ravished in seeing her so charming, and to observe yet in her Countenance a languishing sorrowful Air, that he flattered himself to have therein a part; and this was the first Moment wherein he thought himself Happy. When his turn came, be ran against the Marquess, and smote him so dexterously, that he got the Advantage all along of him: so that in a word, he gain'd the Prize with a general Applause, and with every one's good liking. He threw himself at the Marchimess's Feet, to receive it at her Hands; he altered the Tone of his Voice, and speaking to her with his Mask on, low enough not to be heard but only his her: Divine Person, said he to her, he pleas'd to observe what Fortune decides in favour of Lovers: He dar'd not to say more to her; and without knowing him, she gave him the Prize, with this natural Grace with which all her Actions were accompanied.

He suddenly withdrew himself, for fear of being known; for this might have been an occasion of Quarrel between the Marquess and him; and without doubt he would not have easily pardon'd the Victory he obtain'd over him. This oblig'd him to keep himself still conceal'd for some Days. The Vice-Roy and his Lady return'd to Cagliary, and the Marquess and Marchioness accompanied them thither, with the whole Court.

Don Lewis then shew'd himself; he pretended he just then arriv'd, and made as if he knew not what had past in the Field. The Marquess de Barbaran was transported with Joy in seeing him; and Abscence bad not at all altered the Affection, he had for this dear Relation. He had no difficult task to find a favourable moment wherein to entertain his amiable Marchioness; be ba as much liberty in their Lodgings as in his own; and you may well judge, Madam, that he forgot not to mention the Prize be had receiv'd from her fair Hands: How wretched am I, faid be to Her, that you did not know me ? Alas, Madam, I flattered my felf, that by fome fecret Pre-fentiments you would learn that no one but I could fusiain with such Passion the Cause of Lovers against Husbands. No my Lord, said she to him, with an Angry and Disdainful Air, to take away all Hope from him, I could never have imagin'd that you could have been Patron of so foul a Cause; and I could not have believed you could have taken such strong Engagements at Naples, that you should come as far as Sardagne to Triumph over a Friend who maintain'd my Interests as well as his own. I shall die with Regret, Madam, Said Don Lewis, if I have displeas'd you in what I have done; and were you more favourably disposed, and I might dare to make you my Confident, it would be hard marter for me to perswade you, that it is not at Nove I have left the Object of my Vows.

When he had left ber, he began to blame himself for his Pearfulness: Shall I, said be, always suffer without seeking any Remedy! It was some time before be could meet with a favoura occasion, because the Marchioness studiously avoided him that being come one Night where she was, he found her alone in an inward Room, lying on a hed in a most lovely manner, and most becoming Undress, her Hair being fastned with Knots of Diamonds, hu carelesty about her Breasts: The Trouble she felt in seeing Dos Lewis, appear'd on her Countenance, and rendred her yet mo lovely: He drew near her with an Awful and respectful Air, fel down on his Knees by her; he lookt on her for some time, not daring to speak; but becoming a little more bold, If you consider, Madam, aid he to her, the pitious Condition whereunto you have reduced me, you will eafily comprehend that it is no longer in my power to keep Silence : I could not avoid fuch inevitable Stroaks as you have given me; I have adored you as foon as I law you : I have endeavour d to Cure my felf in flying from you; I have offered the greatest Violence to my self, in en-deavouring to master my Passion. You have recalled me, Madam from my Voluntary Exile, and I die a thouland imes a Day, uncertain of my Destiny : If you be cruel enough to refule me your Pity, suffer at least, that having made known to you my Pallion, I may die with Grief at Your Feet. The Marchioness was some time without resolving to answer him; but at length, gaining assurance, I acknowledge, said she Don Lewis, that I am not wholly ignorant of one part of your Sentiments, but I was willing to perfwade my felf twas the Effects of an Innocent affection: Make me not a Partner of your Crime; you commit one, when you betray the Friendhip due to my Husband: But, alas, you will pay but too dearly for this; for I know that Duty forbids you to Love me: and in respect, it does not only forbid me to love you, but to ly from you: I will do it, Don Lewis, I will avoid you; and do not know, whether I ought not to Hate you; But, alas, t feens impossible to me to do it. What do you then, Malam, answer'd he, interrupting ber, being full of Grief and Despair when you pronounce the Sentence of my Death? You cannot late me fay you : Do you not hate me, and do you not do ne all the Milchief you are able, when you resolve to avoid me? Make an end, Madam, make an end, leave not your Vengeance ance imperfect; sacrifice me to your Duty, and your Husband; for my Life cannot but be odious, if you take from me the Hopes of pleafing you. She looks on him at this instant with Eyes full of languishing: Don Lewis, said she to him, you reproach me with what I would deserve. In ending these words, she arose, searing greatly, lest her Affection should triumph over her Reason; and notwithstanding his endeavours to with-hold her, she past into a Chamber where her Women were.

She thought she had gained much on her self in forcing her was out of this Conversation, without answering so favourably as her Heart could have wisht; but Love is a Seducer, which must not be in any sort hearkned to, if one will not be totally overcome be him. From that day Don Lewis began to think himself Happy, though he wanted many things to compleat his Felicity. The Marchionels, in effect, had a Principle of Virtue, which opposed it felf always with Success to the desires of her Lover.

He had no longer those Scruples of Friendship for the Marquess de Barbaran which had so greatly disturbed his Mind; Love had perfectly banisht. Friendship; nay, he even secretly hated him.

In fine, Don Lewis, flattering himself, that perhaps he might fine a favourable moment to affect the Marchiones's Heart with some Pity; he carefully sought it; and to find it, one day when twas very bot, knowing that the Marchiones's was wont to retire to Repose her self after Dinner, as it is customary, in that Country, he came to ber, doubting not but every body was afleep in the House.

She was in a Ground-Room which lookt into the Garden; all was fast and sout close, save a little Window, whereby he saw on her Bed this Charming Creature: She was in a profound Sleep, half un dreft: he had the time to discover such Beauties as still augmented the force of his Passion. He approacht so softly to ber, that she did not awake: It was already some moments that he had looks on her with all the Transports of a Man amazed, when seeing ber naked Breaks, he could not forbear kiffing them. She arose on a sudden ; the bad not her Eyes open ; the Chamber was dark, and the could never have believ'd Don Lewis could have been fo bold I have already told you, Madam, that be resembled the Marquel De Barbaran; She did not doubt then but it was he, and calli him several times, her dear Marquess and Husband, she tender embrac'd him. He well knew his Error; whatever Pleasure procured him, he could have wished to have ow'd this only to Mistres's Favours. But, O Heavens, bow unfortunately it b ned! The Marquess came in this dangerous moment: twas not without the greatest fury he saw the Liberty Lewis took with his Wife. At the noise he had made in ent she had turn'd her Eyes toward the Door, and seeing her Husband enter, whom she thought she had already in her Arms, it is impossible to represent her Affliction and Astonishment.

Don Lewis amaz'd at this Accident, flatter dhimfelf, that perhaps he was not known: He past immediately into the Gastery, and finding a Window was opened into the Garden, he threw himself out of it, and immediately past through a Back-door. The Marquess pursued him, without being able to overtake him: In returning the same way he came, be unhappily found the Marchioness. Picture, which Don Lewis had dropt as he ran; he immediately made most cruel Resections hereupon: This Picture of his Wife. which Don Lewis had let fall, and the fight of her embracing him, all this made him no longer doubt of his Wives Fallkood : Iam betray'd Cry'd he, by her whom I loved dearer than my own Life: Was there ever a more Unhappy Man in the World? In ending these Words, he returned to his Wives Chamber. She immediately threw her self at his Feet, and melting into Tears would have justify'd ber self, and made known to him ber Imocency; but the Spirit of Jenlousie had so fully possest him, that he violently represt ker : He barkned only to the Transports of bis Rage and Despair, and turning away his Eyes, that he might not see so lovely an Object, he had the Barbarity to firike his Dagger into the Breast of the most Beautiful and most Vertuous Woman in the World. She offered her self to be slaughtered as an innocent Sacrifice, and her Soul iffued out in a fream of Blood.

O God, cryed I, O Imprudent Don Iewis! Why did you leave this Charming Lady to the Fury of an Amorous Husband, transported with Jealousie! You might have snatch'd her out of his cruel Hands. Alas, Madam, replied this Gentleman, he knew not what he did; for what would he have done at another time to have prevented such a Missortune.

As soon as the unfortunate Marchioness had rendred her last Breath, her cruel Executioner shut her Aparment, took all the Money and Jewels he had, mounted on Horse-back, and sted with all the speed he could. Don Lewis restless, and more Amorous than ever, returned thither in the Even ng, natwithstanding whatever might befal him: He was surprized when he was told the Marchioness was still asseep; he immediately went into the Garden, and entred into the Gallery, through the same Window which he had sound open, and from thence came into the Chamber: Twas so dark, that he was sain to walk warily; when he felt something which had like to have made him fall, he stooped down and sound it was a dead Body; he uttered a great Shriek, and doubting not but it was that of his dear Mistiress, he sunk down with Grief: Some of the Marchiones's Women walking under the Windows of her apartment, heard Don Lewis's Crys; they easily got up through the same Window, and entred the Room. What a samentable sight was this? I cannot find Words to denote to you the Horror of this Spectacle, Don Lewis was no some come to himselfs by the force of Remedies, but his Grief, Rage and Despair, broke out with such Violence, that it was impossible to calm him; and I am perswaded he had not outlived her whose soils he occasioned, if the desire of Vengeance had not re-anishated him.

He parted like one furious in search of the Marquess de Barbaran; He sought him every-where without hearing any news of him. He ran over Italy, traverst Germany, came into Flanden, and past into France. He was told that the Marquess was at Valentia in Spain; he came there, and met not with him. In sine, three Tears being past, without finding the means of Sacrificine his Enemy to his Mistress's Ghost, Divine Grace, which is irressible, and particularly on great Souls toucht his so efficaciously, that he immediately changed his Desire of Revenge into serious Desires of leaving the World, and minding only the fitting himself for another Life.

Being fill'd with this Spirit he returned into Sardagnia, H. fold all his Estate, which he distributed among some of his Friends who with great Merit were yet very poor; and by this means became so poor himself, that he reduced himself to the begging of

He had heretofore seen, in going to Madrid, a place very sit make an Hermitage, (it is towards Mount Dragon;) the Mountain is almost inaccessible, and you cannot pass to it but through an Overture, which is in the midst of a great Rock; it is stopt up when the Snow falls, and the Hermitage lies buried more than six Months under it. Don Lewis made one be built bere where he was wont to pass whole Tears without seeing any one He made such Provisions as were necessary, having good Books and thus remained in this dismal Solitude; but this Tear he Friends forced him hither, by reason of a great Sickness, which had like to have cost him his Life. It is four Tears since be heled this Holy Spiritual Life, and so different from that to which he was born, that it is with great trouble be sees any of his a quaintance.

As to the Marquess de Barbaran, he has wholly left the l of Sardagnia, where he has not the Liberty to return. I am form'd he is married again at Anvers, to a Widow of a Spania named Fonceca.

And it is be himself that has related to one of my wiends the Particularities of his Crime; and he is so suriously tortured with the remembrance of it, that he imagines he continually sees his Wife dying, and reproaching him with his Fury and Jensousie. In a word, he has contracted such a deep Melaneholy, that his Death is thought by every one to be near, or at the least, the ofs of his Sences.

The Gentleman here was filent; and I not being able to orbear weeping at fo Tragical a Relation, Don Fernand de Toedo, who had observ'd it, and would not take notice of it. or fear of interrupting the Relation, rally'd me about my Tenernefs, telling me how well he was pleased to find me fo Compaffionate, and that I should not be long before I met with Obects fit to exercise it on. I did not so much mind the returnng an Answer to him, as the Thanking this Gentleman, who vas pleas'd to entertain me with the Recital of fo extraordinary n Adventure: I intreated him to make my Compliments to n Alms. Don Fernand, and each of the Cavaliers, gave as uch: Here is, said the Gentleman to us, wherewith to enrich be Poor of Victoria; for Don Lewis appropriates not such great harities as these to himself. We told him, he was the Master, nd might dispose of the Money as he pleased. But to rern to my Adventures:

Although I had a Pasport from the King of Spain, the best ecified, and most general, as is possible, yet I was oblig'd to ke a Billet from the Toll-Houle; for without this Precaution. my Cloaths had been confiscated: To what purpose then is Pasport ? faid I to them. To none at all, replied they. he Surveyers and Officers of the Customs would not so much cast their Lyes on it; they told me, the King must come d affure them; that this Order was from him. It is to no rpose for any one to alledge his being a Stranger, and ignont of the Usages of the Country: For they drily answer, That Stranger's Ignorance makes the Spaniard's Profit. The III ather has kept me here two Days, during which I faw the verness, and the Play. The principal Place of this Town dorn'd with a very fair Fountain flanding in the midft: it ncircled with the Town-House, the Prilon, two Convents, leveral well-built Houses: Here is a New Town and an Old ; every body forfakes this latter to dwell in the other. e are very rich Merchants; their chief Trade is at St. Seian or Bilbo; they fend great flore of Iron to Grenada, Effre four, Galicia, and other Parts of the Kingdom, I observe that the great Streets are set with fine Trees, which are watered with Streams' running by them. From Mount St. Adrian hither, it is seven Leagues. In fine, I am just setting out, and must end this long Letter; it is late, and I have spoke to you so much of what I have seen, that I have said nothing of my Affections to you: Believe me, however, Dear Cosin, that I am, and ever shall be From Victoria, LETTER III.

My Lettters are so long, that it is hard to believe when I finish them, that I have any thing else more to tell you yet, my dear Cosin, I never close any, but there remains still sufficient for another: When I were only to speak to you of my Friendship, this would be an inexhaustible Subject; you may make some Judgment of it from the Pleasure I find in obeying your Commands. You are desirous to know all the Particulars of my Voyage, I will therefore go on to relate them:

I set out very late from Victoria, by reason of my stay at t Governess's, whom I before mention'd: and we went to lie Miranda; the Country is very pleasant as far as Avigny; came afterwards by a difficult Way to the Banks of the Rive Urola, whose Noise is the greater, in that 'tis full of Rock on which the Water dashes, beats up, and falls down, as forms natural Gascades in several places: We continu'd to cend the high Mountains of the Pyrenees, where we ran a tho fand several Dangers: we saw the ancient Ruines of and Castle, where Ghosts and Spirits have their Apartments, as as in that of Quebara, it is near Gargason; and being to s there to show my Pasport, because here certain Customs paid to the King, I learnt from the Alcade of the Boron who drew near my Litter to talk with me, that it is the mon Report of the Country. That there were formerly a and a Queen here, who had so fine and beautiful a Wom their Daughter, that the was rather taken for a Goddols a Mortal Creature: The was call'd Mira; and it is from Name came the Mira of the Spaniards, which is to lay, you; for as foon as ever the appear'd, all the People atten beheld her, and cried out, Mira, Mira; and here's the E logy of a Word drawn far enough. This Princels was feen by any Body who became not desperally in love with he but her Disdainfulness and Indisserence made all her boy pine away: The famous Busilisk never kill'd so many People the Beautiful and Dreadful Mira; The thus depopulated ther's Kingdom, and all the Countries thereabouts were of the deceased and dying Lovers. After they had in value of themselves to her, they lastly applied themselves to yen, to demand Vengeance on her Cruelty: The Gods at last of the control grew Angry, and the Goddeffes were not much behind in the Exercise of this Passion : so that to punish her, th Sconrges of Heaven finish'd the Destruction of her Father Kingdom: In this general Calamity he confulted the Oracle which told him, That all theje Miferies would not have an end till Maria had expeated the Mischiefs which her Eyes had done and that she must be gone, that Destiny would conduct her to the place where she was to lose her repose and liberty. The Princels obey'd, believing it impossible for her to be touch'd with Tendernels: She carried only her Nurse with her; the was clad like a simple Shepherdes, lest the should be taken notice of, whether at Sea or Land. She ran over a great Part of the World, committing every day two or three Dozen of Murthers; for her Beauty was not diminisht by the Patigue of her Travels: She arriv'd at length near this old Caffle, which belong'd to a young Count call'd Niss, endowed with a thousand Perfections, but extream proud and Referv'd : he frent his time in the Woods; as foon as ever he perceiv'd a Woman, he fled from her, and of all things he faw in the World, The was his greatest Aversion. The beautiful Mira was resting her felf one day under the shade of some Trees, when Nios past by cloathed with a Lyon's Skin, a Bow at his Girdle, and a Mace on his Shoulder; his Hair was all clotted together, and his Face be-fineared like a Chimney-Sweeper's, (this Circumstance is observable) yet the Princess thought him the most handsome Man in the World; the ran after him as if the had been mad; and he ran from her as if he had been in the fame condition : the loft the fight of him ; the knew not where to find him: The is now in the greatest Sorrow, weeping Day and Night with her Nurse. Nins return'd to the Chafe; the law him again, and would have follow'd him; as foon as he pe ceiv'd her, he did as at first, and Mira, betook her felf again to her Lamentations; but her Passion giving her new strength, the out-ran him, stopt him, taking hold of his Locks, intre ing him to look on her, thinking this was enough to engug him: He caff his Eyes on her with as much Indifference a f the had been an ordinary Person. Never Woman was more farpriz'd; the would not leave him; the came mangre him to his Castle: where, as soon as the had entred, he there lest her, and was no more seen. The poor Mra, being not to be comforted, died with Grief, and from that time you hear deep Sighs and Groans, which come from the Castle of Nios. The young Wenches of the Country are used to go there, and carry her little Prefents of Fruits and Milk, which they fe down at the Mouth of a Cave, where no body dares enter they faid, this was to comfort her; but this has been abolifin as superstitious. And though I believed not a word of whatever was told me at Garganson, in Relation to Mira and Nios. yet I was pleas'd in the Recital of this Story, of which I omit a thousand Particulars, for fear of tiring you by its length My Waiting-woman was so affected with this Relation, that the was for having us return back again, to fet at the Mouth of the Cave some red Partridges, which my People had brought! the imagin'd the Princes's Ghost would be mightily comforted in receiving this Testimony of our good Will; but for my part. I thought I should be more content than her, in having those Partridges for my Supper. We past the River of Urala, on a great stone Bridge, and having went over another, with difficulty enough, by reason of the melted Snow, we arriv'd at Mixanda d' Ebro; this is a great Village, or a little Town here is a large place adorn'd with a Fountain; the River Ebu which is one of the most considerable of Spain, traverses it You see on the Top of a Mountain the Castle, with several Towers; it appears to be of some strength; and there issue out fo great a Stream from a Rock on which it is built, that i turns feveral Mills: I could not observe any thing else worth writing to you.

The three Knights I spake of to you, were arrived before me, and giv'n all requisite Orders for Supper; so we eat to gether; And the Night appear'd well advanced, because the Days are short in this Season, 'twas not late; so that these Gentlemen, who show'd me great Respect and Civility askt me, How I would pass the time? I proposed to them the playing at Ombre, and that I would go Halves with Don Pernand de Toledo. They accepted the Offer: Don Fernand de Cardons said, He had rather Converse with me than Play: so the three others began, and I for some time gave my self over to the looking on them, with great Pleasure, for their Way is quit different from ours: They never utter a word; I do not say to complain, (for this would be unworthy the Spanish Gravits but to demand a Gano, or to cut higher, or to shew that one may take some other Advantage: In a word, they seem to be Statues of Pieces of German Glock-work, never appearing transported with either good or bad Luck. Among other Discourse which I had with D. Fred. de Cardonne, he told me. There were two observable things in Catalonia, one of which is a Mountain of Salt, partly white as Snow, and the other part clearer and more transparent than Crystal: that there is Blue, Green, Violet, Orange, and a thousand different Colours, which yet loses its tincture when wetted; it continually forms it self, and grows there: and though commonly the places where Salt is to be found, are so barren, that you see not so much as an Herb, yet there are here Pine-Trees of great height, and excellent Vine-yards: When the Sun darts its Rays on this Mountain, it looks as if it wholly consisted of the most precious Stones in the World: but the best of it is, that it yields

The other particular he mentioned to me, was of a Fountain, whose Water is very good, and of the same Colour as Claret: I have never heard any thing of this, faid I to him, but one of my Relations, who has been in Catalonia, has affired me there is a Fountain near Balut, whose Water is as others are for Colour, and yet whatever you put therein, appears like Gold: I have feen it, Madam, continued Don Fredrie; and I remember a Man that was very covetous, and more foolish, went thither every day to put therein his Silver, hoping in time 'twould be chang'd into Gold: but he was fo far from enriching himself that he was ruin'd; for some Peasants, more subtle and crafty than be, baving perceived what be did, stood watching a little lower, and the Stream of the Water would now and then bring some Pieces to them. If you return into France by Catalonia, added he, you will fee this Fountain. It is not that which can draw me thither. reply'd I, but the defire of passing by Montserat, would make me undertake a longer Tourney. It is fituated, faid he, new Barcelona, and is a place of great Devotion : It feems as if the Rock were fawed through the middle; the Church flands high, is small and obscure. By the help of Fourscore and Ten Lamps of Silver, you perceive the Image of the Virgin, which looks very duskish, and is held for Miraculous. The Altar cost Philip the Second thirty thousand Crowns; and here is every Day seen Pilgrims. from all Parts of the World; this Holy place abounds with Hermitages, inhabited by Persons of great Devotion: These are commonly Men of good Birth, who have not left the Worldtill they have well tryed it, and who appear much taken with the Swe beir Retirements, though the Place be difmal; and 'twould been impossible to have had Access to it, had not a Passage been cut through the Rocks. Tet you find here several agreeable Objects. a curious Prospect, various Springs, Gardens well drest by these Religioses own hands, and every where a certain Air of Solitude and Devotion, which mightly effect those who come there. We have another famous place of Devotion, added he, and that is Nuestra Senora del Pilar : it is at Saragossa, in a Chapel on a Pillar of Marble, where our Lady bolds the Babe Jesus in her Arms. It is pretended, that the Virgin appeared on this same Pillar to St. James ; and the Image is here worshipt with great Reverence. It cannot be well observed, because it stands so high, and in a very dark place; so that without the Flambeaux it could not be feen at all. Here are always Fifty Lamps burning; Gold and precious Stones (bine here on all fides; and the Pilgrims came bene in great Sholes. But yet, says he, I may truly say, in favour of Saragoffa, that 'tis one of the finest Towns you shall see; it is finased along the Ebre in a valt Field, is adorn'd with great Buildings, rich Churches, a stately Bridge, fine open Places, and the most charming Women in the World, who love French, and will omit nothing to oblige you to speak well of em, if you pass by there. I told him, I had already heard feveral things spoken of them to their commendation: But continu'd I, this Country is very Barren, and the Souldiers can bardly subsist in it. In effect, replied he, whether the Air be bad, or that they want Necessaries, the Flemmings and Germans cannot live there? and if they do not die there, tis because they run away. The Spaniards and Neopolitans are more prone than they to defert; these last past through France, to return into their Country ; the others Coaff the Pyrenecs along Languedoc, and enter Castile by Navarre, or Biscaye. This is a Course which the old Souldiers fail not to steer; for the newrais'd ones, they perish in Catalonia, being not accustomed thereto; and 'tis certain, there's no place where War is more troublesome to the King of Spain : He maintains his Forces here with great Charge, and the Advantage which the Enemy gains of him is not (mall; and I very well know they are more lenfible at Madrid for the smallest Loss in Catalonia, than they would be for the greatest in Flanders, or Milan, or effe-where. But at present, continues he, we are going to be more at our Ease than we have been, being expected at Court, that the Peace will be lafting, because they talk much of a Marriage which will make a new Al-Nance; and the Marquess de Los Balbares, Plenipotentiary at Nimiguen, bas received Orders to pass speedily to France, to deof that King Mademoifelle d' Orleans, therefore it is not doubted doubted but the Marriage will be concluded: But it is thought very strange, Don John of Austria should consent to this Marriage. Tou will do me a singular Pleasure, said I, interrupting him, if you would inform me of some Particularities touching this Prince: It is natural for to have a Curiosity in relation to Persons of this Character; and mind consent somes into a Court where one was never before, that I may not appear a Novice, I should have some previous Notices: He Answered me, it would be a great satisfaction to him, if he could relate any thing might please me ; and he began thus :

You will not, perhaps Madam, think it amis, that I begin at the Original of Things, and tell you. That this Prince was Son of one of the finest Warnen in Spain, named Maria Calderona; the was a Player; and the Duke de Medina de las Torres, became desperately in love with her: This Cavalier had so many Advantages above others, that Calderonna, loud him no less than she was beloved by him. In the Heat of this Intrigue, Philip the Fourth fam her, and preferr'd her to one of the Queen's Maids of Honour, and who was fo greived at this Change of the King, whom she really loved, and had a Son by, that the retired from the World, and betook her felf to Los del Calfas Reales, where the put on the Religio's Habit. As for Calderonne, ber Inclination lying wholly towards the Duke de Medina, the would not hear ken to the King, without the Duke would thereto consent: She pake to him of it, and offered to withdraw secretly where he would; but the Duke fearing to incur the King's Displeasure, answer'd her, He was refolu'd to yelld up to His Majefty a Treasure which he was not in a Capacity to contend for. She made him a thousand Reproaches for this; the call'd him Traytor to his Love, ingrateful towards bis Mistress: And moreover, told bim. That though he was so Happy, as that he could dispose of his Heart or he pleased, yet the could not do the same; and therefore he must continue to wist ber. or prepare to see her die with Despair. The Duke affected with Jo great a Passion, promised to feign a Journey to Andalousia, and to remain with her hid in a Closet: he effectually parted from the Court, and afterwards fout himself up (as it was agreed) whatever Risque he ran by so imprudent Conduct. The King, in the mean time, was very Amorous, and remain'd very well fatisfid: She had, during this, Don John d'Austria, and the Resemblance be had with the Duke de Medina de Las Torres, had made it be thought that he was his Son; but the the King had other Chil dren, and particularly the Bishop of Malaga, good Fortune decided in his Favour, and he has been only acknowledg'd.

Don John's Friends fay, That 'twas by reason of the Exchange which'

which had been made of the Son of Calderonna, for the Son of Queen Elizabeth; and bere's how they let forth this Change. which is a Story made on purpose to impose on the World, and which I believe has no ground of Truth: They pretend, the King being desperately in love with this Player, she became big with Child at the same time as the Queen ; and seeing the King's Passion was fo greatly towards her, that she might expect any thing, she so ordered it, that she made him promise ber, That if the Queen had a Son, and the likewife, he thould put hers in his place: What will you loose by this Sir ? said she, Will it not be your Son that will still Reign, only with this difference, that loving me, as you fay you do, you will love him likewife the better! She bad Wit, and the King could deny her nothing; he consented, and in effect the Business was managed with that Address, that the Queen being brought to Bed of a Son, and Calderonna of another. the Exchange was made. He that should have Reign'd, and who bore the Name of Baltazar, died at the Age of fourteen Tears: The King was told, 'twas with over-heating himself at Tennis; but the truth is, this Prince was suffered to keep bad Company, which procured him his Misfortunes; it is said likewise, That Don Pedro de Arragon, his Governour, and Chief Gentleman of his Chamber, more contributed to this than any other, suffering him to bring into his Apartment a Woman be lov'd; after this he was taken with a violent-Feaver, and conceal'd the Occasion: The Physicians, who were ignorant of it, thought to ease him by frequent Bleedings, which put an end to what strength be had; and by this means they ended his Life. The King knowing but too late, what bad hapn'd, banisht Don Pedro for not hindring this Excess, or for not having timely discover'd it.

In the mean time Don John of Austria, who was brought up as the Natural Son, chang'd not his Condition, though this ought to have been, had he been indeed the lawful Son; yet notwithstanding this, his Creatures affirm, He so exactly resembles Q. Elizabeth, that she needs no other Picture of her likeness. And this Opinion fails not of gaining Belief with the People, who run violently after Novelties, and who so passionately loved this great Queen, that they bewail her still as if she was but now deceas'd. It is true, that if Don John of Austria would make his advantage of the favourable Dispositions of the People, he has met with several Opportunities of extending his Fortune very far; but his only Aim is to serve the King, and to keep his Subjects in those Sentiments of Fidelity they ought to have for him.

To return to Calderonna: The King surprised one day the Duke ac Medina with ber, and in the excess of his Rage, he ran to him

him with his Poynard in his Hand; he was about to kill him when this Woman placed her felf between, telling him . He might strike her if he would. Having the most extream Passion for her. he could not but Pardon him, contenting himself only with banishing him : But understanding she continued to love him, and write to bim, he fludied only bow to get a new Passion; when he had one strong enough not to apprehend the Charms of Calderonna, be fent word to ber to retire into a Monastery, as is customary when the King forfakes his Mistress. She put it not off, writing a Letter to the Duke to bid him Adieu : And the received the Veil of a Religio from the Hand of the Apostolick Nuncio, who became fince Innocent X. It is very likely the King believ'd Don John was his real Son, feeing be loved him fo dearly a One thing will appear to you very fingular, which is, that a King of Spain having natural Sons owned by him, they never entred Madrid during his Life : So Don John was brought up at Ocanna. which is some Leagues distant from it. The King, his Father. came oft thither, and he made him come even to the Gates of the Town, where he went to meet him. This custom comes from that the Grandees of Spain dispute the Rank which these Princes would hold. Don John, before he went into Catalonia, remain'd commonly at Buen Betiro, which is a Royal Seat at one of the fartbest parts of Madrid, a little without the Gate : And be shew'd himself so little, that he was never seen at any Publick Feaft during the Life of the late King : but fince, times have changed, and his Fortunes stands on a different bottom, Whilf the Queen, Maria Ann of Austria, Sister to the Emperour, and the King's Mother, Govern'd Spain; and her Son was not yet of Age to hold the Reigns of the State. She would have always Don John keep from the Court; and moreover, found her self so capable of Governing, that she had a mind to ease her Son for a long time of the Burden of Ruling. She was not troubled to see him ignorant of whatever might give a desire of Reigning: but though she brought the greatest Precautions, to hinder him from feeling he was under too strict a Tutelage, and suffering no Persms to come near him, but those she was well assured of; yet this hindred not but some of the King's Faithful Servants hazarded themselves, by giving him to understand what he might do for his Liberty. He follow'd the Advice was given him; and in sine, having taking Measures accordingly, he stole away one Night, and went to Buen Retiro. He as soon sent from thence an Order to

Don John is of a middle Stature, well shaped, Black and lively Eyes, and a most Manly Countenance. He is Polite, Generous, and very Brave. He is ignorant of nothing befitting bit Birth, being well verst in all Arts and Sciences. He writes and speaks very well sive Languages, and understands yet more. He was for a long time studied Judicial Astrology. There is no Instrument which he cannot make, and use with the best Masters, whe works on all kind of Mechanicks, makes Arms, and paints sinely. He took a great Pleasure in the Mathematicks; but being charged with the Government of the State, he has been obliged to lay aside all other Employments.

He came to Buen Retiro in the beginning of the Year 1677. and as soon as he was there, he sent the Queen-Mother to Toledo. because she had declared against him, and hindred his return to the King. Don John had an extream Joy in receiving from the King's own Hand an Order to take Care of every thing, and to manage the Affairs of the Kingdom: And 'twas not without occasion he discharg'd himself on him, seeing he then was ignorant of the Art of Reigning. It was alledg'd for a Reason of his slow Education, That the King his Father was dying when he gave him Life: That when he came into the World, they were fain to put him in a Box of Cotten, being so tender and small, that he could not be swadled: That he was brought up in the Arms, and on the Knees of the Ladies of the Palace, till he was Ten Tears old, with out putting his Foot once all this while on the Ground to walk : That in the Sequel the Queen his Mother, who was engaged by all the Ties of natural Duty to preserve this only Heir of the Spanish Branch, fearing to lose him, dared not let him study, less by too great an Application be should lose his Health, which in truth was very unfound: And'twas observed, that the great Number Women, with whom the King always was, and who too sharps reprehended him for his Faults which he committed, had inspired him with such a great Aversion to them, that as soon as ever be had notice a Lady flaid for him in any place he was to pass, be stole another way, or kept himself shut up all day in his Chamber. The Marchioness de Luz Veles, who was his Governess, told me. the waited for an Opportunity full fix Months to Speak with bin. and when Chance had brought them unavoidably to him, he took their Requests from their Hands, but turn'd lifs Head another way, for fear be fould fee them. His Health is fince fo increased, that his Marriage with the Arch-Dutchess, the Emperor's Daughter having been broke off by Don John, by reason twas the Queen-Mothers Project, he has defired to marry Mademoifelle d'Orleans. The Circumstances of the Peace which are lately concluded at NI miguen, made him cast his Eyes towards this Princess, with whose excellent Qualities, Madam, you are better acquainted than I.

It is hard to believe, that having Dispositions so far from Gallantry, he should become so suddenly and wehemently in love with the Queen, as he became on the only Rehearsal of her good Qualities, and at the sight of her Picture in Minature, which was showed him. He never lets it go out of his Hand; he always holds it to his Heart; He Dialogues with it so prettily, as aftenishes all the Courtiers; for he speaks a Language he never spoke this Passion for the Princes furnishes him with a thousand Thoughts, which he dares not entrust any body with. He thinks no body makes hast enough; and therefore sends fresh Curriers every day to carry his Billets doux, and brings back News of her.

When you come to Madrid, added he, you will bear Madam. several particulars which have without doubt hapened since I was there, and which will perhaps more satisfie your Curiosity than what I have related to you. I am very much obliged to you. answered I, for your Civilities; but do me the Favour to oblige me farther, in giving me the true Character of the Spaniards: You know them, and I am perswaded nothing has escap'd your Enquiries; You speaking to me without Passion and Interest, I may reckon my self fure of what you tell me. Why believe you, Madam, replied he fmiling, that I hall freak to you more fincerely than another? There are Reasons which may render me suspected: They are my Masters: I must manage them: And if I be not Politick enough to do it, the Vexation of being constrained to obey them, would tempt me to entertain Notions in their Respect contrary to Truth. However it be, said I interrupting him, pray tell me what you know of them.

The Spaniards, said he, have always past for Fierce and Glorious: This Glory is mixt with Gravity; and they carry it fo far, that one may call it an extravagant Pride: They are Brave, with out being Rash: yet they are accused for not being daring enough : They are Cholerick, Revengeful, without shewing any Transport. Liberal without Oftentation, Sober in their Diet, very Presumptuous in Prosperity, too Rampant in Adversity: They Idolize Women; they are fo Prepossest in their Favour, that they shew no Discretion in the Choice of their Wives: They are Patient to Excess, Obstinate, Idle, Singular, Philosophisers: And as to the rest, Men of Honour keeping their Words, tho' it cost 'em their Lives. They have a great deal of Wit and Vivacity, easily comprehend, explain themselves in the same manner and in few words; They are Prudent, Jealous without measure, difinterested, bad Oeconomists, Close, Superstitious, great Catholicks, at least in appearance : They are good Poets, and write Verles with great Facility. They would be capable of Nobler Sciences would they wouch fafe to apply themselves thereto. They

They have a Greatness of Soul, Elevated Wit, Constancy, a Natural Seriousness, and a Respect for Ladies, as is not seen elsewhere: They have a Set-Behaviour, full of Affectation, intoxicated with their own Merit, hardly ever in this Particular doine Right to that of others. Their Bravery confifts in standing Valiantly on the Defensive Part, without giving Ground, and without dreading Danger; but they love not to feek it, which proceeds from their great Judgment: They discern Danger, and avoid it. Their greatest Defect, in my Opinion, is the Passion of Revenge and the Means they use for this: Their Maxims hereupon are absolutely opposite to Christianity and Honour : When they have received an Affront, they make him be Affaffinated who has offeredit. They are not contented with this : for they cause them to be Assassinated likewise whom they have offended, in the Apprehention of being prevented, knowing well, that if they do not kill, they shall be kill'd themselves. They pretend to justifie themselves berein. when they fay, That their Enemy having took the first Advantage. they ought to secure themselves of the second: That should they fail berein, they would wrong their Reputation: That you must not fight with a Manthat has insulted over you, but out your self in a Condition to punish him, without running half the Dangers. It is true, that Impunity Authorises this Conduct; for the Priviledge of Churches and Convents in Spain, is to give an affured Retreat to Criminals; And as near as they can, they commit these Villanies hard by a Sanctuary, so have the less way to an Altar Which you see oft embraced by a Villain, with his Poynard reeking in bis Hand, and be smeared with the Blood of the Murther which be has committed.

As to their Persons, they are very lean, little, fine shape, comely Head, good Faces, fine Eyes, well-set Teeth, yellow and duskish Complexion; they will have one walk slowly, commend big Legs, and a little Font, Shones without Heels, parting the Hair on both sides, being strait cut, and kept behind their Ears with a great Two-banded Hat, an Habit always Black, instead of a Shirt, Tassit Sleeves, or black Tabhy, a Sword of a strange length, with black Freize Cloak over all this, very strait Breeches, hanging Sleeves, and a Poynard. All this must so disfigure a Man, let him be otherwise never so well shaped, that they seem to assed Garb the most disagreeable; And ones Eyes cannot with any Complacency accustom themselves to this sight.

Don Frederick would have continued on his Discourse and I had so much pleasure in hearing him, that I would not have interrupted him; but he broke off himself, having observed that the Play was at an end, and con-fidering, that we were to fet out early next Morning, he thought I might be defirous of retiring; he therefore with the other Gentlemen, bad me good Night. I rose in effect very foon next Morning, because twas a great Journey to Birbiesca, where we intended to lie. We followed the River to avoid the Mountains, and past at Oron, a great River, which falls into the Ebre. We a while after entred into fo strait a Way, that our Litters could scarce pass : We ascended along, a very strait Coast to Pancorvo, whose Castle I saw standing on a rais'd Ground, not far distant : We traverst a great Plain; and this was a Novelty to us, to see an even Country: This here is furrounded with several Mountains, which feem finkt together as a Chain, and especially those of Oeca: We must again pass over a little River, before we can come to Birbiesca: This is only a Borough, which has nothing remarkable but its Colledge, and some few pleasant Gardens along the Water. But I may fay, we came thither in worse Weather than any we had yet : I was so tired, that as foon as I arriv'd I went to Bed: fo that I law not Don Fernand de Toledo, and the other Gentlemen, till the next Day, at Castel de Peones. But I should tell you how one is serve in these Inns, they being all alike: When you come into one of them, wearied and tired, roafted by the heat of the Sun, or frozen by the Snows (for there is feldom any Temperament between these Two Extreams,) you fee neither Pot on the Fire, nor Plates walked: You enter into the Stable, and from thence to your Chamber; this Stable is ordinarily full of Mules and Muletteers, who make use of their Mules Saddles for Pillows in the night, and in the day-time they serve 'em for Tables : they eat very friendly with their Mules, and are very good Company together.

The Stair-Case by which you go up, is very strait, and does rather resemble a forry Ladder: La Sennora de la Casa receives you with her Gown tuckt up, and her dangling Sleeves; she takes time to put on her Sunday-Cloathes, whilst you get out of your Litter: and she never omits this; for they are all very Poor and Vain Glorious. You are shewed a Chamber, whose Walls are white enough, hung with a thousand little source Pictures of Saints; the Beds are without Curtains; the Covertures of Cotton, the Sheets as large as Napkins, and the Napkins like Pocket-hankerchies; and you must be in some considerable Town to find four or five of them; for in other places there are none, no more than there are Forks: They have only a Cup in the House; and if the Muse-Drivers get first hold of it, which commonly happens, if they please (for they are served with more Respect than those whom they bring) you must stay patiently till they have done with it, or drink out of an Earthen Pitcher. It is impossible to warm one at the Kitchin-sire, without being choaked, for they have no Chimneys, and 'tis the same in all the Houses on the Road; there is an Hole made in the top of the Ceiling, and the Smoak goes out thence; the Fire is in the midst of the Kitchin. They put what you would have, roasted on Tiles, and when 'tis well gril'd on one side, they turn the other; when 'tis grot Meat, they saften it to a String, and so let it hang on the Fire, and turn it with their Hands; so that the Smoak makes it so black, that it would turn ones Stomack to look on it.

I think there cannot be a better Representation of Hell than these fort of Kitchins, and the Persons in them; for not to speak of this horrible Smoak, which blinds and choaks one there are a Dozen of Men, and as many Women, blacker than Devils, nasty and stanking like Swine, and clad like Beggars. There are always some of 'em impudently grating on a forry Guiter, and singing like a Cat a roasting. The Women have all of 'em their Hair about their Ears, and you would take 'em for Bedlamites; they have Glass Necklaces, which hang twisted about their Necks like Ropes of Onions, but however serve to cover the Nastiness of their Skin. They are as great Thieves as any are in Jayl, and they are urgent to serve you only to have an opportunity to steal something of you, though it be but a Pin.

Before all things, the Mistress of the House brings your h little Children, who are bare-headed in the midft of Wint though but of a Day old: the makes 'em touch your Cloat The rubs their Eyes with them, their Cheeks, Throat, Hands. This feems as if one was become a Relick, and co heal all Diseases. These Ceremonies over, you are askt, you will eat any thing; and though at Mid-night, you m fend to the Butchery, the Market, the Tavern, the Baker in fine; to all parts of the Town, to gather wherewith to ma a forry Meal. For though the Mutton here be very tend their way of frying it with Oyl, is not to every Bodies Rel Here are great store of Partridges, and those very large; t are not very fat, but dry; and to make 'em drier, they ro em to a Coal. think it made up with Sugar; but it is ill wrought and so little baked, that it is as heavy as Lead in the Stomack: it has the shape of a flut Cake, and is not much thicker than one's Finger. The Wine is good, and Fruits in their season, especially Grapes, which are very large; and of delicate taste. You may recken your self certain of a good Desart. You have Sallads here of such good Lettice as the World cannot afford better.

Do not think (Dear Cofin) 'tis sufficient to say, Go setch such things, to have them; for not very seldom you can meet with nothing: But supposing you find what you would have, you must give out your Money before hand: so that your Meat is paid for before you have begun to eat it; for the Master of the Inn is only allowed to Lodge you: they alledge for a Reason, That it is not just one only Person should go away with all the Profit from Travellers, it being better the Money should

You enter not any Inn to Dine, but carry your Provision with you, and stop at the Bank of some River, where the sule Drivers bate their Moles; and this is with Oats or Barley, with chopt Straw, which they carry with them in great lacks; for as to Hay they give them none. It is not allowed a Woman to tarry above two Days in an Inn on the Road, unless the can offer good Reasons. And here's enough in relation to uns, and the Manner of your Treatment therein.

After Supper thefe Gentelmen play'd at Ombre, and I not ting strong enough to play against them. I went shares with on Frederic de Cardonne; and Don Fernand drew near the Firede to me; he told me, He could have wisht my time would ermit me to pass by Vailladolid; that it is the most pleasant own of Old Castille, it having been for a great while the Manou of the Kings of Spain; and that they have a Palace there for them. That as to him, he had Relations there would infinitely pleased to entertain me; and would shew me the minicans Church, which the Dukes of Lerma have founded; at it was very Stately, and the Portal of fingular Beauty, by ans of the Figures and Emboffed Work, which enrich it: at in the College of the same Convent the Brench see there, th great satisfaction, all the Walls full of Flower de Lucer; being said, a Bishop who depended on the King of France, been at the Charge of Painting them. He added, They uld have carried me to the Religiofes of St. Claire, to thew the Choire of their Church, the Tomb of a Castillan ight, whence tis faid, iffues out Accents and Groans every e any of his Family are near their Deaths. I smiled at this,

as being doubtful of the Truth of fuch kind of Relations: You give not Credit to what I fay, continued be, neither would engage for the Truth of it, though all the Country thereabout are fo fully perswaded of it, that you would be suspected for an Heretick should you question it. But it is certain there is Bell in Arragon, in a small Town calld Villilla, on the Ebre which is about fifty Foot compals, and it happens sometime to found of it felf, it being not perceiveable to be agitate by any Wounds or Earthquakes: in a word, by no vifible thing. It first Tolls, and afterwards, by intervals, Ring out, as well in the Day as the Night: When it is heard it is not doubted but it denounces some sad Accident: which is what hapned in 1601, on Thursday the 12th of June, ti Saturday the 15th of the same Month; it ceased then to Ring but it began again on Corpus Christi, when they were on the point of making the Procession. It was heard likewise whe Alphonsus the Fifth, K. of Arragon, went into Italy to tak Possession of the Kingdom of Naples. It was heard at the Death of Charles the Fifth. It denoted the Departure Don Sebastion, King of Portugal, for Africk. The Extremit of King Philip the Second . and the Decease of his last Wi 'Q. Ann. You would have me to believe you, Don Ferna ' said I perhaps, I shall seem too obstinate in standing to all this while, but you will agree there are Matters one in 'lawfully doubt of. Nay, Madam, replied he, with a please Air, I tell you nothing but what I can have a thousand I neffes to justifie; but perhaps you will sooner believe · Esteve de Carvajal in a thing as extraordinary in his Count He at the same time call'd to him, demanding of him, ther twere not true, that there is in the Convent of Care a Clock which fails not to Ring every time a Religious die; fo that the time is known to a Day? Don Effeue folutely convinc'd, yet I made a shew as if I was. You pass so quickly through Old Castille, continued Don F ' nand, that you will not have time to fee what's most rell 'kable : The Picture of the Bleffed Virgin Is talkt of far near, which was found miraculoully stampt on a Rock longs to the Religio's Augustines d' Avila, and several R 'go there out of Devotion; but one has no less Curiosit 'see certain Mines of Salt, which are near there, call'd Mengraville; you descend above two hund der Ground, and then enter into a vost Cavern form

Chrystalin Salt, of astonishing Largeness and Colour. Near this place, in the Town of Soria, you see a great Bridge without a River, and a great River without a Bridge, the River being forc'd out of its place by an Earthquake.

But if you go as far as Medina del Campo, added he, I am fure the Inhabitants will give you a welcome Entrance, only because you are of the French Nation, whom they much affect, to distinguish themselves hereby from their Sentiments of the other Castillians: There Town is so priviledg'd, that the K. of Spain has not the Power to create any Officers, nor the Pope to confer Benefices: This Right belongs to the Townshien, and they often fall together by the Ears, in the chusing of their Magistrates and Ecclesiasticks.

One of the Rarities of this Country is the Aquadud of Segovia, which is five Leagues in length, it has above two hundred Arches of extraordinary heighth, tho' in feveral places there are two flanding one on another; and 'tis all built on Free Stone, there having been no Mortar, or any Cement to joyn them: This is lookt on as one of the Romans Works, or at least as worthy to be so. The River which is at the end of the Town furrounds the Castle, and serves it for a ditch; it is built on a Rock. Among feveral things remarkable, you fee the Effigies of the Kings of Spain, who have Reign'd for several Years: And there is no Town but Segmia and Seville where Money is Coyned, and the Pieces of Eight which are made at the former Places are held to be the best; and this is by means of the River which turns certains Mills that stamp the Money. Here are likewise most curious. Walks along a Meadow planted with Elm Trees, whose Leaves are so thick and large, that the greatest Heats of the Sun cannot pierce them. I want not Curiofity, faid I to him, for all things which deserve it; but I at present want time to see them : However, I should he very glad to arrive timely at Burgos, to view the Town. Which is to fay, Madam, replied Don Fernand, we must lose your Company, and let you retire.

He gave notice thereof to the other Gentlemen, who gave over their Play, and we thus separated.

I rose this perning before Day; and I end this Letter at Burgos, where now arrived: Thus, Dear Cosin, I shall send you nothing of this Day, but shall take the first occasion to acquaint you with what besals me.

From Burgos, Feb. 27, 1673.

Tours.

LETTER IV.

ME could fenfibly perceive in arriving at Burgos, that this Town is colder than any of those we past; and 'tis like wife faid, you have none of thole exceffive Heats which are intollerable in other Parts of Spain: The Town Hands whe you descend the Mountain, and reaches to the Plain as far as the River, which washes the foot of the Wall : the Streets are very strait and even : the Castle is not great, but very strong and is feen on the top of the Mountain : A little lower is the Triumphant Arch of Fernando Gonsales, which the Curious do much admire. This Town was the first that was conquer'd from the Mores; and the Kings of Spain have long refided here tis the Capital of Old Castille; it holds the first Rank in the two States of the two Castilles, although Toledo disputes with her : You fee her fine Buildings; and Velafed's Palace very stately. Here are in all the broad Streets and spacious Places, Fountains, with Statues, some of which are good Pieces; but the finest fight is the Cathedral, which is so large that Mass is said in five several places of it, without any di sturbance to each other; the Architecture is so exquisitely wrought, that it may pass among the Gothick Buildings for Master-Piece of Art: and this is so much the more remarkable in that they build very forrily in Spain: in some places this is through Poverty, and in others want of Stone and Lime : I a told that even at Madrid you fee Houses of Earth, and the finest are made with Brick, cemented with the same, for was of Lime. To pass from the Town to the Suburbs of Bee you go over three Stone Bridges: the Gate which answers th of Santa Maria, stands high, with the Image of the Vire upon it: this Suburb contains the greatest part of the Conv. and Hospitals; there is a great one founded by Philip the cond to receive the Pilgrims which go to St. James, which entertains them for a Day. The Abbey & Mille Flore whose Building is very stately, is not far distant. You here in this Suburb several Gardens which a watered Fountains and pleafant Springs; the River leves for a Ch nel : And you find in a great Park inclosed with Walls, fant Walks at all times of the Year.

I would have seen the Crucifix in the Augustines Conventities placed in a Chapel of the Cloyster, large and dark enough that you could hardly discern it, were it not for the Lamp which are continually burning, they'r above an hundred; some are of Gold, and others of Silver, of so extraordinary a fize, that they cover all the Vault of this Chapel: there are sixty Silver Candlesticks of a length, exceeding the tallest Man, and so heavy that two Men cannot list'em: they stand on the ground on both sides of the Altar; those which are upon it are of Massy Gold: You see between em two Crosses of the same, set out with Precious Stones, and Crowns hanging over the Altar, adorned with Pearls and Diamonds of great Linstre: The Chapel is hung with Tapistry, wrought with Gold; it is so laden with rich Gists, that there's hardly room to put'em in so that part of em are kept in the Treasury.

The Holy Crucifix flands on the Altar, near the natural bigness, it is covered with three Curtains one on another, allembrodered with Pearls and Diamonds: When they open them, which is not done without great Geremony, and for Persons of Quality, Several Bells are rung, every one falls on his Knees: and it must be granted, that this place and sight strikes one with an Awfal Regard: The Crucifix is of Carv'd
Work, and cannot be better made; its Carnation is very natural; it is covered from the Breasts to the Feet with a fine Linnen, in several Foulds or Pleats, which makes it look ske a loose Jerkin which in my Opinion, is not over-agreeable.

It is commonly held, that Nicodemus made it; but those who are for making every thing Miraculous, will have it brought down from Heaven, they know not how nor when. I was told, certain Monks of this Town had once stole it, and convey'd it away; but it took a convenient time to give 'em the slip, and was found the next Morning in the Chapel, in its usual place: These honest People being entaged, that it should serve em such a Trick, mustered up their Forces, and violently laid Hands on't the second time, but to as little purpose; for twould by no means stay with 'em: However, it works Miracles, and is one of the chief Objects of Devotion in Spain: The Religious Tell you, it sweats every Friday.

I was going into my Inn, when we faw the Sieur de Cardonne's Valet de Cambre, running as fast as he could after us; be was booted, and three Friers scowring after him: I was over rash in my Judgment; for I could not but think he had slole something in this rich Chapel, and was taken in the sact; but his Master, who was with me, having demanded of him, What put him on such full Speed; He answer'd, He went into the Chapel of the Holy Crucifix with his Spurs om and the Fryers had kept him in custody, to get Money of him, but that he was gotten out of their Clutches, but they were now upon the Hunt for him. They make it a Forfeit, as well as others, for a Man to go with Spurs into these Holy Places.

The Town is not very great; it is adorned with a spacious Place; here are high Pillars which bear up very fine Lodgings. The Bull-Feasts are kept here; for the people are much delighted with this sort of Divertisement. There is also a very well-built Bridge, long and large: the River which passes under it bathes a Meadow, on the Bank of which you see Allies of Trees, which form a most delicious Walk. Trade was hereto-fore considerable, but it is of late much diminisht. The best Castillian is here spoken, and the Men are naturally Souldiers, so that when the King has need of them, he finds here great Number, and better Men than elsewhere.

After Supper our company fet to Play, as heretofore: Don Sancho Sanmento was for yielding his place to any one, pretending 'twas his Right to entertain me this Evening. I knew he had lately return'd from Sicily; I ask him, whether he had been one of those who had help'd to Chastize those Rebellion People? [Alas, Madam, faid he, the Marquels de Los Navas was sufficient to punish them beyond what their Crime deserved: I was at Naples, in the defign to pass into Flanders, where I have Relations of the fame Name. The Marquess de Los Veles. Vice-Roy of Naples, engaged me to leave my first Project, and embark my felf with the Marquels de Los Navas, whom the King fent into Sicily: We fet Sail in two Veffels of Mainre and arriv'd at Messina the fixth of Fanuary. Having sent to notice of his coming, and no body expetting it, he was no received with the Honours paid commonly to the Vice-Roys But in truth, his Intentions were fo cruel against these poor Peo ple, that his Entrance flould have been made in Tears.

Scarcely was he arriv'd, but he clapt up the two Sheriffs in Prison, named Vicenzo Zuffo, and Don Diego: He put Spaniard in their Places; he rigorously abolish the Colledge of Knight of the Star; and began to execute the Orders which Gonzago had long receiv'd, and which he had eluded through Favour of Weakness. He immediately publish an Order, by which the Ring chang'd all the Form of Government of Messina, deprivate Town of its Revenues, forbad its bearing for the future the Glorious Title of Exemplary, distingly'd the Senate, and winto the place of six Sheriffs, six Officers, two of which should be Spaniards; that these Officers should not for the suture appears in Publick with their Formalities; that they should no more be preceded by Drums and Trumpets, ride no more together in a Coach with four Horses, as they were wont; that they should sit henceforward on a plain Bench; should have no more Incense offered em in the Churches; go cloath'd after the Spanish Fashion; should Assemble on Publick Assairs in a Chamber of the Vice-Roy's Palace; and have no longer any Jurisdiction on the Champian Country.

Every one was seized with such Consternation, as if he had been Thunder-struck; but their Sorrow was much increased on the fifth of the same Month, when the Camp Master-General went to the Town-house, and seized all their Charters, and Original Copies of their Priviledges, and made em be burnt publickly by the Hands of the common Hang-man. The Prince de Condro was afterwards apprehended, to the great grief of his Family, but particularly the Princess Elemona, his Sister, whose Tears were not shed alone: this Princess is not above Eighteen; her Beauty and Wit are miraculous, which astonish those about her. Don Sancho's Eyes grew red at the remembrance of this Princess, and I plainly perceived Pity had not all the share in what he said; yet he continued on his Dif-

course to me of Messina.

The Vice-Roy, added be, publisht an Order, by which all the Citizens were enjoyn'd, under penalty of ten Years Impriforment, and five thouland Crowns Fine, to bring their Arms into his Palace. He at the fame time caus'd the great Bell in the Town-house to be taken down, and beaten to pieces in their fight: He ordered all the Bells in the Cathedral to be melted, to make a Statue of the King of Spain. And the Prince of Condro's Children were taken into Cuftody: But their Fear increased, when the Vice-Roy ordered D. V. Zuffo's Head to be cut off. This Example of Severity Alarum'd all the People; and what appear'd most terrible, was, That in the late Troubles, some Families of Messinois having withdrawn themselves into several Parts, the Marquess de Liche, the Spanish Embassador at Rome, advised them, as a Friend, to return into their own Country, affuring them all was Quiet, and that a General Pardon was already publisht; and for their greater assurance, gave them Pastports. These peor People (who had not taken up Arms, and being not of the number of the Revolters, knowing their Innocency, could never have imagin'd they should have been treated as Criminals) return'd to Messina; where they had scarcely landed, but the Joy they had of seeing themselves in their Native Country, and in the midst of their Friends, was fadly diffurbid, when they were feifed on, and the next Morning, without any Quarter, or regard to Sex or

Age, by the Vice-Roy's Order, all hang'd. He afterwards, fent to demolish the great Tower of Palermo; and the principal Citizens of it, remonstrating against the excessive Impositions on Corn, Silks, and other Commodities, the Marquest de las Navas sent them all to the Gallies, without being moved by the Tears of their Wives, and the need so many poor Children might have of their Fathers.

I must acknowledge, continued Don Sancho, that my Nature is so averse to the Rigors every day exercis'd on these poor People, that I could not for all the World remain any longer at Mellina. The Marquels de las Navas was for lending to Madrid, to inform the King of what he had done. I intreated him to charge me with this Commission; and in effect he consented, and gave me his Letters, which I have delivered to the King at Madrid; and at the fame time my Interceffions for the Prince de Condro: And I prefume my good Offices will not be wholly useless to him. I am perswaded, said I to him, this was the principal Motive of your Journey: I am no prying body, but methinks you are greatly concern'd for the Interest of this Family. It's true, Madam, continued be, the Injustice done this Unfortunate Prince does sensibly affect me; Were he not Brother to the Princels Eleonora, faid I to him, perhaps you would not so much lay it to heart. But no more of this; I perceive this Remembrance afflicts you. Pray let me rather hear from you what is most remarkable in your Country- Ah! Madam, cried be, you infult over me; for you must needs know, that Galicia is so poor and mean a Country that there's no place for bragging; not but that the Town of St. James de Compostella is considerable enough: it is the Capital of the Province, and scarce one in Spain that's superiour to it in Riches and Greatness: Its Archbishoprick is worth Seventy Thousand Crowns a Year, and the Chapter has as much; It stands in an agreeable Plain, surrounded with little Hills of moderate height; and it feems as if Nature had placed them there to defend the Town from those deadly Blasts which arise from other Mountains. Here is a University, fine Palaces, flately Churches, publick Places, and an Holpital, one of the most considerable, and best serv'd in Europe. It consists of two Courts of Extraordinary greatness, with Fountains in the midft. feveral Knights of St. James live in this Town, and the Metropolis, which is dedicated to this Saint, keeps his Body: It is extream flately, and prodigiously rich : It is pretended you hear a kind of Clattering at his Tomb, as if Arms were struck one against another; and this Noise is only heard when the Spaniards are to undergo any great Loss. His Fig is represented on the Altar, and the Pilgrims thrice kin and put their Hats on his Head; for this is the chief part the Ceremony: they have also another very fingular one; the afcend the Top of the Church, which is covered with great f Stones; In this place stands a Cross of Iron, whereon the Pilgrims ever faften some Rag, or Scrap of what they wear . They pass under this Cross by so strait a Passage, that they are forced to crawl on their Bellies through it; and those who are not flender, are in danger of being burften. And there have been fome fo ridiculous and superfittious, that having omitted to do this they have exprelly return'd back again three or four hundred Leagues, for you fee here Pilgrims of all Nations. Here is a French Chapel, of which great Care is taken; It is faid, the Kings of France have been always great Benefactors to it. The Church which is under ground is better than that above. there are flately Tombs, and Epitaphs of great Antiquity, which exercise the Wits of Travellers. The Archiepiscopal Palace is a wast Pile, and its Antiquity adds to its Beauty, inflead of diminishing it. A Man of my Acquaintance, a great Searcher into Etymologies, affured me the Town of Compostella was so called, because St. Fames was to suffer Martyrdom in the place where he should see a Star appear at Compostella. It is true, continued he, that some People pretend it to be thus; but the Peoples Credulity and Superstition carries'em further; for you are shew'd at Padron near Compostella, an hollow Stone; and it is pretended this was the little Boat in which St. James arriv'd, after he had past so many Seas in it, which being of Stone, must have, without a fignal Miracle, funk to the bottom. I suppose, said I to him, you believe this to be most true, He smilled, and continued his Discourse : I cannot but give you the description of our Militia: They are called together every Year in the Month of October, and all the Young Men from the Age of Fifteen are oblig'd to march; for should it happen that a Father, or any other Relation should conceal his Son or Kinfman, and those who are Officers should come to know it, they would condemn him who has fo offended, to perpetual Imprisonment. There have been some Examples of this, but they are rare; for the Pealants are lo infinitely pleas'd to fee themselves Arm'd, and treated as Cavalieros of de Nobles Saldados del Rey, that they would not for any Confideration be wanting to shew themselves on this oceasion. You shall seldom see in an whole Regiment any Souldier that has more Shirts than that on his Back; and the Stuff

they wear feems for its Coarleness to be made of Pack-threat their Shoes are made of Cord; they wear no Stockins, yet ev ry Man has his Peacock, or Dunghil Cock's Feather in his Cap which is tied up behind, with a Rag about his Neck in form of a Ruff; their Sword oftentimes hangs by their fide tied with a bit of Cord, and ordinary without a Scabbard; the rest of their Arms is seldom in better Order: and in this Equipage they march gravely to Tuy, where is the General Rendezvous it being a Frontier place to Portugal. There are three which lie thus, the above-mention'd, Cindud-Rodrigo, and Badajor, but Tuy is the best guarded, because it is over-against Valantia, a confiderable Town belonging to the King of Portugal, and which has been carefully fortifi'd : These two Towns are so near, that their Cannon will reach each other; and if the Portuguises have omitted nothing to put Valantia out of danger of being insulted over, the Spaniards pretend Tuy is in as good a Condition to defend it felf; It stands on an Hill, whose lower, part is wash'd by the River Minhio; it has good Ramparts, strong Walls, and good store of Artillery. It is here, I say, where these our Champions bid Defiance to the King's Enemies, and in a strutting Bravery, declare, they do not fear em. Perhaps fomething of this may happen in time, for here are form'd some Troops as in any other part of Spain. However, this is a great loss to the Kingdom, the whole Youth being thus taken up; for the Lands, for the most part lye untill'd, and on the fide of St. James de Compostella, you wou'd think you faw a Wilderness; on that of the Ocean, the Country being better and more peopled, yields great Profit, and all things necessary and convenient, as Oranges, Lemmons and Pomgranates, several forts of Fruits, and excellent Fish, especially Pilchards, more delicate than those which come from Royan to Bordeaux.

One of the most remarkable things, in my mind, in this Kingdom, is the Town of Ditense, one part of which always enjoys the sweetness of the Spring, and the Fruits of Autumn, by reason of several Springs of Boiling Water, which warm the Air by their Exhalations; whil's the other part of this same Town suffers the Rigors of the longest Winters, standing as it does at the Foot of a very cold Mountain; so that you find in the space of one only Season, all those which compose the

You say nothing, replied I to him, of the marvellous Fountain, call'd Louzano. Who have told you of it Madam? as swer'd be. Persons that have seen it, added I. You have been then then told, cantinued be, that on the top of the Mountain of Cerbet, you find this Fountain at the Source of the River Lours; which has Flux and Reflux as the Sea, tho it be at twenty Leagues distance from it; that the greater the Heats are, the more Water it casts, that this Water is sometimes cold as Ice, and sometimes as hot as if it boil'd, there being no Natural Cause to be giv'n for it. You learn me Particulars I was ignorant of, said I to him, and this is doing me a great pleasure, for I want not for Curiosity in relation to things uncommon. I wish, replied he, 'tswas not so late, I would give you an account of several Rarities in Spain, and which perhaps you would gladly learn. I leave you for to Night, said I to him, but I hope before we come to Madrid, we shall have an opportunity of discoursing of them. He very civilly made me a Promise; and the Play being ended, we bad one

When I would go to reft, I was led into a Gallery full of Beds, as you fee in Hospitals: I said, this was ridiculous and that needing only four, what occasion was there for shewing me forty, and to put me into such an open place to starve me? I was answer'd. This was the best place in the House. and I must take up with it. I caus'd my Bed to be made, when scarce was I laid down, but some body knockt softly at my Door; my Women opened it, and remained much surprized to see the Master and Mistress followed by a dozen of forty creatures, and so cloath'd that they were half naked.' I drew my Curtain at the Noise they made, and opened more mine Eyes at the fight of this Noble Company. The Mistress drew near to me, and told me, These were honest Travellers, who were coming into the Beds which remained empty. How, lie here? faid I, I believe you have lost your Senses. I should have lost 'em indeed, replied she, should I let so many Beds stand Empty. Either, Madam, you must pay for them, or these honest Gentlemen must lye in them. I cannot express my Rage to you; I was in the mind to fend for Don Fernand and my Knights, who would have fooner made 'em pass through the Windows than through the Doors: But I confidered this could not be done without some Disturbance, and therefore I came to Terms, and agreed to pay 20 d. for each Bed : they are hardly dearer at Fontainbleau when the Court is there. These Illustrious Dons, or, to speak better, Tatterdemalions, who had the Infolence to come into my Room, immediately withdrew, having made me several profound Reverences.

The next Morning I thought to have burft with laughter.

Trick to ruin me: For you must know in the first place, that these pretended Travellers were their Neighbours, and that they are accustomed to this Stratagem, when they see Strangers: But when I would have reckoned the Beds to pay for om, they were rowled all of em into the midst of the Gallery; there were divers wretched Throughs of Straw pull'd out, which were hardly good enough to entertain Dogs, yet I must pay for each 20 d. Four Pistoles ended our Dispute. I was not able to put my self in a Passion, such singularity did I find in this Management. I would not recount this little Accident to you, did it not serve to give you some insight into the Humour of this Nation.

We let out from Burgos very late, the Weather was so bad, and there had fall n in the Night fuch great quantity of Rain. that I tarry'd there as long as I could, in expectation of its ceafing. In fine, I came to a Resolution, and ascended my Litter. I had not gotten far from the Town, but I repented of my leaving it; no Track cou'd be scen, especially on a very high steep Mountain, over which we must necessarily pala-One of our Mule-drivers, who went before, ftruck too far on the Edge of this Mountain, fo that he fell with his Mule into a kind of Precipice, where he broke his Head, and put his Arm out of joynt; this being the famous Philip de St. Sebastian, the most intelligent of all his Profession, and who commonly carries Persons of Quality to Madrid; he was therefore much bembaned; and we remain'd a great while before we could hale him out from the fourty place where he had fall'n; Don Fernand was so compassionate as to let him have his Litter. The Night came speedily on us and we could have comforted our felves, could we have return'd to Burgos, but it was impossible, the ways were no less covered with Snow on that fide, than all the reft; so that we put in at Madrigalesco. which has not above a dozen Houses, and I may say we were belieg'd without having any Enemies. This Adventure gave us fome diffurbance, tho'we had brought Provisions with us for several Days. The best House of the Town has half uncovered; and I was scarce lodged there, when a Venerable Old Man akt for me on the part of a Lady who was just arriv'd a He made me a Compliment, and told me, He was inform'd this was the only place where there was any tolerable Entertainment; and therefore intreated me to spare her some room. He added, She was a Person of Quality of Andalousia, was lately a Widow, and that he had the Honour to belong to her. One

One of our Knights, named Don Effece, de Carjanal, who is of the same Country, fail'd not to demand her Name of the old Gentleman: He told him, she was the Marchioness de Los Ries. At this Name he turn'd towards me, and spake to me of her as of a Person whose Merit and Fortune were very considerable; I readily accepted of this good Company: She immediately came in her Litter, out of which she had not descended having found no House where she could abide.

Her Dress seem'd to me very singular; had she not been so handsome as she was, she could never have appear'd in any sort tolerable: Her Gown and Petticoat was of black Serge, and over them a kind of Linnen Surplice, which reacht down lower than her Knees; the Sleeves were long, and strait in the Arms, which hung over her Hands: This Surplice was fastned to her Gown, and being not pleated behind, it seem'd like a Bib: she wore on her Head a piece of Muslin, which covered her Face, and one would have taken it for a Religiose's Hood; this covered her Neck, and reach'd down very low: There appear'd no Hair on her Head, they were all hid under this Muslin: She wore a great Mantle of Black Tassaty, which covered her Heels; and over this Mantle she had an Hat, whose Brims were very large, sastened under her Chin with silken Twist. I was told they wear this but only when they travel.

This is the Habit of the Widows and Duenna's, a Drefs which is insupportable to my sight; and should one meet with a Woman in the Night thus cloath'd one might be startled without Reproach; yet the Lady was very beautiful in this Unseemly Dress. They never leave it, unless they marry; and they are oblig'd to bewail the Death of an Husband, whom they could not endure when living.

I was inform'd they pass the first Year of their Mourning in a Chamber hung with Black, wherein there is not the least eliminering of Day-light to be seen; they sit cross-legg'd on a little Holland Quilt. When this Year is ended, they retire into a Chamber hung with Gray: they must have no Pictures, nor Looking-Glasses, nor Cabinets, nor fine Tables, nor Plate, neither must they have any Diamonds, or wear any Colours: slowever modest they are, they must live so retired, that it must seem their Soul is already in the other world. This Conbraint is the cause that several Ladies who are wealthy, and specially in rich Houshold-Goods, marry again to have the saissaction of making use of them.

After the first Compliments I inform'd my self from this mournful Widow where she was going; she told me, She had not for a long time feen a Friend of her Mother's who was Religious at Lashuelgas de Burgos, which is a famous Nunnery, wherein there is an hundred and fifty Nuns, most of 'em the Daughters of Princes, Dukes and Titulado's. She added, That the Abbels is Lady of fourteen large Towns, and above fifty other Places, wherein The chuses Governors and Magistrates; that the is Superior of seventeen Convents; Collates to several Benefices, and disposes of twelve Commanderships in favour of whom she pleases. She told me she design'd to pass some time in this Monastery : Can you, Madam, faid I to her, accustom your self to so retired a Life as is that of a Convent? It will be no bard matter, faid fhe, for I believe I fee fewer People at my own House than I shall see there; and in effect these Religion have Liberty enough: They are commonly the handsomest young Wemen of the Family who are there; these enter therein so youngs that they know not what they are made to leave, nor what they undertake at the Age of six or seven, and it may be sooner. They are caused to make Vows, when 'tis often the Father or Mother, or some near Relation, who pronounce them for 'em, whilst the little Sacrifice disports ber self with Sugar-plums, and lets'em dress ber bow they will: Tet the Bargain bolds, there's no unfaying it; bowever, they have every thing which can be expedied in their Condition. There are at Madrid some whom they call the Ladies of St. James : they are properly Canonnesses, who make their Try als like the Knights of this Order; they bear like them, a Sword made in form of a Cross, embroidered with Crimson Silk; the bave 'em on their Scapularies and great Cloaks, which are white These Ladies House is very stately; all who come to visit 'em ente without any difficulty; their Apartments are very fine, and even whit as well furnish'd as if they were at large in the World; the enjoy great Penfions, and each of em has three or four Women ! wait on them : It's true, they never sir out, nor see their neare Relations, but through several Grates. This perhaps would la borrid in another Country, but in Spain they are accustomed to Con finement.

Madam, said I to her, it would have been great pity, had your Relations design d you for such a Life; and one may judge, in bebolding you, that all the beautiful Spanish Ladies are not Religioses.
Alas, Madam, said she, in fetching a deep Sigh, I know not what I wou'd be; it seems I am of a very odd Humor, not to be contented with my Fortune; but one has sometimes Uneasinesses which are unaccountable to reason. In ending these words, she

Whatever Curiofity I had to know the Subject, we had been fo little together, that I dared not defire to be her Confident but to draw her from the melancholy Posture she was in, I entreated her to tell me some News of the Court of Spain, seeing the came from Madrid. She did what the cou'd to recover her felf: the then told me, There were great thews of Joy at Court on the Queen's Birth day: that the King had fent one of the Gentlemen of his Chamber to Toledo, to Compliment her from him : Yet these fine Appearances hindred not the Marquels de Mansera, the Queen's Major Domo, from receiving Orders to retire twenty Leagues from the Court, which had greatly mortifi'd this Princels. She inform'd us, That the Fleet which carried Troops to Galicia, was unhappily cast away on the Coasts of Portugal. That the little Dutchess de Terra Nova, was to Espouse Don Nicolo Pignatelli, Prince de Monteeon, her Uncle. That the Marquess de Laganez had refused the lice-royality of Sardagnia, being in love with a fine Lady, whom e cou'd not find in his heart to leave. That Don Carlos de Imodei, Marquess d' Almanazid, was dangerously ill, at his disappointment of being admitted a Grandee of Spain, to thich he prefended; having marry'd the Heirels of the House nd Grandeurship of Castle Rodrigue; and that which most senbly afflicted him, was, that Don Ariel de Gusman, this Lady's rff Husband, had enjoyed this Honour; fo that he cou'd not ut look on the Difficulties thrown in his way as a flighting of is Person: In truth Madam, said I to her, I can hardly comrehend how a Man of sence, can with such eagerness pursue, and fo greatly dejected at a Disappointment of this Nature. They moreover provided, That if the Kings of Operany one of his Subjects, the great and confiderable of Kingdom might affemble themselves, and hinder his received any of his Revenues, till the Innocent was acquitted and establish in his former Rights. And to make Garage timely sensible of the Power this Man had over him him on a kind of a Throne, and made the King to kneed bare headed before him, to receive from him his Oath of ing their Priviledges. This Ceremony ended, they acknowledge him their Sovereign, but in as odd as disrely still a Manner, for instead of promising him Fidelity and Obstience they say to him. We who are as good Men as your self, we make you our King and Governour, on Condition you keep to us our Rights and Properties, otherwise we Disacknowledge you.

The King, Don Pedro, in process of time coming to the Crown, relished this Custom, as unworthy of the Regal States and it so greatly disgusted him, that by his Authority and Intreaties, and the Offers he made of bestowing several notable Priviledges on the Kingdom, he procured the Abolishment of this, in an Assembly of the States: he got this general Consent in Writing, which was represented to him. As soon as he had the Parchment, he drew out his Dagger, and pierced his Hand with it, saying, 'Twas sit a Law which gave Subjects the Liberty of chusing their Sovereign should be Essaced with their Sovereign's Blood. His Statue is still seen in the Deputation-Hall of Saragossa: he holds a Dagger in one Hand, and the Charter in the other. The late Kings have not been such Religious Colors.

vers of their Priviledges as the first.

But there is a Law still in force, and which is very singular, and this they call, The Law of Manifestation; which is, That if an Arragonois had Wrong done him in Judgement, in configning 500 Crowns he may bring his Cause before the who is obliged, after an exact Perquisition, to our strain has giv'n a wrong Sentence: And if he fails there is the prest Person may have Recourse to the States of the Kingdom who Assemble and Nominate five Persons of their Body, which is to say, of the Prime Nobility, the Ecclesiasticks, the Gentry and Commonalty: they appoint three out of the first Bank and two from each of the others. But it is observable, not choose the most Ignorant to Judge the most able Min in the Gown, whether to disgrace em the more for the strain of as they alledge, That Tustic Balla the strain that the Plow-men, and those who understand the least, should discern the without the help of Oratory. It likewise affirm'd, that the Judges tremble when they pronounce a Sentence, searing less it turn against themselves, to the loss of their Lives or Estates, should they commit the less Fault therein, either wilfully, or through inadvertency. It were well if this Custom were observed in all Kingdoms: but this is rather to be wished than expected.

Yet what is no less singular, is that Justice remains always Soveraign; and though the Unjust Judge be punished severely for his wrong Decree, yet it subsists in its full force, and is sully executed: If then any unhappy Wretch be sentenced to Death, he is not spared, the his Innocency be discovered, and made as clear as Noon-day, but his Judges are executed too before his Face; which, in my mind, is a poor Consolation. If the Judge accused, as justly performed his Office, the Plaintiff leaves the 500 Crowns which he had consigned. But were he to lose an 100000 Crowns of Annual Revenue, by the Sentence he complains of, the Sentence or Decree remains good, and the Judge is only condemned to pay him likewise 500 Crowns; the rest of this Judge's Estate is torseited to the King; which is in my Opinion, another Point of Injustice; for in sine, he ought, above all others, to have Recompence made him who suffers by a wrong Sentence.

These same People have another Custom, to distinguish by the Punishment the Crime committed: for Example, A Cavalier, who has kill'd another in Duel (for they are here strictly forbid,) he has his Head cut off before; and he that has Assassinated, his is cut off behind. This is to distinguish him who has behaved himself like a brave Man, from him that kills you

She added, That to speak in general of the Arragonois, They have a Natural Pride, which is hard to be suppress'd: but like wife to do them Justice, there are People of brave Minds to be found among them; insomuch, that they are easily discerned from all the rest of the King of Spain's Subjects: That they have never wanted Great Men, from their first King to Ferdinand: That they counted such a great number of them, would scarce be believ'd. However, they have greatly recommended themselves by their Valour and Condust. That as the rest, their Country was so little fruitful, that excepting some Valleys which were watered by Channels, whose Water came from the Ebre, the rest was so dry and sandy, that you meet with scarce any thing else but stony and parched up places: That Sarragossa is a great City, the Houses siner than a Madrid:

And this is what himself acknowledg'd o the Souldiers who found him, and faw this fad Spectacle.

The Beautiful Marchioness here held her peace; and I reun'd her all due Thanks for the Favour she did me, in informng me of these Curiosities; and of which, perhaps without er I might have been Ignorant all my Life. I do not think, Madam, said she to me, you owe me such Thanks; I rather fear the baving deferv dReproaches for so long and tiresome aConversation. I would not let her leave me to eat elsewhere; and I obliged her to lye with me, she having no Bed. So Civil and Courteous a Proceeding made her much my Friend. She affured me of this in such Affectionate Terms, that I could not doubt of it; for I must tell you, the Spanish Women are more Careffing than we, and are far more Kind and Tender to those they profess Friendship. In fine, I could not forbear telling her, That if she had all the Kindness for me she made profession. the must be so complassant, to inform me what made ber seem s melancholly? That I had beard her fetch deep Sighs in the Night, and appear'd very Restless and Disconsolate; That if she could find any Comfort in sharing her Grief with me, I offered my Service to her, as a most faithful Friend. She embraced me with great Affection, and told me, without delay, she would immediate ly fatisfie my Curiofity; which she did in these Terms :

Seeing you are desirous to know me, I must without disguising to you any thing, acknowledge my Weakness to you: and by my Sincerity and Open-beartedness, deserve a Curiosity as obliging as your :

I come not of fuch a Family as may claim Nobility; my Father's Name was Davila; he was only a Banker, but he was in good Credit, and was moderately Wealthy: We are of Seville, Capital of Andalousia, and we have ever dwelt there. My Mother knew the World, she saw many People of Quality, and having no Children but me, she took great care of my Education: I did not appear ill-bestowed on me; for I had the good For tune to get the good Will of most that saw me.

We had two Neighbours who came often to our House who were very welcome both to my Father and Mother Their Condition and Age were in no fort alike; One was a Marquels de Los Rios, a Perfon Wealthy and Noble; he was Widower, and well advanced in years: the other was a Son of a great Merchant, who traded to the Indies; he was Young and handsome, he had Wit, and very graceful Benvione, his Name was Mendez; He was not long before he to passionately in Love with me; so that he omitted nothing which might please me, and gain my affections.

He was in all places where he knew I was to pass; he spewhole Nights under my Windows, to sing Verses which had composed and set to my Praise, which he had very we make use of the first occasion to acquaint me with it. I avoided him ever fince I had a Conversation with one of my Friends, who had more Experience and Knowledge of the World than I: I had felt, that Mender's Company gave me Joy, and that my Heart had an Emotion for him, which it had not for others: That when his Affairs, or our Vifits hindred him from feeing me, I grew reftless; and loving this young Woman, above others, and being as dear to her, the observ'd I was not so free and gay as I was wont, and that my Eyes were fometimes attentively fixed on Mendez. One day when she rally'd with me about it, I faid to her very innocently, My dear Henrictia, define to me the Sentiments I have for Mendez : I knew not whether I ought to be afraid of them, and whether I ought not to defend my (elf from them. I feel I know not what fort of Trouble and Pleasure arising in my Breast. She began to laugh, the embraced me, and faid to me, My dear Heart, you are in Love. Who, I in Love ? reply'd I, in amaze : Tou joke with me; I neither am, nor will be in Love. This depends not always on us, continued she, with a more serious Air, our Stars decide this before our Hearts. But in earnest, what is it so much startles you? Mendez is in a Condition equal to yours; be deserves well, a good comly Man; and if his Affairs go on with the fame Success as they have done hitherto, you may live very happily with him. And whence should I learn, apply'd I, interrupting her, that he will be happy with me, and that he fo much as thinks this, O take my Word for it answer'd she, whatever he has done has its Designs; for Men are not wont to pass Nights under Windows, and the Days infollowing a Perfin for whom they have nothing but Indifferency.

After some other Discourse of this Nature, the left me, and I resolved, maugre the Repugnance I felt in me, to give Mendez no opportunity of speaking to me in particular.

But one Night as I was walking in the Garden, he came towards me: I was perplext to fee my self alone with him; and he had the opportunity of observing it on my Countenance, and in the manner after which I received him. This could not divert him from the design he had of entertaining me: How Happy am I, Madam, said he, to find you alone? But do I call my self Happy! Perhaps I know not what I say: for it may be you will not receive a Secret with which I would entrust you. I am as yet so young, said I to him, blushing, that I would advise you to say nothing to me, unless you would have me impart it to my Companions. Alas, continued he, should I tell you, I adore you; that all my Happiness depends on the Inclinations you have towards me: That I cannot live without some Certainty, that I may one day please you; will you tell this to your Companions? No, said I to him in great perplexity, I would look on this Considence as a Railery, and not believing it my self, I would not bazard its being left to be believed by others.

We were interrupted as I ended these words; and he appear'd to me not over-content with the Answer I made him; and a while after he found an opportunity to reproach we with it.

I could not but give a favourable Ear to the Inclinations I had towards him; every thing he told me feem'd to me to have its particular Gracefulness. And it was no hard matter for him to perfivade me, that he lov'd me above all things in the World. In the mean time, the Marquess de Los Rios took such a liking to me, and my Person and Behaviour ran so deeply in his Thoughts, that he wholly applied himself to please me. He was very nice and cautious; he could not resolve with himself to owe me wholly to my Parents Authority: He well knew they would receive as an Honour the Intentions he had for me; but he was for gaining my Confent before he demanded theirs.

In this Delign he faid all to me he thought was like to take with me. I arfwer'd him, I flould always think it an indifpenfable Duty to obey my Father : yet our Ages were fo diffe rent, that I told him, I thought 'twere better he left off think ing of me; that I should have an everlasting Acknowledgment for the advantageous Intentions he had for me : and there fore I would esteem him, tho I could not love him. He ving heard what I faid, he was sometime without speaking and immediately taking up a very generous Resolution: Love Mariana, fays he, you might have made me the happiest Man the World; and if you were ambitious, I had therewith to satisf you : But you refuse me, and I desire to be anothers : I consent it; I love you too well to be in suspence, whether you are to be satisfied or I; I therefore wholly facrifice my Happiness to you and leave you for ever. In ending these Words he left me, and appear'd to afflicted, that I could not forbear being concern'd.

Mendez arriv'd a while after, and found me melancholly He was so earnest with me to know the Cause, that I could not deny him this Proof of my Complisance. Any one but he would have had a sensible Obligation at the Exclusion I came from giving his Rival: But far from seeming to value it, be told me, He saw in mine Eyes the Regret I had for a Love who could place me in another sort of a Rank than he was able and that my Proceeding was very Cruel. He, in fine, at last understood he had no Reason to Complain; he came to me, begg'd my Pardon, and testified to me a great Displeasure at his own Jealousie: He excused himself, as all Lovers do, on the strength of his Passion. I had so much Weakness as to be willing to forget the Trouble he had given me: we made up the Matter between us, and he continued on his Courtship.

His Father having underflood the Passion he had for me, thought he could not procure him a more advantageous Marriage; he took notice of it to him, and came afterwards to my Father, to open to him the Proposal: they had been long Friends; he was favourably heard, and they easily agreed on the Matter.

Mendez came to inform me of the News, with such Transports as would have seem'd ridiculous to any other than a Mistress. My Mother order'd me to look kindly on him, telling me this Affair would be advantageous to me: and as soon as the India-Fleet should arrive, wherein he was greatly concern'd, the Marriage should be concluded.

Whilft matters thus past, the Marquess de Los Rios had retired to one of his Country Houses, where he scarcely saw any one: He led a languishing Life; he still lov'd me, but hindred himself from telling me so, and from comforting himself by this innocent Remedy.

In fine, his Body could not relift the Heaviness of his Mind; he fell dangerously ill, and being told by the Physicians, there was no hope of his Recovery, he pluckt up his Spirits to write me the most affectionate Letter imaginable, and sent at the same time to me a Deed of Gift of all his Estate, in case he dyed. My Mother was in my Chamber, when a Gentleman presented this Packet from him; she would know what it contain'd.

I could not forbear at the same time, telling her what had past; and we were both of us in the greatest surprize at the Marquess's extream Generosity. She sent him word, that I should go with my Family to thank him for a Liberality which I had no ways deserv'd: And in particular, she sharply reprehended me for having made a Mystery of a thing to her, with which I ought to have immediately acquainted her, I threw my self at her Feet, I excused my self the best I could, and testified such great Sorrow for having displeas'd her, that she easily pardon'd me. Leaving my Chamber, she went to my Father, and having learnt him all which had past, they resolv'd to go the next morning to see the Marquess, and to carry me with them.

I acquainted Mendez with this in the Evening; and the Fear I had, left my Parents should, in fine, make me marry this old Man, if he chanced to escape out of his Sickness. However sensible I appear'd to him of this, he was so far transported, and reproach me so greatly with it, that I must have love him as much as I did, not to have broke off with him: But he had such an Ascendant over me, though he was the Injustest of all Men, yet I thought him the most Reasonable.

We were at the Marquess de Los Rio's, his Country-house was not above two Leagues from Seville: Dying, as he was, he receiv'd us with fuch Joy as was eafily observable. My Father testihid to him his Grief, to fee him in fo low a Condition, thankt him for the Donation he made me and affured him if he could find a fair and just Pretence, he would break off with Mendez, to whom he had engaged his Word: That should this happen, he promise him folemnly I should be no Body's but his. He receiv'd this Affurance in the same manner as if he had received a perfect Felicity; but he knew well the Dolor I conceived thereat: I became Pale, my Eyes were covered with Tears; and when we were about leaving him, he defired me to draw hear to him; he told me with a languishing Tone : Fear nothing, Mariana; I love you too well to displease you; you shall have Mendez, seeing your Affestions are engaged to him. I answered him: I had no particular Inclination for him; but being commanded to respect him, as a Man who was to be my Husband, I could do no otherwife; however, I intreated him to be well.

This feem'd to me the least step I could take towards Person to whom I had so great Obligations. He appeared thereat sufficiently satisfy'd, attempting to take my Hand and kiss it: Remember, said he to me, you enjoyn me to live; and that my Life being your Work you will be oblig'd to conserve it We return'd at Night, and the Impatient Mendez waited to us, to make me new Reproaches: I took 'em as I was wont as Proofs of his Paffion : and having justified my felf, I ask him, What News there was of the Fleet, Alas! faid he to me my Father has received such as drives me to Dispair : I dare no inform you. Have you any thing separate from me? said I to him looking tenderly on him: Would you have me to be refolved to you? I am too Happy, replied he, in that you have such favoure ble Dispositions; and being not able to keep any Secret from I must plainly tell you, that the Galion in which is our who Estate, is split and lost, running against a Rock. But I should less sensible, how greatly soever I am Interest, did I not look the Unhappy Consequences of this Loss: Your Presence will refin t be Marquels de Los Rios to bis Health; bis Sentiments for are known in your Family; he is Rich, and a great Lord:

become Miserable; and if you forsake me, my dear Mariana, I shall have no more Hope but in speedy Death. I was pierced with Sorrow at this sad News: I took one of his Hands, and closing it with mine, I said to him, My dear Mendez, do not think me capable of loving you, and yet leaving you, by the Effects of your good or bad Fortune: if you be able to bear up against it, believe me so too. I call Heaven to witness, continued I, provided you love me, and be faithful to me, that I will never forsake you; and let it punish me if ever I prove Inconstant.

He testissid all the acknowledgements he ought me for such affectionate Assurances, and we resolv'd not to divulge this Acci-

I withdrew very melancholly, and shut my self up in my Closet, ruminating on the Consequences of this sad Disaster. I was still there, when I heard some Body knocking softly at the Shutters of my Window: I drew near, and saw Mendez by the Light of the Moon: What do you here, said I to him, at this time of the Night? Alas, answer'd he to me, I was trying whether I could speak with you before I departed: My Father has again lately received News of the Galion, and will have me immediately go where she is run a ground, to endeavour to save something: It is a great way thither, and I shall be a great while without seeing you. Ah, dear Mariana, during all this time will you be as good as your Word to me? May I hope my dear Mistress will be saithful to me? What Reason have I given you, Mendez, said I, interrupting him, to doubt it? Tes, continued I, I will love you the most Unfortunate Man in the World.

It would be to abuse your Patience, Madam, to relate to you whatsoever we said in this doleful Separation; and though there appear'd no Danger, yet our Hearts had a foreboding of what was afterwards to happen to us. The Day began to appear, and we must bid Adieu: I saw him shed Tears which were accompanied with mine.

I threw my felf on my Bed, rowling a thousand sad Thoughts in my Mind; and I appear'd the next Morning so out of Order, that my Father and Mother were asraid I was falling into some dangerous fit of Sickness.

Mendez his Father came to make them a Visit, to excuse his Son's parting without taking his Leave of them. He added, He had a Business which required such hast, as would not suffer him a Minute's time at his disposal. As to my self, Madam, I was comfortless, being insensible to every thing. And if any thing could ease me, 'twas some hours Conversation with my dear Henrietta, with whom I freely vented my Thoughts touching the long Absence of Mendez.

In the mean time the Marques de Los Rios was out of Danger, and my Father went often to see him: I observed one day great Alteration on my Mother's Countenance, she and my Father having been long shut up with the Religioses, who came to give 'em a Visit; and after a Conference of some time, they call'd me, without my being able to divine the Caufe.

I entred into their Apartment in such Disorder, that I knew not what I did. One of these good Fathers, Venerable by his Age and Habit, spake much to me about the Resignation we owe to the Divine Will, on his Providence, in every thing which relates to us : and the Close of his Discourse was, That Mendez was taken by the Algerines; that he was a Slave; and by his Misfortunes these Pyrates had learnt he was a rich Merchant's Son; which had occasion'd the setting him at an extraordinary Ranfom: That they were at Algiers in the time he arriv'd; they would have willingly brought him along with 'em, but the Money which they had for all, was not fufficient for him alone. That at their Return they had been at his Father's to inform him of this Vexatious Disaster; but found he had absented himfelf, that the loss of a Galion, on which was embarkt all his Effects, without being able to fave any thing, had induced him to avoid his Creditors, who fought him every-where, to throw him in Prison. That things being in this Condition. they faw no Remedy to poor Mendez his Misfortunes, being in the hands of Meluza the most famous and covetous of all the Corfaries; and that if I would follow their Advice, and that of my Parents, I would think of taking another Party. I had so far heard this Dreadful News in so ecstatic a Condition, that I could only interrupt them by fad Sighs; but when he told me, I must think of another Party; I burst out with Team and Shrieks, as made both my Father and Mother, and thele Religioses compassionate me.

I was carried into my Chamber as one nearer death than life, and Donna Henrietta was sent for, and it was not without great Affliction she beheld me in this sad Condition. I fell into a most deep Melancholy; I tormented my felf day and night, and nothing was able to remove my dear Mendez out of my Mind.

id Cos | u hi thad the same defire of destroying my self as others had of saving themselves; that 'twas more my Interest than his, which made him act as he did. And being ravisht with having a Pretence which seemed to him plausible, he press my Father with such earnestness, that he at length consented to what he desired.

It is impossible for me to represent to you, Madam, in what an Abyss of Sorrow I was in: What is become my Lord, said I to the Marquels, of that scrupulous Tenderness which binder'd you from taking my heart from any other hand than my own? Let me at least have some time to forget Mendez; Perhaps his Absence and Missortunes may prevail on me to some Indifferency towards him. To this cruel Accident, which has snatched him so lately from me, you add new Troubles when you expect I should so peedily pass over from him to you.

I know not what I expect or may hope for, said he to me, but his I am sure of, that my Complaisance had like to have cost me my life; that if you be not design'd for me, you will be anothers and as to Mendez, his Fortune has been such, that he can no longer retend to you; and seeing you must be disposed of, I think you are very hard he arted to refuse me. You cannot be ignorant of what have done hitherto to please you, my former Proceeding should erve as a sufficient Testimony of my future Respects.

The Marquess made a greater progress in my Father's Mind han mine. In a Word, My Mother having one day sent for ne, told me, 'Twas to no purpose to use any longer Delays ny Father being resolv'd I should obey his Orders. Whatever, could say to excuse my self, my Tears, my Remonstrances, intreaties were all to no purpose, and serv'd only to exaspeate my Mother.

All things necessary were prepared for my Marriage, the sarquess would have every thing suitable to his Quality; He ent me a Cabinet of Jewels and Precious Stones, to the value several thousand Crowns. The fatal Day for our Wedding was set. Seeing my self reduced to this Extremity, I took a esolution which will surprise you, Madam, and demonstrate great Paffion.

I went to Donna Henrietta; this Friend had been ever faithil to me, and threw my self at her feet, surprizing her by so atraordinary a Carriage: My dear Henrietta, said I to her, helting in Tears, there is no Remedy to my Missortunes, unless in have pity on me; do not abandon me, let me conjure you in the id Condition I am in; to morrow I must marry the Marquess de os Rios, I can no longer avoid it. If the Offers of Priendship in have made me be Proof against all Tryal, and can make you capable of a generous Resolution, you will not refuse to follow Fortune, and to accompany me to Algiers to pay Mendez his R form, to redeem him from the Cruel Slavery he is in. You fee at your Feet, continued I, I will never rife till you have given your Word, to do what I defire you. She seemed so concern'd my Posture, that I arose to make her answer me. She imme diately embraced me with great Testimonies of Tenderness: will refuse you nothing, my dear Mariana, faid she to me, w it my very Life; but you are going to ruin your self and me n you. How can two Girls execute what you project? Our Age. Sex, and your Beauty, will expose us to Accidents, the bare im gination of which makes me to tremble: this is certain, we are ing to overwhelm our Families with Shame and Confusion; and you had make serious Reflections here on, it is not possible you con bave come to this Resolution. Ab, barbarous I cried I, and m barbarous than he that detains my Lover; you forsake me, tho' I am alone, yet that shall not hinder me from persuing Point, neither can the affistance you should give me stand me much stead : Remain, remain, I consent, it is fit I should desa without any comfort to affront all Dangers; Lconfess such an dertaking is fit only for a desperate Creature.

My Reproaches and Tears moved Henrietta; she told men Interest had obliged her as much as her own to speak to me she had done; but in short, seeing I persisted in my first a solution, and nothing could divert me from it, she was releved I should not go alone; That is I would be ruled by he we should disguise our selves; that she would undertake to two Suits of Mens Apparel; and as for the rest, it below to me to take care of it. I embraced her with a thousand Testimonies of Thankfulness.

I afterwards askt her, Whether she had seen the Jew which the Marquess had sent me; I will bring them said I to to purchase Mendez's Ransom with them. We resolved to no time, and we neither of us fail'd in what we had project

Never were two Maidens better disguised under the softwo Cavaliers. We parted that Night, and embark, selves without the least Obstacle, but after some days Sail were overtaken by so violent a Storm, as made us despair our Safety. In all this Disorder and Peril, I was less conced for my self, than for not having compassed my dear Mem Liberty, and for having engaged Henrietta to follow my ills tune: It is, said I to her, in embracing her, it is I my Companion, that has rais'd this Storm, were I not on the Swould be Calm; my Missortune follows me wherever I go. In

we having been a Day and two Mights in continual Alarums, the Weather chang'd, and we arriv'd at Algiers.

I was so glad to see my self in a Condition to deliver Mendez, that I reckon'd all the Dangers we underwent as nothing But alas, what became of me in disembarking, when after all the search which could be made, I perceived there was no hope of finding the little Cabinet wherein I had put all I had was most precious: I found my self seized with such violent Grief, that I thought I should have expired before I got out of the Vessel. Without doubt this Cabinet, which was little, and of which P took but small Care during the Tempest, sell into the Sea, or was stole, which ever of these two it was, I had a considerable Loss, and I had only remaining Jewels to the value of a thousand Pounds, which I had kept for all Events about me.

I resolv'd with this, to make a Tryal with Mendez's Patron: As soon as we were in the Town, we enquired out his House, for Meluza was well known and went thither clad as Gentlemen.

I cannot express to you, Madam, the trouble I was in drawing near this House, where I knew my dear Lover languisht in Chains; what sad Reflections did I not make; how did I look when I enter'd the Corsary's House, and saw Mendez Chain'd, with several others, who were leading out to work in the Field should have fallen at his Feet, had not Hemietta born me up, no longer knew where I was, not what I did; I would have poken to him but Grief had so seiz'd on my Spirits, that my longue could not utter a Word. As to him, he beheld me ot; he was so sad and depress, that he could look on no body; and one must love him as much as I did, to know him, so greatives he changed

After having been some time coming to my self, I went into low Room, where I was told Meluza was; I saluted him, and old him the occasion of my Voyage; that Mendez was my near elation; that he was undone by the Loss of a Galion, and his aptivity together; and that 'twas out of my own Money that would pay his Ransom. The Moor appeared to be little control, It was not his business to enquire whence I had my oney; but this he certainly knew, that Mendez was Rich; and to shew that he would not take all Advantages, he would erefore fet him at twenty thousand Growns.

Alas, what would this have been, had I not lost my Jewels? It this was too much in the Condition I was in. In fine, affeveral long fruitless Disputes, I took on me immediately a solution which could only be inspired by an extream Love.

Here's all I have, faid I to the Pyrate, in giving him my Diamonds, they are not worth what thou demandeft : take me for thy Slave, and be persuaded thou wilt not keep me long. I am the only Daughter of a Rich Banker of Seville; keep me for a Hoftage, and let Mendez go; he will foon return to Redeem me. The Barbarian was furpriz'd to find me capable of fo generous and affectionate a Resolution. Thou art worthy, said he to me of a better Fortune. Be it fo ; I accept the Condition you offer me: I will take care of thee, and be a good Patron to thee. Thou mult leave the Habit thou weareft, to put on one ugreeable to thy Sex : thou shalt keep thy Jewels if thou wilt, I can as well stay for the whole as for a part.

Donna Henrietta was so confused and dismayed at the Bargain I came from concluding, that the could not fufficiently expres her Displeasure to me; but in fine, maugre all her Remonftrances and Entreaties, I held firm, and Meluza caus'd a Slaves

Habit to be brought me, which I put on.

He conducted me to his Wives Chamber, to whom he deliver'd me, having recounted to her what I had done for my Lover's Liberty.

She feem'd to be much effected with it, and promis'd the would shorten the time of my Servitude by all the good Treat ments the could make me.

At Night, when Mendez return'd, Meluza caused him to be call'd, telling him, That being of Seville, he would there fore shew him a Slave he had bought, because perhaps he migh know her.

Immediately I was brought before him; Mendez at this fight lofing all Countenance, came and cast himself at my Feet, an taking my Hands, which he bathed with his Tears, he fai every thing which was most tender and affectionate to me Meluza and his Wife diverted themselves, in seeing the diffe rent Motions of Joy and Grief with which we were agitated in fine, they inform'd Mendez of the Obligations he had to me that he was free, and that I would remain in his place. R did whatever could be done to disswade me from taking the and Task on me: Alas, said he to me, you would have me load i mu with my Chains, my dear Mistress; Shall I be free, when i em are not? I go then to do for you what you come from doing for me are not? I go then to do for you what you come from for in fur our I will sell my self and Redeem you with this Money: for in fur our I will sell my self and Assistant any consider that should I as soon as I arrive at Seville, find Assistant any and return again to bring you back, yet how is it possible for me atte the mean time to leave you; judge how I can do this in a the known wherein my Fortune promises me nothing, and am the most Value p of all Men. I offered against all his Reasons, the Tenderness of my Father, who would foon Redeem me when he knew where I was. In fine, I made use of all the Power I had over his Mind, to make his Advantage of what I had done in his Fa-

What shall I say to you, Madam, of our Separation? It was fo dolorous, that words cannot express what we felt. I obliged Henrietta to part with him, to follicite and press my Parents to do their part in my behalf.

In the mean time my Father and Mother were in an unconceivable Affliction, and when they perceived my flight, they thought to die with Grief.

They blamed themselves infinitely for forcing me to marry the Marquess de Los Rios. He was for his part in no less Despair; they caused me to be searcht for in vain, in all places where they thought I might have hid my felf.

Two whole Years were past without my receiving any News or Succors from Mendez; which made me believe with great likelihood, that both he and Henrietta were cast away on the Sea: I had given them all the Jewels which Meluza had left me; but it was not their Loss, nor that of my Liberty, which I regretted: It was of my dear Lover and faithful Friend, whose Remembrance continually possess me, and caus'd me an unparallel'd Affliction; I could get no Rest nor Health; I wept Day and Night; I refused to come out of my Slavery in neglefting to fignifie to my Father my present Condition. I wisht only for a speedy Death; which I would have willingly met with, to put an end to my Troubles and Missortunes.

Meluza and his Wife began to pity me, they did not doubt but Mendez was cast away : they treated me less cruelly, than these fort of People are wont to use those Unhappy Wretches, who fall into their Hands.

One day, as Meluza came from Pyrating, he brought with him several Persons of both Sexes which he had taken, and among the rest a Young Woman of some Quality of Seville, and whom I knew. This fight renewed my Grief: the was much furpris'd to find me in this fad place. We affectionately embraced one another, and observing a deep filence; How now Beautiful Mariana, said she to me, are you so indifferent towards our Relations and Country, that you have no Curiofity to make my Enquiries about them? I lifted up mine Eyes to Heaven in the my Enquiries about them? I lifted up mine Eyes to Heaven in the intering a deep Sigh; I entreated her to tell me, If 'twere a the known where Mendez and Henrietta were lost? Who has told but they are lost? replied she, they are at Seville, where they lead lead a very happy Life. Mendez has re-establisht his affairs, and makes it his great Delight and Honour to publish in all places the Extream Obligations he has to Henrietta. Perhaps you are ignorant, continued she, that Mendez was taken and made a Slave by the Algerines; this generous young Woman disguised her self. and came hither to redeem him, but he has not been ungrateful, for he has married her. There is a most charming Union between them. Hymen has not banisht Love in their Particular.

As the was yet speaking, the perceiv'd my Countenance to alter on a sudden, and that I was ready to faint: my Strength fail'd me, mine Eyes closed, and I sunk down between her Arms; flie was greatly troubled at this; flie called my Companions; who put me to Bed, and endeavour'd to recover me from this pitious Condition.

This young Woman graetly concern'd her felf for me, and when I came to my felf, I began to complain; I uttered Sighs and Groans able to move a Rock.

Meluza was effected at the Recital of fuch a worse than barbarous Instance of Treachery, and without any notice to me, he inform'd himself, by his new Slave of my Fathers Name, and immediately wrote to him what he knew of my Misfortunes.

These Letters were like to have been the Death of my Mother, she could not imagine I could be in Chains at eighteen Years of Age, without shedding a torrent of Tears: But that which augmented her Grief, was, the Disorder of my Father's Affairs; feveral confiderable Bankrupts had ruined him; his Credit was gone, and it was impossible for him to procure the 20000 Crowns which Meluza demanded for my Ranson.

The Generous Marquels de Los Rios heard this News, came to my Father, and offered him what lay in his Power: I don't do this, said he, in design to force your Daughter's Inclination when the shall be here; I shall love her always, but I will never displease her. My Father having no other way of Relief, thank fully accepted of what was offered him; and in a word, em barkt himself, and happily arriv'd at Algiers, in the time when

I thought only of dying.

He forbore all those Reproaches I deserv'd; he redeem'd me and at my Intreaty, this young Woman of Sevelle, for a mo derate Ransom. We return'd together, and my Mother 10 ceiv'd me with fuch Joy as is impossible to be exprest. I an fwer'd hereto as much as was possible; but I carried always i my Heart, Madam, the fatal Stroke which had wounded me Perjus Whatever my Reason could represent to me, was not sufficient to eface out of my Remembrance the Image of the Traito le Mendez.

In fine I married him, and apprehending left I should fee Mendez, that Ungrateful Wretch, to whom I owe fuch Horrour, and for whom I had so little, I pray'd the Marquess we might dwell in the Country-house he had near Seville.

He ever approv'd of what I liked; he would have my Father and Mother retire; he less'ned the sad Condition of their Fortune, by confiderable Liberalities: and I may truly fay, there never was a greater Soul. Judge, Madam, of all the Reproaches I made my Heart for its not being so tender to him as it ought to have been : It was not in my power to forget Mendez, and I always felt new Regrets, when I learnt his Felicity with the Unfaithful Henrietta.

Having past two Years in a continual watching over my felf, that I might do nothing but what was agreeable to my Husband, Heaven depriv'd me of him, of this Generous Husband: and he did for me in these last Moments, what he had already heretofore done, giving me all he had, with such Tellimonies of Esteem and Affection, as much enhanced the Price of the Gift: He made me the richest Widow of Andalousia, but he could not make me the Happiest.

I would not return to Seville, where my Parents would have had me been; and to avoid it, I pretended a Journey farther into the Country, to look after some part of my Estate. I set out; but there being a particular Fatality in whatever relates to me, in arriving at an Inn, the first Object which struck my fight, was the Unfaithful Mendez: he was in deep Mourning, and had not lost nothing of whatever made me heretofore fancy him too Lovely. It is impossible to express the Condition I was in, for endeavouring to get speedily from im, I found my felf fo weak and trembling, that I fell at his Feet. Although he knew me not at that instant, yet he earnestly enwas conceal'd, flying open, what became of him in feeing me? T Te le remain'd no less confused than I was: He would have drawn pear to me, but casting a surious Look on him: Darest thou, le serjured Wretch! said I to him, darest thou approach me! ficien at thou not afraid of the just Punishment of thy Persidiousness? I raito le was some time without answering me, and I was about leaving leaving him when he stopt me: Confound and over-whelm me with Reproaches, Madam, said he to me: Give me the worst and most persidous Names as is possible; they cannot be more than I deserve: But my Death shall soon revenge your Quarrel: I ought to die with Sorrow for having betray'd you; and if I regret any thing in dying, it is only the having one Life to lose, to expiate all the Crimes you can justly accuse me of. He appear'd to me much affected in ending these words; and would to Heavens his Repentance were really sufficient and true! I would not hazard a long Conversation with him: I lest him, discaining to return him an Answer. And this Mark of Contempt and Slighting, was, without doubt, more sensible to him, than all the reproaches I might have made him.

He had some time since lost his Wise, that Unsaithful Crature, who had helpt him to Revolt against all the Offices of Love, Honour, and Gratitude. And from that time he sollow'd me every-where: he was like a Complaining Shadow, ever fastned to my Feet; for he became so lean, pale, and chang'd, that he was no longer discernable. Heavens! Madam, what Violence did I not offer my self, in continuing to ill Treat him: I sound at last I wanted Strength to resist the Weakness of my Heart, and the Ascendant this Wretch had over me. Rather than to commit so shameful an Offence, and to Forgive him, I parted for Madrid, where I have Relations, and sought among them a Shelter against the Violence of mine own Inclinations.

I was not there long but Mendez found me out: I must confess to you, I was not heartily displeas'd at his Attendance on me; but maugre my Inclination towards him. I put on a sim Resolution to avoid him, seeing I could not sincerely hate him; and unknown to every Body, I took the Road to Burgo, where I am going to Cloyster my self with a Religious there, my Friend. I flatter my self, Madam, with the Hopes of sinding more Rest there, than I have hitherto met with.

The Beautiful Marchioness here held her peace; and I tellified to her my particular Acknowledgments for the Favoursh had done me: I affured her of the part I took in her Adventures. I conjured her to write to me, and to let me hear from her at Madrid; and she promised it me in the most obliging manner as is possible.

Me found the next Morning we could not fet out, it having fnow'd all the Night, and no Path appearing on the Ground but we wanted not Company to pass the time in Play and Diffeourse. Having been three days with the Marchioness de Days

Rios, without any Weariness at the length of the Time, through the pleasure I had of seeing and hearing her talk, (for she is one of the most lovely Women in the World:) We parted with a mutual Regret, and it was not without doubling our promises of Writing to, and feeing one another hereafter.

The Weather mended, and I continued on my Journey to Lerma: We had traverst dreadful Mountains, which bear the Name of Sierra de Cogollos, and it was not without great trouble we got thither: This Town is small; she has given her Name to the famous Cardinal de Lerma, Chief Minister to Philip III: it is from him that Philip IV. took the great Revenues he had receiv'd from the King his Master. Here is a Castle which I will see to Morrow, and of which I shall give you an Account in my next. I am told an Extraordinary Express is arriv'd, and will set out to Night: I will say hold of this Opportunity of sending to you, and ending this long Letter; for in truth I am tired both with the Way, and with Writing, but I shall never be weary of Loving you.

Mar. 5. 1679.

A Relation of a Voyage to Spain, in Several Letters. Part. II.

LETTER V.

Y Last was so long, and I was so weary when I ended it, that I could not add some Particulars, which probably might not have been unwelcome to you; I proceed then (dear Kinswoman) to recount them, feeing you fo much defired it.

I arriv'd late at Lerma, and resolved to tarry some time to see the Castle which the Spaniards so highly esteem, that they prize it next the Escurial; and it is indeed a very sine place. The Cardinal de Lerma, Philip the Third's Favorite, was its Founder. It stands on the side of an Hill, and in your way to it you must pass through a spacious place, surrounded with Arches and Galleries about it. This Castle consists of sour wast Piles of building, which makes a compleat Quadrangle of two Ranges of Porches within the Court, which are near as high as the Roof, and hinder the apartments from Prospects on that fide. The Windows of all the Chambers look forward into the Country; the Rooms are spacious, and the Lodgings very fine and curioully gilt. There are a Prodigious number of them, and very well furnisht. Near the Castle you have a great Park which extends it felf along the Plain, through which runs a River, and several lesser Springs: On the side of the River, there are rows of great Trees, and not far hence a Wood, fo that I believe, in fine weather this is a delightful place.

The keeper of the Castle ask't me, whether I would see the Religioses, whose Convent is adjoyning thereunto. I told him most willingly; so that he made us pass through a Gallery, at the end of which you meet with a Grate which reaches from top to bottom. The Abbess, having been advertised of it, came here with feveral Religioses, who were very entertaining, handsome, witty and young, discoursing with great exactness of every thing. I was not weary of their Conversation, when a young Girl came and whispered the Abbess in the Ear, who afterwards told me there was a Lady of great Quality, who had retired into their House, being the Daughter of Don Mandrica de Lara, Count de Valine, and eldest Son to the Duke de Naxara; That she was Widow of Don Francisco Fernandez de Castro, Count de Lemos Grandee of Spain, and Duke de Tauresano; that when the knew of French Ladies paffing through Lerma, the was greatly defirous of entertaining them. I made answer, I should be glad of the honour of feeing her: Whereupon this young Girl was fent to her.

This Lady soon came in a Dress used by the Spaniards this hundred years; The had a kind of Pattins on, or rather Stilts, which made her look prodigious Tall, so that she was fain to lean on two persons shoulders when she moved. She leaned likewise on two Daughters of the Marquis del Carpio; one of them is of a very fair Complexion, which is rare in this Country, and the others Hair is as black as Jet. Their Beauty furpriz'd me, and they wanted only, in my mind, to be a little But this is not reckon'd a Defect in this Country, where they fancy leanness so much, that they defire only to have Skin and Bone. The fingular Dress of the Countess de Lemos, appeared to me so extraordinary, that I could hardly get mine eyes off of it. She wore a kind of black Sattin Gold embroider ed Bodice, and buttoned with great Rubies of confiderable value. This Bedice came down from her Neck just like 2 Doublet; her Sleeves were strait, with large Wings about her shoulders, and other Sleeves hanging as low as her Gown, which fence of Spi were fastened on each side with Roses of Diamonds; She had a dreadful Virdingal, which hindred her from sitting, otherwise then on the Ground. She wore a Russ, and several Chains of great Pearls and Diamonds; her Hair was white, which she hid under a Coverture of black Lace, for she was no less than 75 years old. She seem'd to me to have been a great Beauty in her time; her face had not a wrinkle, and her eyes were still sparkling, and her white and red Paint became her very well: Her wit and her Personage, as I have been told, were not a little samous in the World. I lookt upon her as a curious Piece of Antiquity.

she told me she had the honour to Accompany the Infanta when she espoused Lewis the Thirteenth. That she became acquainted with the Prince of Conde when he was in Flanders, and the Queen of Sweden came thither. You have seen this Queen, said I to her, interrupting her, be pleased, Madam, to savour me with a Relation of some Particulars of her humor.

You must know then, said she, that the King of Spain sent Don Antonio Pimentel in quality of Ambassador to Stockholm, to discover, as much as in him lay, the Intentions of the Swedes. They had been long Enemies to the House of Austria, and it was not doubted but they would make new attempts to thwart it, in the design of making the Emperour's Son King of the Romans; Pimentel was charged to carry on this Affair with geat Circumspection. He was a gallant, witty and handsome Person, and he succeeded better than could be expected. He immediately discovered the Queen's Genius, and easily made himself her Confident. He soon perceived she was mightily charm'd with Nevelties, and that of the crow'd of Strangers which she drew to the Court, the last come was the most saroured. He made it his Task to please her, and gained so far on her Affections, that he became inform'd by her felf of the most secret Affairs, and which she ought the most to conceal from him. But what cannot he do, who has found a way to the heart. The Queen's was so inclined to him, that he became the fole Disposer of the Affections of this Princess, and by this means was able to write to the Emperour, and to the Electors, things fo certain and agreeable, as made 'em eafily judge that the Queen of Sweedland's Council had no part in the Declaration she made in favour of the King of Hungary.

This Intrigue being at an end, twas thought the King would recal Pimentel, there appearing no occasion requiring the Prelence of an Ambassador: But if it were needless for the King of Spain, that he should remain at Stockholm, 'twas not the same with the Queen, she neglecting nothing whereby to retain him near her. He attended her wherever she went since, and many, who were led by outward Appearances, judged when she lest the Crown to her Cosin, she did it with great Satisfaction, because she did it with dry Eyes, and had the Courage to harangue the States with great Force and Eloquence; but the People were greatly mistaken in the secret Motives of this Princess. Her soul at that time was pierced with the most lovely forrow; she was not a little griev'd to yield to the Prince Palatine a Scepter which she thought her self worthy to wield alone, and of which she was the Lawful Heiress.

This Prince had the Address to get it declared, that if she married she should chuse him for her Husband.

Affoon as this Declaration was made, she began to feel the weight of the subjection wherein she was placed; and on the other hand, the People did not well relish the being governed by a Woman. They insisted more on her Defects than they minded her Vertues. The Prince contributed under-hand thereto, and the Queen, who was penetrating, soon perceiv'd it; she observed the Inclination the People had to him, and the wishes which were made to see him on the Throne; she grew every day more and more jealous of this, and pass from hence to such a deadly Hatred, that twas impossible for her to stop the Course of it. The Princes presence became so insupportable to her, that perceiving it, he withdrew into an Island which belong'd to him. But he set not out till he had left good Memoires to his Creatures against the Queen's Conduct.

When she saw her self deliver'd from an Object, whose fight was fo great an Eye-fore, the drew off her Mind from the too intent pursuit of the Affairs of the Kingdom, and gave way to her Inclinations to Books. Her marvellous Wit made, in a short time, admirable Progresses in the most profound Sciences; but these were not so needful to her as a good Conduct in the management of her Honour and Intereft, it often happens, that having spent several days in her Study, she would appear disgusted with her Books, saying, They were good for nothing but to wast the Spirits, and mislead Mens Judgments. When the Great Men of the Court faw her in this Disposition, they approacht her with more familiarity, and then the whole Business was to follow the Pleasures of Love, of Plays, Balls, Turneys, Huntings, and all other Diversions. She gave up her felf entirely to them, and nothing cou'd bring her off them; but she added to this Defect that of enriching Strangers, at the Expence of her own Subjects. The

The Swedes began to murmur at this; the Queen was advertised of it; their Complaints appear'd to be unjust, and little respectful; and being not a little offended at them, she was so unwise as to take Vengeance on her self. In effect, at the time when 'twas least expected, and when she was in a Condition to find less violent Remedies, she abandoned at one stroak her Crown and Kingdom to her Cosin; to this Cosin, I say, whom she was so far from loving, that she wish'd him all the ill she was able; and yet to whom she did so much good, she thought 'twas impossible for any to penetrate into the Motives of this. She pretended by this great stroak of Generosity, to distinguish her self from among the Heroina's of the most samous Ages: But in effect, the Conduct she held afterwards, distinguish'd her only to her Disadvantage.

She was feen to fet out from Swedeland in a very odd Drefs for al Woman, with a kind of Justaucorps, a short Petticoat, with Boots and Cravat, in a Perriwig, a Hat covered with Feathers, and this Periwig tied up in a lock behind, which seem'd then very ridiculous. She forbad all her Women to follow her, choosing only Men to serve her, and attend her. She was wont ordinarily to say, That she did not love Men as Men, but because they were not Women. So that she seem'd to have renounc'd her Sex in renouncing her States, although she had sometimes such Weaknesses, as wou'd have made the meanest Women ashamed.

The trusty Pimentel past over into Flanders with her, and I being then there, continues she, I saw him arrive; he procured me the honour to kis her hand, and there needed no less than his Credit to obtain this: for she sent word to all the Ladies of Brussels and Antwerp, she wou'd excuse them for their Visits. Yet she receiv'd me very well, and the little she said to me, appear'd full of Wit and extraordinary Vivacity; but she swore at every turn like a Souldier, and her Words and Astions were so free, not to say so dishonest, that were it not for her Rank, her Person wou'd have been little regarded.

She spake before every Body of the passionate desire she had to see the Prince of Conde; that his great Assions had charm'd her, and that she was desirous to learn the Trade of War under him. The Prince had no less desire to see her, than she testissed to see him. In the midst of this mutual Impatience, the Queen stopt on a sudden on some Formalities and steps which she refused to take, when he shou'd come to salute her. These Reasons hindred him from seeing her with the usual Ceremonies. But one day, when the Queen's Chamber was full of Courtiers, the Prince slipt therein; whether she had seen his Picture, or that his Martial Ayr had distinguish'd him from among other, she had singled him out, and knew him. She wou'd immediately hereupon have testifi'd as much to him, by extraordinary Civilities. He presently retired, and she follow'd to conduct him. Then he stopt, and contented himself with saying these words, Either All, or Nothing. Some few days after, an Interview was set on soot to be between them in the Mall in the Park at Brussels, where they fpake together with great Civility and much Coldness.

As to Don Antonio Pimentel, the Favours she has had for him, have made noise enough to come to your Ears, and if you be ignorant of 'em, Madam, I believe I ought not to undertake to learn you the Particulars, of which perhaps I my felf may have been ill inform'd. She held her peace, and I made my profit of this moment to thank her for Complaisance in given me an account of a Queen, who had ever giv'n me fuch a great Curiofity. She askt me afterwards, whether I had seen the Castle of Lerma. He that built it, said she, was Favorite to Phillip the Third, whose Death hapned very strangly This Prince, continued she, was writing Letters in his Clo-Set, and it being very cold that day, they had placed very near him a quick fire of Coals, whose reverberation struck so much on his face, that he was all in water, as if a great quantity of it had been poured on his Head. The eafiness of his temper hindred him from complaining, and even speaking of it; for he never found fault with any thing. The Marquis de Pobar having observ'd the incommodiousness which the King receiv'd by this extream heat, advertised the Duke d' Alva's Gentleman of his Chamber of it, to the end he might remove the Fire away: He replied, It was not his Office, and that the Duke Duesda ought to be made acquainted with it, whose proper Business it was. The Marquis de Pobar being troubled to fee the King thus fuffer, and not daring himself to ease him, for fear of invading another's Province, left the fire still in its place; but he fent to give notice of it to the Duke Duesda, who was by Misfortune gone near Madrid to fee a stately House he was their building. Word was brought of this again to the Marquis de Pobar, who proposed again to the Duke de Alva the taking away the fire. But he found him inflexible hereunto, and chose rather to fend into the Country, to the Duke Duesda, so that before he was come, the King was almost spent, and that very Night he fell into a violent Fever, accompanied with an Erifipellis, which inflamed, and the Inflamation degenerated into the Purples, which caused his Death.

I must confess, aid she, that having seen when I was abroad in the World, other Courts besides our own, I cou'd not forbear blaming these kind of Ceremonies and Punctilio's which hinder the taking of one slep faster than another, tho' life depended thereon. The old Counters of Lemo's lov'd to talk, and continuing her Discourse, and among other names mention'd that of the Count de Villa Mediana. I have heard, said I intersupting her, that this Gentleman, being one day in the Church of our Lady d' Arocha, and finding there a Religio's, who begg'd for the Souls of Purgatory, he gave him a piece of four pounds. Ab my Lord, laid the good Father, you have now deliver'd a Soul. The Count drew out again alike piece and put it into the Bason. Here's, continued the Religioso, another Soul delivered; He gave him in this manner fix, one after another, and at the droping of each piece, the Monk cryed Here's a Soul delivered from Purgatory. Will you be positive in it, replyed the Count. Tes, my Lord reply'd the Monk, I am certain they are now in Heaven. Give me now then back again my fix pieces, Jaid, he, for they signifie nothing to you, seeing the Souls are already got to Heav'n, there's no danger of their returning again to Purgatory. It was as you relate, Added the Countefs, but he took not again his Money, for this wou'd have been among us an horrid Sacriledge. And I knew a man of good quality, who being much hehind in the World, yet when he was dying, wou'd have fifteen thousand Masses to be said for him. His last Will was executed, and his poor Creditors defrauded; for how just foever their Debts be, they can expect to receive nothing till such time as all the Maffes which are left in the Will be faid. And this has given occasion to that common faving among us. That such an one has made his Soul his Heir; whereby is meant, that he has left his Estate to the Church to fay Prayers for him.

King Philip the Fourth ordered in his Will an hundred thoufand Masses to be said for him; farther declaring, That shou'd he cease needing them, they shou'd serve for his Father and Mother; and in case they were got to Heav'n, they shou'd be applied to the Souls of those who were slain in the Wars of Spain.

But what I have already told you of the Count de Villa Mediana, brings to my mind, that he being one day at Church with Queen Elizabeth, he saw a great deal of Money on the Altar, which was givn for the Souls in Purgatory. He drew near, and took it up in his hand, saying, My Love will last for ever, my Pains will be likewise Eternal, those of the Souls in Purgatory will have an end; alas, mine will never end: This hypercomforts them; as for me, I am without hope and comfort, so that these Charities

Charities are more due to me, than they. However, he took nothing away, only speaking these words as an occasion to bring in his Passion before this beautiful Queen, who was there present: For in effect, his was so violent for her, that there is some reason to think she was not wholly insensible of it, if her rigid Virtue had not preserved her heart against the Count's Merit. He was young, well shaped, handsome, brave, magnificent, gallant and witty; every Body knows how he appeared to his Missfortune in a Carosel at Madrid, with a Suit embroidered with pieces of new Mony called Realles, and which he bore for a Device; making an allusion to the word Reales, which is to say Royal, with the Passion he had for the Queen. This is siner in Spanish,

MIS AMORES, SON REALES.

The Count Duke d' Olivarez, the Kings Favorite, and the fecret Enemy to the Queen and the Count, made his Master take notice of the boldness of the Subject, who dared even in his Presence declare the Sentiments he had for the Queen; and in this moment he perswaded the King to be reveng'd on him. An Occasion was waited for which should made no noise. But here's what haftned his Ruine; applying his Mind only to divert the Queen, he wrote a Comedy which every Body likes, and the Queen, more than others, found therein such moving and delicate stroaks in it, that she wou'd act apart, in it her felt on the Kings Birth-Day. It was the Amorous Count, who managed and took care of the Festival; he ordered the Cloaths, and provided Machines, which cost him above Thirty thoufand Crowns. He had caused a great Cloud to be painted, under which the Queen was concealed in a Machine. He flood very near it, and at a certain fign he gave a Man who was faithful to him, he fet fire to the linnen work of the Cloud. The whole House valued at a hundred thousand Crowns, was in a minner confirmed; but he comforted himself, when making his advantage of this favourable Opportunity, he took his Soveraign in his Arms, carry'd her into a little by-place, and there flole from her some Favours; and that which is much taken notice of in this Country, is, that he touched her foot. A little Page who faw him, inform'd the Count Duke of it, he did not doubt but when he faw the fire, but this was an effect of the Count's Passion He made such an exact Eneuiry, that he laid before the King certain Proofs of it; and his Proofs fo greatly enraged the King, that 'tis pretended he caufed caused him to be shot with a Pistol one night, as he was in his Coach with Don Lewis de Haro.

Here's a very Tragical end, said I to ber, interrupting ber; but whilft, said the, I am speaking to you, of Philip the Fourth, I cannot but I must tell you, that he was vehemently in love with the Dutchess Dalburkerke. He cou'd never meet with a favourable opportunity of Entertaining her. The Duke her Husband kept strict guard over her, and the more Obstacles the King met with, the more his Defires increased; but when Night came, and when he was at play, he feign'd to call to mind he had a Letter to write of the greatest Consequence. He call'd the Duke Dalburkerke, who was in his Chamber, and defired him to take his place, and continue his Game. He immediately hereupon entred into his Closet, disguised himself, and went down by a back Stairs, and came to the young

The Duke Dalburkerke, whose mind ran on his Domestick Interests more then on his Game, easily believ'd his Master would not have committed it to him, without some secret Defign. He began then to complain of an horrid Collick, and uttering Cries and making Faces enough to fright one, he gave the Cards to another, and without any stop run home. The King had only just arrived there without any Train, he was then in the Court, and feeing the Duke come he hid himself; but there is nothing so clear sighted as a Jealous Husband. He perceived the King and being not willing to have Lights brought that he might not be oblig'd to acknowledge him, he made up to him with a great Cane which he commonly walked with : Ha! Ha! Villain, faid he to him, thou comest to rob my House; and without more words he laid on him with all his strength. The Count Duke was no more spared, who fearing least worse might happen, cried, out several times, 'Twas the King, to stop the Duke's Fury : but this was so far from effecting it, that he redoubled his blows both on the Prince and his Minister, crying in his turn, That this was a stroak of the greatest In Jence, to make use of his Majesty's Name and his Favorites in such an occasion, that he could find in his heart to send em to the Palace, because he well knew the King would cause 'em to be bang'd. In all this Fray the King faid not a word and at length got away half mad, in having received fo many blows, and not one favour from his Mistress.

This produced no ill Consequences to the Duke Dalburkerke, but on the contrary, the King being cured of his Love to the Dutchess, made a left of it some time after. I know not whether I do not abuse your patience by the length of this Conversation, added the Countess de Lemos, and I fall insensible into the defect of persons of my Age, who forget themselves when they tell of things done in their time. I saw she was for retiring, and having again thankt her for the honour she had done me, I took my leave of her, and returned to my line.

The Weather was so foul, that we with great difficulty set out, but being resolv'd on it, we marcht as long as the day lasted, falling down and getting up as well as we cou'd. We cou'd hardly see four Paces before us, the Storm was so great, that it blew off several Stones off the Rocks, which sell into our way, and hurt one of our Company; he had been kill'd, had he not stept on one side. In fine, after having made about eight Leagues, according to our reckoning, we were much as stonisht to find our selves at the Gates of Lerma, without having advanced or gone back. We had still turn'd about the Town, without perceiving it, as it were by Enchantment, sometimes farther, sometimes nearer; and we were all of us not a little out of humor at having taken so much pains to so little purpose.

The Hostess transported at the fight of us, she who could have been glad with all her heart we shou'd thus Travel as long as we lived, to return to lye at her House every night, tarried for me at the top of her little Stair-case. She told me she was very forry she cou'd not let me have my Roomagain, but wou'd give me another commodious enough, and that mine was taken up by a Seignora, the greatest in Spain. Don Fernand askt her name, she told him, she was called Donna Eleonor of Toledo; he as soon inform'd me she was his near Kinswoman. He could not comprehend by what chance she shou'd come there.

To be fatisfied in the matter, he fent his Gentleman to make her a Compliment, and to know whether his vifit wou'd not be troublesome. She sent word she had a great Satisfaction at this happy Metting, and that he wou'd do her a great deal of honour. He went up immediately to her Chamber, and was inform'd by her of several particulars which related to him. He came afterwards to me, and told me very civilly, that were not Donna Eleonar excessive weary and indisposed, she wou'd have given me the first Visit. I in short, desired him to conduct me to her Chamber, where she receiv'd me in most obliging manner; and I observ'd in the first moment of our Conversation, that she had a great deal of Wit and Politeness. I found her very neat and handsom, her Eyes were lively and so glistring, that one cou'd not without pain endus their brightness. Don Fernand told her who I was, and that I went to see one of my near Relations at Madrid. Her name was not unknown to her, no more than her Person, she told me 'twas not long since the King had made her Titularia and Marchioness of Castille. I shou'd be greatly obliged to you, Madam, said I to her, interrupting her, if you would be pleased to give me some Account of this Title; she having mentioned it in her Letters, without explaining to me what it means, no more than that of Grandee, &c.

I shall take a pleasure to inform you of what I know replied Donna Eleonora, and I have always heard, that in the time of the first Kings, Doviedo, de Galicia and Austuria, they were elected by the Prelates of the Kingdom, and by the Ricos-homes. Thefe Lords having not yet obtain'd the Titles of Dukes, Marquifles and Counts, which distinguish them from Gentlemen, they were called Ricos-homes, which were as the Grandees of Spain The Ricos-homes, flood covered before the King, entred among the States, and had their Affive and Paffive voice. And the Titulado's at present, are the same which were then call'd Ricos-homes; but their Priviledges are not fo large, and most of these Honours, as I shall tell you, have been reserved to the Grandees of Spain. The Titulado's, may have a Canopy or Cloth of State in their Chamber, a Coach in Madrid with four Horses, with los tiros largos, which are long Traces of Silk which fasten the last Horses to the foremost. When there are Bull-Feasts, they have Balconies in the great place, where their Wives are regaled with Baskets full of Sweetmeats, Gloves, Ribbons, Fans, Silk-hofe, and this at the King or Towns charge, which gives the Feaft. They have their Seat et out in their Ceremonies, and when the King makes a Titu ado, Marquis of Castille, Arragon, or Grenada, he enters into the States of this Kingdom.

As to the Grandees, there are three different Ranks of them; and the manner in which the King speaks to 'em in making them, distinguishes them. The one are those whom he bids to covered, without adding any thing thereto; their Grandure sonly fixt to their Person, and is not conserved to their Family. The others, whom the King qualifies with the Title of one of their Lands, as for Example, Duke or Marquis of such a blace, Cover your self, for you, and for yours, are Grandees in a more advantagious manner than the first, because their Grandees ure being fixt to their estates, passes to their eldest Son, and they have none, to their Daughter or Heir.

The last are not covered till after they have spoken to the King ;

King; and the difference between these is observed in saying they are Grandees for Life, or in their Race. It is farther to be observed, That there are some whom the King makes be covered before they speak to him, in saying to em Cubridos; and they speak, and hear the King speak, ever covered. Other who are only covered after they have spoke to him, and he has answered them. And the third, who are only covered when they have withdrawn themselves from the King towards the Wall; but when they be altogether in publick Offices, or a Chappel, there is no difference between them they sit down and are covered before him. And when he writes to them, he treats them as if they were Princes, they have the Titles of Excellency giv'n them. When their Wives go to the Queen, he receives them standing, and instead of sitting on the Footcloth, they have Cushions brought em to sit on.

Here's Madam, continued Donna Eleonora, what you defined to know; after due thanks for her Civility, the hour of withdrawing being come, I took my leave of her, entreating her to continue me in her Frienship.

I arose before day, because we had a great Journey to make to lye at Aranda de Duero. The Weather growing milder, it became very mifty, which at length turned to Rain; and in arriving at Night, our Host told us we were very welcome to him, but we must make a shift without Bread. This is, replied I, a thing one cannot easily be without. And in effect, this News put me a little out of humour. I enquired how hapned this Scarcity; 'twas answer'd me, The Alcaid Major of the Town (who is he that orders every thing) and who is both Governour and Judge had sent for all the Bread and Men which was at the Bakers, and had brought it into his Houlet make an equal Distribution of it, proportionable to the Ne ceffities of each particular Person, and that which had occall on'd this, was that the River of Duero, which paties about the Town, was frozen, and the Rivers of Leon, Suegra, Burges Tormes and Salamanca, which threw and lost themselves there in, had likewise ceased their Courses, so that no Mills course grind, which made 'em apprehend a Famine : This oblig'd to address our selves to him for to have the Bread we needed Don Fernand fent him one of his Gentlemen in the Name of all, and immediately we had so much Bread sent us, that w gave part to our Host and his Family, who much wantedit into my Chamber several Packets of Letters, which they have found on the Stairs in the Inn. He that carried them having

Here is in this Country a very ill order touching Commerce, and when the French Currier arrives at St. Sebastian, all the Letters he brings are deliver'd to others who are good Footmen, and ease one another. They put these Packets into a Sack, tied with rotten Cords to their shoulders. by which means it oft happens, that the fecrets of your Heart and Family are open to the first curious Body who makes drunk this Foot post; and this is what happed in this Occasion; for Don Frederic de Cardonne having lookt on the Superscriptions of several Letters, he at last met with one from a Lady in whom he was apparently interested, at least I so judg'd from the emotion of his Countenance, and earnestness with which he opened the Packet. He read the Letter, and was willing to shew it me, without telling me from whom it came, nor for whom it was; but he promised to inform me further about it at Madrid; finding it well writ, it came into my mind that you wou'd be perhaps glad to fee the style of a Spanish Lady, when she writes to what she loves. I prayed the Knight to let me take a Copy of it; but 'tis certain the Translation takes a-way much of the beauty of the Original. Here it is.

TVery thing contributes to afflist me in the unfortunate Ambally D you have undertaken, not to mention that distance is the bane of the strongest Friendship. I cannot flatter my self, that a Rupture between the Sovereigns, may abridge the time of your absince, and restore me a Good without which I can no longer live Of all the Princes of Europe, he to whom you are fent, is the most at Union with us. I can foresee no War with him, and this Scourge with which Heav'n punishes the guilty, would be to me thousand times more welcome than Peace: Tes, I would be glad to bear alone all the Disasters of it, to see my Lands wasted, my Houses burnt, to lose my Estate and my Liberty, provided we could be together, and that without you share in my Disgraces, I could enjoy the pleasure of seeing you; you may judge by these Dispositions of the Condition I amin, when I think that you are really going away. that I remain at Madrid, that I dare not follow you, that my Duty stisses immediately the Projects I might make to comfort my felf, and that I lofe you, in fine, in a time wherein I have most reafon to be persuaded of yours, and wherein I feel more the Marks you lave me of it; I shou'd conceal from you my Grief, and add none to yours : but how can I weep and weep without you. Alas, Alas! Adieu, I ask you nothing because I have too much to ask you; I was never so afflicted.

As I ended the Translating this Letter which I send you, the Alcade's Son came to fee me; he was a young man who had a good Opinion of himself, and who was a true Guap. Let no this word offend you, (dear Cosin) Guap is the same in Spansh as a brave Gallant and Spark is with us; his Hair was parted on the Crown of his Head, and tied behind with a blew Ribon about four fingers breadth, and about two yards long, which hung down at its full length; his Breeches were of black Velvet buttoned down on each Knee with five or fix Buttons; he had a Vest on so short, that it scarce reacht below his Pockets, a Scollopt Doublet with hanging fleeves about four fingers breadth made of white embroidered Sattin. His Cloak was of black Bays, and he being a Spark had wrapt it round his Arm, because this is more gallant, with a very light Buckler in his hand, and which has standing out in the midst a feel Pike they carried it with 'em when they walk in the Night on any Occasion, he held in the other hand a Sword longer than at Half-pike, and the Iron for its Guard was enough to make Breast and Back-plate. These Swords being so long that the cannot be drawn out, unless a Man has the Arms of a Giant the Sheaf therefore flies open in laying the finger on a little Spring. He had likewise a Dagger, whose Blade was very not row, it was fastned to his Belt on his back; he had fuch a strait Collar, that he cou'd neither stoop nor turn about his He Nothing can be more ridiculous than what they wear ab their Necks, for it is neither a Ruff nor a Band, nor a Cra His Hat was a prodigous fize, with a great Band-twifted abo it, bigger than a mourning one. His Shoes were of as in Leather as that whereof Gloves are made, and all flasht cut, notwithstanding the cold, and so exactly close to his been that they feem'd rather pasted on, and having no Heels. made me in entring a Reverence after the Spanish fashion, two Leggs cross one another and lowly stooping as Wome do when they Salute one another, he was strongly perfun and they are all fo; his vifit was not long; he was very bris he forgat not to tell me he went oft to Madrid, and there were no Courses of Bulls wherein he ventured not I But as the little care which was taken of Letters, run my mind, and troubled me; I told him of the Courrier whom my People had found alleep on the Stairs. He answer'd me this happed from the neglect of the great Post-master, or to speak better, in that he wou'd gain too much, and that if the King knew of it, he wou'd not fuffer it. This Name of Great Post-master made me enquire of him, whether any one rode Post in Spain. He told me, yes; provided they had the King's leave, or of the Great-Master, who is always a Person of a distinct Birth; and that unless you have an Order well figned, and in good form, you can have no Horles. But, faid I to him, a Man who has fought a Duel, or has other Reasons to haften away; What does he? Nothing, Madam, faid he to me, if he has good Horles he makes use of them; and if he has not, he is perplext enough; but when one will go Poll, and parts not directly from Madrid, it is sufficient to take a Billet from the Alcade, which is to fay, Governour of the Town where you pass. My Curiofity being satisfied on this Subject, the gallant Spaniard withdrew, and we supt altogether, as we were wont.

I had been some time in Bed and asleep, when I was awakened by the ringing of Bells, and by a confused Noise of dreadful Voices. I knew not as yet what was the Caufe, when Don Fernand de Toledo, and Don Frederic de Cardonna, without knocking at my Door, burft it open, and calling out to me, as loud as they could to make me hear (for they had Light) came both of them to my Bed, and throwing my Gown upon me, they carried me away, with my Daughter, as quick as they cou'd to the top of the House. It is impossible to reprelent to you my aftonishment and fear, I askt them at length, what was the matter? They told me the Thaw was come down all of a fudden, with fuch a great violence, that the Riers being swell'd by the Torrents which fell from all sides of he Mountains, with which the Town is surrounded, had fall n in it, and overflow'd it, that at the instant when they came to take me, the Water had already got to my Chamber, and hat all was in horrid Confusion, they needed say no more, for heard dreadful Cries and Shricks, and the Water Thook the whole House. I was never so seized with Fear in all my life; affectionately regretted my dear Country! Alas! faid I, I ave travell'd a long way to come to drown my felf on the Fourth Story of an Inn in Aranda. All Raillery apart, I thought Jerifully my last hour was come, and I was so troubled, that I was wenty times thinking to entreat these Gentlemen to hear me Confession. more laught at it than I. We were till Day in continual Alarms; but the Alcade, and the Inhabitants of the Town of fpeedily and effectually befrir'd themselves in turning aside the Torrents, and making the Waters pass, that we were only affrighted; two of our Mules were drowned; my Litters and Cloaths were so soakt in Water, that to dry them, we were forc'd to tarry one whole Day; and this was no easie matter for there are no Chimneys in the Inns, they heated the Overland put my Cloaths in it. I can assure you, I have not gained any thing in this unhappy Inundation: I lay down after this or to speak better, I bathed my self, my Bed being as wet a any thing else.

My fellow Travellers thought fit to let me rest a little; have employ'd one part of my leisure time in writing to you Adieu dear Cosin; it is time to finish: I am ever, more your than any Bodies in the World.

From Aranda de Duero, this 9th of March.

LETTER. VL

THE Exactness I observe in giving you an Account of thing which I judge worthy of your Curiosity, puts me often times on Enquiries into several Particulars which I should have otherwise omitted, had you not perswaded me that you are a great lover of Novelties, and that you love to Travel without going out of your Closet.

We parted from Aranda in a time of Thaw, which as it red dred the Air warmer, so it made the ways more troublesome. We came a while after to the Mountain de Samozierra, who parts the Old Castile from the New; and we Traverst it no without difficulty, as well for its height, as the quantity Snow, with which the Bottoms were fill'd, and into who we sometimes fell as from Precipices, believing the way even They call this Pass the Puerto, which Name methinks should be only giv'n to a part, where one Embarks on the Sea, or River; but it is thus, they call the Passage from one Ringdom to another, and you make your way to your cost, for the soul Officers wait for Travellers in the Road, and let em not go in they have paid what they require.

In arriving at Buitrago, we were as wet as the night of the Inundation at Aranda, and the I kept my Litter, I felt me es the Incommodiousness of the Weather, than if I had been on foot or Horseback, because the Litters are so ill closed and made in this Country, that when the Mules pass through any water, they throw up with their Feet part of the Water into the Litter, which there remains. So that I was forced in arriving, to change my Linnen and Cloaths. Afterwards Donwenard, the three Knights, my Daughter, and my Women.

went with me to the Castle I had been so often told of.

It appeared to me as regularly built as that of Lerma, not fo arge, but every white as pleasant : The Apartments are better ontriv'd, and the Furniture is richer and very fingular as well for its Antiquity as Magnificence. This Castle, as well s that of Lerma, belongs to Don Rodrigo de Silva de Mendola. Duke de Pastrana and de L'infantada. His Mother's Name is Donna Katherina de Mendosa & Sandoval, Heiress of the Dutchy's of Infantada and Lerma. It descends from Father to Son of Ruy Gomes de Silva, who was made Duke of Pastrana, and Prince of Eboly by King Philip the Second. This Princels dEboly, who has been so much talkt of for her Beauty, was his Wife, and the King was paffionately in love with her : They shew'd me her Picture; she is represented at her whole length, fitting under a Tent fastned to some Boughs of Trees; the feems as if the were rifing, for the has only a fine Linnendoth on her, which lets one part of her body be feen. If the were as handsome as her Picture makes her, and if her Features were so regular, the must be judged the most charming Woman in the World; her Eyes are fo lively and full of Spirit, that it seems as if she was about speaking to you; her Neck, Arms, Feet, and Leggs are naked; her Hair falls down on her Breafts, and little Cupids which appear every where about her, press on one another to serve her, some had her Slippers, others are ready to firew flowers on her, and some hold her boking Glass. Others are seen farther off, who are sharpning their Arrows, whilst others fill their Quivers with them, and bend their Bow : A Fawn looks on her through Boughs, the fees him and shews him to a little Cupid, who is leaning on her knees, and weeps as if the was afraid of it, at which the feems to smile. I remained a great while looking on this Picture with the greatest pleasure; but I was made to pass into a Galkry, where I faw her again. She was painted in a large Piece attending Queen Elizabeth, Daughter to Henry the Second King of France, whom Philip the Second, King of Spain espoused, instead of giving her to Don Carles his Son, to whom she had ten promised. The Queen made her Entrance on Horseback, as tis the Cuflom, and I found the Princels Eboly less thinin near her than the appeared to me when alone. You may here judge of the Charms of this young Queen; the had a blue Setting Gown, but as to the reft, just as I represented to you the Countels of Lemos. The King flood in a Balcony to fee her pals by He had a black Suit with a Collar of the Golden Fleece, His Hai reddish and gray, long vilage, pale, old, wrinkled and ugly The Infant Don Carlos accompanied the Queen, he was very white, a fine head, his Hair of a light yellow, his Eyes blue, and he lookt on the Queen with so moving an Air, that it appear'd the Painter knew the Secret of his heart, and would express it : His Habit was white, embroidered with precious Stones; he was in his Doublet, with his Hat botton'd upon one fide, and covered with white Feathers. I faw in the lane Gallery another piece which much affected me, which was the Prince Don Carlos dying, he was fitting in a Chair, leaning on his Atm on a Table before him, holding a Pen in his Hand as if he would have wrote fomething; there was a Veffel by him, wherein appeared a fort of black Liquor, which appeared rently was defign'd for Poylon. A little further you fee the Bath preparing for him, where his Veins were to be opened the Painter had perfectly well represented the Confusion of to fad an Occasion, and having read his History, and being much affected with it, methoughts I faw him really dying. I was told these Pieces was of inestimable value. I was afterwards conducted into a Chamber, whose Furniture had belonged to the Arch-Dutchels Marguerita of Austria, Governess of the Low Countries; and it is pretended the had workt it her felf there is a neatly wrought Bed of Flowers, Woods, Animals and Feathers of all Colours, the hangings are the fame, and the different Colours therein do make a very agreeable them And this is what I found most remarkable in the Castle of Bu trage, and it growing late we left it.

It was several days since I had the pleasure of seeing the playing at Hombre, I therefore caus'd the Cards to be brought Don Fernand, with two of the Knights, began the Game, and Lintrest my self, as I wont, and Don Estreve de Carjava did the like; so that after we had seen them play some time I demanded of him to whom of the three Knights was the Commandership, whence they came when I met them. He are sweeted me, It did not belong to any one of them; that he had been to see one of their common Friends on a vexations Accident which had hapned to him in Hunting. Falling the Subject of Commanderships, I intreated him to inform me the ther the Orders of St. James, Calatrava, and Alcantara were ancient. He answer'd me, 'Twas above 500 years they had subfifted; that heretofore the Order of Calatrava was call'd the Gallant, that of St. James, the Rich, and that of Alcantura the Noble. That which made 'em be eall'd thus, was that ordinarily there entred only young Cavaliers into Calatrava that St. Fames's was richer than the two others, and that to be received a Knight of Alcantara, one must make his Proofs of our Races, whereas to enter into the others, there needed only two. In the first times, when these Orders were establisht, the Knights made Vows, lived most regularly in Community, and wore Arms only to Combat the Moors; but afterward the greatest Lords of the Kingdom entred into it. who obtained the liberty to marry, under this Condition, that they should be obliged to demand an express Dispensation, from the Holy See, one must have the King's Letter, make his proofs of Nobility, and likewise prove he comes of old Christians, which is to fay, there have entred no Jews nor Moors into his Fathers and Mothers Family. Pope Innocent the Eighth gave in 1489. to King Ferdinand and his Successors, the difpolal of all the Commanderships of these three Orders, which are call'd Military. The King of Spain disposes of them in effect under the Title of Perpetual Administrator; and he enjoys three great Masterships, which bring him in above four thoufand Crowns a year. When he holds a Chapter, as Great Master of the Order, or any other assembly, the Knights have the Priviledge to fit and be covered in his Presence. Don Effeve added, That the Order of the Calatrava had 34 Commanderships, and 8 Priories, valued at 120 thousand Ducals a year; that Alcantara had 33 Commanderships, 4 Alcaydies; and 4 Priories, which yielded 80 thouland Ducals, and that the 87 Commanderships of St. James, as well in Castlle, as in the Kingdom of Leon, were valued at 272000 Ducats. You may hereby judge, Madam, continued he, that there are some helps for the poor Gentlemen of Spain.

I agree, faid I to him, that this would be very advantageous for them, were they the only Persons admitted into these three Orders. But I think you now told me, that the greatest Lords possess the best Commanderships. This is by a general sule, said be, that those who have much will have more, although there's the greatest Justice others shou'd have a share; and the eldest of great quality might have wherewith to satisfie them in obtaining the Order of the Fleece, which extreamly distinguishes those whom the King honours with it. However, this being a Favour accompanied with no Revenue, and being not easily obtained, few People seek it, and you see ordinarily none but Princes have it. If you know who instituted this Order of the Fleere, said I to bim, you will oblige me in informing me. It is pretended, replied he, that in the time when the More possest the best and greatest part of Spain, a pious Peasant, praying one day earnestly to God to deliver the Kingdom from these Insidels, perceived an Angel coming down from Heavn who gave him a Fleece of Gold, and commanded him to make use of it to gather Troops, because at this sight he would not be resus'd to be sollow'd for the sighting the Enemy. This holy man obey'd; and several Gentlemen took up Arms in estect on what he told them.

The Success of this Enterprize answer'd the hope conceived of it. So that Philip the Good, Duke of Burgundy, instituted the Order of the Golden Fleece, in the honour of God, of the Virgin, and St. Andrew, in the year 1429. and the Day of his Marriage with Isabella Daughter to the King of Portugal, was chosen for this Ceremony. It was made at Bruges, it ordained, that the Duke of Burgundy shou'd be perpetual Chief of the Order, because St. Andrew is Patron of Burgundy. Those who have it are call'd Cavallero's del Tuzon, which is to say, Knights of the Fleece; and one may hence remark, that there is a difference in relation to this Order, saying, when one speaks of the others, That such a one is Knight of the order of St. Janes, or the Order of Calatrava.

In the time when we were thus talking, we heard a noise, as of a Coach and Attendants that stopt, not long after, Don Frederic de Cardona's Valet de Cambre entred into my Chamber, to tell his Master, that the Arch-bishop of Burgos was arrived

This is an happy Encounter for me, faid he, for I parted expresly from Madrid to see him; and having not found him at Burgos, I was not a little troubled at it.

Fortune is always on your fide, said Don Sancho smiling to him, but not to retard the pleasure of seeing this Illustrious Kinsman, we will leave off our Game. Don Fernand and Don Sancho arose. Undoubtedly, says Don Esteve, Don Frederic will not be of our Company this Night. I am of another mind, replied Don Fernand, the Archbishop is one of the most obliging Persons in the World, assoon as ever he knows here's a Fresh Lady, he will give her a Visit. He will do me a great deal of honour, answered I, but yet I shall be a little perplext, for we must suppose Don Frederic return'd again,

As soon as ever the Archbishop knew there was a strange Lady at Buytrago, said be to me, he no more minded me; and if you please, Madam, he will come and offer you whatever depends on him in this Country.

id, og ich I answer'd this Civility as I ought; and Don Frederic being return'd to him, conducted him a while after into my Chamber. I found him extraordinary civil, he spake little, and observed the gravity besitting his Character, and the Spanish Nation. He much bewailed my making so long a Journey in so rigorous a Season, entreating me to lay my Commands on him in something wherein he might obey me. This is the usual Compliment in this Country; he had a long Cassock over his other Cleaths of purple Velvet, with high russled Sleeves, which reacht to his very Ears, and a pair of Spectacles on his Nofe.

He fent for a little Monkey, which he would needs give my Daughter; and though I was troubled at it, I could not refult his Instances, and the Defires my Daughter had of accepting it. Every time the Archbishop took Tobacco, which he often did, this little Ape reacht out his Paw to him, and he put fome on it, which he made as if he wou'd take. This Prelate told me the King of Spain expected with extream impatience the Answer of the Marquis de Los-Balbares, on the Orders he had giv'n him on the Demand of Madamoifelle from the French King. If his most Catholick Majesty's Greatness be considered. continued he, this Marriage must needs be esteem'd very honourable; for when the Sun goes down in one part of his Dominions, it rifes again in another. And this Monarch enjoys not alone his Grandure, he has the Pleasure of sharing it to his Subjects, he is in a Condition to recompence them, to make them happy, to put them into high places, where there whole Ambition is fatisfied, wherein they receive the fame Honour as Soveraigns; and is not this what a King ought to wish, to be in a Capacity to recompence magnificently the Services which are rendred him, and force even an unthankful Person to become grateful. It is a furprizing thing, the number of Employs for Men of the Sword and the Gown, which his Majesty every day bestows.

Several Persons have spoken to me of this, as you do, my Lord, Said I to him, but I hope to be persectly instructed in it at Madrid. I am able to inform you, at least in part of what you wou'd know, replied be; some Reasons have oblig'd me to take a little Abstract, and which I think I have about me, he immediately delivered it to me; and having kept the Copy of it, and it appearing curious to me, I shall therefore hear, dear Cousin, translate it for you.

Vice-Royalties which depend on the King of Spain.
Naples, Sicily, Arragon, Valantia, Navare, Sardagnia, Caalonia, and in New Spain, Peru.

Governments of Kingdoms and Provinces.

The States of Flanders, Milain, Galicia, Biscay, the Isles of Majorca and Minorca. Seven Governments in the West-Indies; to wit, the Isles of Madera, Cape Vert, Mina, St Thomas, Angola, Bresil, and Algerves, in Affrica, Iseuta, Maragan; in the East the Phillipia Islands.

Bishopricks and Archbishopricks in the most Catholick King's Nomination, since Pope Adrian the Sixth, yielded his Right of Nomination.

First in the two Castilles the Archbishoprick of Toledo, whose Archbishop is Primate of Spain, Great Chancellor of Castille, and Counsellor of State. He speaks to the States, and in the Councel, immediately after the King, and he is usually consulted in all important Affairs. He has three hundred and fifty thousand Crowns a year, and his Clergy four hundred thousand.

The Archbishop of Braga in Portugal, who is Spiritual and Temporal Lord of the City, and who for a Mark of his Authority, carries his Crosser in his Hand, and his Sword by his side, pretends to the Primacy of all Spain, and disputes it with the Archbishoprick of Toledo, because this Primacy was heretofore held at Seville, afterwards Translated to Toledo, by reason of the Invasion of the Moors, and that Toledo, being fally into their hands, it was Translated to Braga, so that the Archbishop long possess this Dignity; but after the Spaniards had retaken Toledo, the Archbishop re-demanded his Primacy, he of Braga wou'd not consent to restore it; and this Difference being not yet terminated, they both assume this Title.

The Archbishoprick of Seville is worth 350 thousand Ducats, and its Chapter above an hundred thousand. Nothing can be seen finer than this Cathedral. Among other remarkable things, there is a Tower built with Brick, near 200 foot large, and above an 100 in heighth. Another Tower is rais'd above it, which is so well contriv'd within, that a Man may ride up on Horseback to the top of it. The outside is all painted and gift.

The Archbishoprick of St. James's de Composiella is worth near fixty thousand Ducats, and its Chapter an 100 thousand.

The Archbishop of Grenada is valued at 40000 Ducats.

That of Burgos near as much.

The Archbbishop of Sarragussa 50000.

The Archbishop of Avila 20 thousand Ducats a year. The Archbishoprick of Valancia 40 thousand. The Bishoprick of Astorgas 12 thousand. Bishoprick of Cuensa more than 50 thousand.

Of Ciudad Rodrigo 10 thousand. Of Tarozona 14 thousand. Of the Canary Islands 12 thou- Of Balbastro 7 thousand. Of Albervacin & thousand.

Of Tervel 12 thouland. Of Face 6 thousand the state and

I ought not to omit observing, That the Cathedral of Cordua is extraordinary flately; 'twas built by Abderhaman, who ruled over all the Moors in Spain. It ferv'd them for a Mosque in the year 787. But the Christians having taken cordona in 1236, they made a Church of this Molque. It has 24 great Gates, all of 'em carv'd with Ornaments of Steel : its length is 600 foot, and 50 wide. It is perfectly well proportion'd, and sustained by 850 Pillars, the greatest part of which are of Jasper, and the others of black Marble, of one foor and an half Diametre. The Boof is admirably well painted: and one may hence judge of the magnificent humor of the Moors.

It is hard to believe, after what I have written of the Cathedral of Cordona, that that of Leon is yet more confiderable. Yet nothing is truer; and this is what has given occasion to what is commonly faid, That the Church of Leon is the finest in all Spain, the Church of Toledo the richeft, that of Seville the greatest, and that of Salamanca the strongest.

The Cathedral of Malaga is admirably well fet forth, an justly proportion d; the Desk in the Quite hath cost 105 thouand Crowns, and all the reft answers this Magnificence.

From all the Archbisbopricks and Bisbopricks there comes not thing to the Pope from the Bishop that dies, nor whilst the Benefice is Vacant. It will be a hard matter to recite the number of Abbies and other Dignities to which the King of Spain presents.

We shall now mention the fix Archbishopricks, and the thirty

Having read the Memorandum which the Archbishop of Burgos gave me, and made it to be copyed out, he withdrew, praying me that I would give him leave to send his Olio to me, because twas ready, and that I could not get any thing better for my Supper. I thank'd him, and told him, the same Reason obliged me to refuse it, seeing without it he would make as bad a Supper as we.

Yet Don Fredirick de Cardona was already gone to fetch it, and he returned laden with a great Silver Pot; but he was much surprized in finding it fastned with a Lock: This is used in Spain; he would needs have the Key of the Cook who takes it ill that his Master would not eat his Olio) answered, he had unfortunately loss the Key in the Snow, and knew not how to open it. Don Frederic vext at this, would against my will, go and acquaint the Arch-Bishop with it, who ordered his Major Domo to look after it; he threatned the Cook, and the Scene past so near my Chamber, that I heard it all, but that which I liked best were the Cook's Answers, who said, No puedo padecer la rina, siendo Christiano viejo, bidalgo come el Key y poco mas, which is to say, I cannot bear the being reprimanded, who am of the Race of Old Christians, who are Noble as the King, and something more.

It is commonly at this rate the Spaniards value themselves: This same Blade was not only vain glorious, but obstinately conceited: and whatever could be done or said to him, he would not deliver the Key of the Pot, so that the Olio remain'd in it untouch'd for us. We went to Bed late, so that not rising very early, all that I could do before I set out, was to finish this Letter, and to Morrow I shall begin another, wherein you shall be informed of the rest of my Travels.

LETTER VII.

THE PARTY OF THE P

Aller Aller Statem

WE can easily perceive that we are not far from Madrid, the Weather is fair notwithstanding the Season, and we have no more need of Fire; but it seems very strange to as, that in the Inns which are the nearest to this great Town, you are worse used than in those which are an hundred Leagues distant; you would think you came rather into Desarts, than near a Town where resides so great a Monarch; and I can assure you (dear Cosin) that in our whole Course, I have not met with an House or Castle that has pleased me; I am much amazed at it, for I thought that in this Countey as in ours, I should find fine Walks, and curious Seats, whereas you can scarcely see any Trees, save some sew which grow in spight of the Soil; And at this time, when I am but Ten Leagues from Madrid, my Chamber stands even with the Stable; it is an Hole that needs a Light at Noon, but what kind of Light think you better have none at all; for this is a Lamp which ban all Chearfulness by its glimmering light, and your Health b flinking scent : and go you where you will, tho' to the Cu of the Parish for a Candle, you will not find one, and I do much whether there be any in his Church Here every whe fad Scene of Poverty presents it self to your fight ; Don dinand de Toledo, who took notice of my Aftonilhment, affu me, I should see very fine things at Madrid; but I could forbear telling him, I could not eafily imagine it : It is to the Spaniards bear up under their Indigency with such an of Gravity as would cheat one, the very Pedfants telling th steps as they walk; they are mightily inquisitive after No as if their whole Being depended thereon: I have had m of 'em come into my Chamber without any Ceremony. without Cloaths on their backs, or Shoes on their Feet, entry ing me to tell them what I knew of the Court of France; ter I had spoke to them, they have examined what I h faid, and argued on it among themselves in such a manner. shewed great sense; and a lively apprehension: This Nation ever had fomething extraordinary among them above other

There came to fee me among others one of the Townfor Wives, a good likely Woman; the carry'd her Child in Arms, which was a dreadful lean one; he had above an dred little hands like those of Joynted Babies hanging about Neck, and on all fides of him. I askt his Mother what meant? She answered me, this was good against Evil How, faid I to her, do these little hands hinder one from Distemper of the Eyes? Undoubtedly, replied she, but as you mean; for you must know if you please, there are Pe in this Country, who have fuch a Poylon in their Eyes, the looking fleadfastly on a Person, and especially on a young they make him pine away to death. I faw a Man who he Evil Eye, and doing mischief when he lookt with this Eye was obliged to cover it with a great Plaister : As to the Ege, it had no Malignity, yet it sometimes hapned that I with his Friends, when he faw a great many Fowls toge he would fay, choose which of these you would have me He was shewed one, he took off his Plaister, lookt fixed the Fowl, and a while after the turned feveral times roun giddy, and fell down dead. This Woman likewise would Iwade me there are Magicians, who looking on any one an Evil intention, strikes them with such a Languishme makes 'em become lean like Skeletons; and her Child. me, has been struck in this manner, and the common is these little hands. She moreover told me, it is the custom, when they see any one look attentively upon them, and the Party has a look ill enough to fear she should give the Evil d' ojos (it is thus called, because it is done by the Eyes) to prelent her one of these Hands, or even her own shut, and to say o her Toma la mano, which is to fay, Take this hand; to which the Party suspected must answer, Dios le benediga, God less you, which if the does not, the is judged to be ill intentiond, and thereupon he or the may be denunciated to the Inquiition; or if you be the stronger, you may beat them till they

1 do not affure you as a thing certain, that the Relation of he Fowls is positively true; but this is certain, that they are ere strongly perswaded there are Persons who can do you hurt w bare looking on you, and here are even Churches to which they o in Pilgrimage to be cured of it. I askt this young Woman there appeared nothing extraordinary in those they call misbievous Eyes: She told me no; except that they are full of ich a shining Vivacity, that they seem to be all on fire, and ould make one think they will pierce you like a Dart. She poresver told me, that of late the Inquisition had caused an Old Woman to be feized on, who was accused to be a Witch, and she elieved'twas she who had put her Child in that piteous condion I faw it. I askt her what they would do to this Woman; e told me if there were Proofs strong enough, she would be stallibly burnt, or left in the Inquisition; and that the best reatment the could choose would be to be delivered thence by eing whipt along the Streets; That these Wiches are tied to Asses Fail, or that they are placed on these Beasts coifd ith a Paper Mitre painted with all colours, with Writings hich denoted the Crimes they have committed: That in this be Equipage they are led about the Town, where every one is the liberty to strike them, or throw dirt at them. But, said to her, how know you their condition would be worse if they main'd still in Prison? O Madam, said she to me, I see you are of yet inform'd what the Inquifition is; whatever can be faid it. comes not near the Rigours exercised therein: You are iz'd on, and thrown into a Dungeon; you lye there two or see Months, fometimes more, and fometimes less, without a ord being faid to you; at the end of this time you are led fore the Judges, who with a terrible look ask you why you there? It is natural to answer, you know not. They no more to you, but fend you back again to this difmal de, wherein is every day suffered a thousand times more trouble trouble than Death it felf; yet you are not suffered to dye there. but remain many times a Year in this condition. At the end of this time, you are brought again before the fame Judges, or before others, for they change, and go into feveral Countries; these demand of you again, why you are detained? You An-Iwer, you have been Apprehended, but you know not for what. You are fent again into your Dungeon without any more words. In short, sometimes you pass over your whole Life there. And demanding of her, if it were the Custom for one to accuse himself, she answered, that as to some Persons, 'twas the best and shortest way; but that the Judges held only this course with those against whom they had no certain Proofs: for commonly, when any one accuses a Person of Capital Crimes, the Accuser was wont to remain in Prison with the Criminal, and this is the reason of their being a little more moderate. She related to me the particular punishments, and the whole manner of them, with which I will not fill this Letter, nothing being more dreadful. She moreover told me, she knew a 7em named Ishmael, who was put into the Prison of the Inquisition of Seville, with his Father, who was a Rabbin of their Law. It is four years fince they were there, when Ishmael, having made an hole, clim'd up to the top of a Tower, and making use of Ropes he had provided, he slid down along the Wall with a great deal of danger; but having got down, he reproach'd himself for having abandoned his Father, and withoutConfidering the Risk he has ran after more than one manner, feeing his Father and he were condemned, and were to be led in a few days to Madrid with several others, to suffer there the greatest Torment; yet this hindred him not from determining himself, he generously climbed up the Tower, descended into the Dungeon, drew thence his Father, made him efcape before him, and got away himself. I found this Action very brave, and worthy to be fet as an Example to Christians in an Age wherein the most indispensible Obligations are slight ed. I continued entertaining my felf with this Spanish Wo man, when Constance one of my Women, whom you know, came to tell me with great earnestness, that she now saw Monfieur Daucourt, and that if I would, she would step out and call him: This is a Rich Gentleman, whom I knew at Paris, a civil Man, and of good Sense, and of comely Personage I knew that he had a Brother at Madrid belonging to Don Juan of Austria. Having shewed I should be glad to speak with him Constance went out in quest of him, and brought him to me After the first Civilities, and informing my self of the New

of my Kinswomen whom I believed he knew, Laskt him of his own Affairs, and whether he was content with his Journey. Ah, Madam, speak to me no more of my Journey, cryed he, there was never a more unfortunate; and had you come some days sooner, you might have seen me hang'd. How said I to him, what do you mean by this? I mean, said he to me, that I had all the fear of it, and that this is the most unpleasant Country in the World for Strangers: But, Madam, if you are at leisure, and would know more, I will relate to you my Adventure. It is singular, and will fully prove to you what I have told you. You will do me a great deal of pleasure, said I to him, we are here in a place where such a Relation will much divert us; he began it then in this manner.

Some Affairs wherein I was concerned, and the Defire of feeing a Brother whom I had been away from some years. obliged me, Madam, to undertake this Journey to Madrid: I was little acquainted with the Customs of that place, I imagin'd one might go to Women without difficulty, and that one might play and eat with them; but I was aftonish'd to learn, that every one of them is more retired in her House, than a Carthufian in his Cell; and that there are Persons who have been mutually in Love for two or three years, and yet had never spoke to one another. Such fingular Manners seem'd ridiculous to me, I faid thereupon freely whatever came into my Head; but I treated the matter more seriously, when I understood these Women who were so closely confin'd, were the most amiable Women in the World; that they had fuch a Delicacy, Vivacity, and Manners, as are no where to be met with but among them; that Love always appeared new, that no one would change a Spanish Woman but for another. I was in the greatest despair at the difficulties there were to get at them. One of my Friends, named Belleville, who was my Companion in my Journey, and who is a brisk Lad, was no less troubled on his fide than I on mine: My Brother, who feared left lome Vexatious Accident should befal us, continually inculcated into us how Jealous Husbands are in this Country; great Murtherers, and no more valued the killing of a Man than a fly. This did not agree very well with two Men who were not as yet weary of living.

We went into all parts where we thought we might see Ladies; we saw some in effect, but this did not satisfie us, all the bows and cringes we made 'em brought forth nothing; we each of us return'd home every Night very weary and disgusted at our fruitless Circuits.

One Night, Belleville and I went upon Defign to the Prade. which is a Walk adorn'd with great Trees, and feveral Fountains, they throw their Water a great heighth, and in great gulhes it falls into Basins, from whence it runs (when they have a mind) into the Courses to Water them, and so to make them fresh and pleasant. It was the finest Weather this Evening that one could wish. After we had light out of our Coach, and fent it away, we began to walk foftly, and having made a few turns, we fat us down on the fide of one of the Fountains, and then began to make our usual Complaints. Dear Belleville, faid I to my Friend, shall we never be so happy to meet with one of these Witty and Charming Spanish Women, so much boasted of? Alas ! says he, I defire it too much, but dare not hope it : Hitherto we have met with nothing but fuch ugly Creatures, as run after Folks to fright them, and who under their white Vails are more Tauny and Loathsom than the Bohemians; such as these, I swear to you, do not please me at all, and notwithstanding their sprightfulness, I cannot consent to enter into a near conversation with them. At the very instant these words were out of his Mouth, we fpy'd coming out of a Door hard by, two Women; they had left off their upper Garments, which were always very plain; and when they open'd their Manta's the light of the Moon made the glory of their Go'd and Precious Stones appear. As God's true, cries out Belleville, here's at least two Fairies. Nay, faid I let's be juster, and think them not other than two Angels. When they came near us, we flood up, and made them the lowest Bow that ever we did in our lives. They past by us foftly, and with those little Apish Tricks, which become the Spaniards fo well, they lookt at us, first with one Eye, and then with t'other. They went on a little ; we were in pain what to think, whether they would return back the fame way, or whether we should follow them; but while we were deliberating, we perceiv'd them to approach us; when they were near us, they flood still, one of them began to speak, and askt us, if we could speak Spanish. I see by your Habits, said she, that you are strangers. But pray tell me of what Country are you? We told her we were Frenchmen, and that we spoke Spanish ill enough, but we had a great mind to learn to speak it well: That to succeed therein, we were perswaded we must love a Spanish Woman, and we heartly wish'd we might find one that defired to be belov'd. The matter is nice reply'd the other Lady, which had not yet spoke and I should be forry for her who engages in such a Defign for I have heard that Frenchmen are not Faithful. Oh! Madam, fays Belleville, this was fome body which had a mind to do us an ill turn, and put us out of your good opinion, but it will be easie to wipe off this Aspersion. Though I may foon give my Heart to a pretty Woman, yet I am very fenfible I cannot fo eafily call it back again. What ! fays the that spoke to me before, dare you without further consideration, enter into fuch an Engagement at first fight? I should not have quite 10 good an Opinion of you. Oh! Madam, cries he, why should we loose precious Time? If it is good to love stall, it is good to begin as foon as 'tis possible : Hearts that are born to Love, languish and decay when they are not exer-ised therein. Your Maxims are fine, reply'd she, but they kem dangerous; it is not only necessary to avoid following of them, but even the hearing of them; and then indeed they would have been gone, but we beg'd them with great earnestness to tarry a few moments longer in the Prado. We faid all the pretty things to them both, which might oblige them to difover themselves, and give us the satisfaction of seeing them without their Vails. Our Conversation was very brisk, and pleasant enough: they had abundance of wit; and as they new how to manage all their Advantages, fo without affectation, they flew'd us their Hands as they had an occasion to mend the fitting of their Head-dreffes, and they were whiter than the Snow. In spight of their seeming care to hide themselves, Jet we faw enough to observe their delicate Complexion, their brisk Eyes, and their Features very regular. You may be fure we left them as late as we could, and that we conjur'd them to make that Walk Happy sometimes with their Presence, or else give us leave to wait on them at their House. They agreed to nothing; and indeed, we were several times after that at the Prado, and near that Fountain where we first faw them, without being able to perceive them. Here's a deal of time of said we; what must we do to pass our Lives in this great want of Employment, for we must renounce the thoughts of ladies, whose Access is so difficult? This was our Resolution, but it held not long, for scarcely had we made it, but we see ome out of the same House the two Incognito's. We drew hear them, full of Respect, and our civil Carriage did not dis-hease them. Belleville took the least by the hand, and I the higgest. I endeavoured to perswade her with what Impationce I expected her. I blam'd her a little, at which she seem'd onewhat concern'd; but taking more courage, I disc urs'd ber of the thoughts the had inspired me with, and assured her that it was in her power to engage me for my whole Life. She feemed extream careful not to give the leaft mark of Fayour. At length, amongst other things, she told me, that the was Heiress to a great Estate; that her Name was Ines. that her Father was a Knight of the Order of St. James, and was of a confiderable Quality; that she, which was with her. was called Ilabella, and that they were Cofins. All these particulars pleas'd me well, finding her a Person of Birth and therein my Vanity flatter'd.) At parting, I begg'd her to give me leave to come fee her. What you defire of me, fays the, is the Custom of your Country; and if I were there, I would please my self to observe it; but we have different, and tho' I do not conceive any Crime in what you ask me, yet I am obliged to observe certain Rules of Decency, which by no means I will transgress. I will contrive some other way to fee you, and of this, depend upon me, and do not take it ill, that I refuse you a thing, which is not in my power to grant. Adieu, continued she, I will think of what you desire, and will let you know what I can do. I kift her Hand, and fo withdrew extreamly touch'd with her way, as well as her Wit and her prudence.

As foon as I was alone with Belleville, I askt him, if he was pleas'd with the Conversation he had enjoy'd. He answer'd me, that he had great cause to be so, and that Isabella seem'd to be of a Nature sweet and amiable. You are very happy, said I already to have sound so much kindness. Ines gives me no room to hope for any. She's of a gay Humour, and turn every thing I say to her into Jest, and I despair ever to make her serious. Some days past, before we either saw or heard from them: But one Morning as I was at Mass, an Old Woman, hid under a Vail, comes up to me, and presents me

Billet in which I read these words.

Y O U appear too Amiable to me to see you often, and I mu needs confess to you, that I a little mistrust my own Heart If yours is truly touch'd for me, Marriage must be thought on bave told you that I am Rich, and I have told you the truth: The part which I offer you, is not inconvenient to take: But consider of it, and in the Evening I shall be on the Banks of Mansanare where you may let me know your thoughts.

As the place where I was did not allow me to writ her Answer, so I contented my self to Note only on my Table-Bo these Lines: Y O U have power to make me take what fourney you please. I am very sensible, that I Love you too well to be at ease, and that I have more cause to suspect my own Weakness, than you have to be afraid of yours; however, I shall be at Mansanarez, being resolved to obey you, whatever you Command me.

I gave my Table-Book to this honest Messenger, which had the looks tho, to steal off the Plates and Class before the would deliver it. I desir'd Belleville to let me go alone to this Assignation. He told me, he was very glad of it, for Isabella had given him Notice, that she desir'd to speak with him alone at the Florid. It was with impatience that we waited for the appointed hour, and then we quitted each other, after having wish'd our selves good Success in our Adventure.

As foon as I came to the River-fide, I carefully lookt at all the Coaches which past by; but it was hard for me to discover any thing, because they had double Curtains drawn. But at last, there came one and flopt, and I perceived some Women in't. who gave me a fign to approach. There was Ines, who was more conceal'd than usual, and I could not know her but by her Voice, How industriously you hide your felf, said I to her, Do you think, Madam, that the thoughts of not being able to fee you, and the violent defires I have for it are not enough to kill me with Grief? If you'l come along with me, lays the, you shall fee me. But for the present I must hoodwink you. To be free with you, faid I to her, till now, you have appear'd very amiable to me; but this Mysterious Carriage, which serves to no end, but to make me surfer, is troublelome. If I am so unhappy to be thought by you an unfaithful man, you ought not at all to trust me, but if on the contrary, I am in your good Opinion, you ought to declare it, by a more ingenuous proceeding. Interrupting me, favs she, you ought to be perswaded, that I have strong Reasons for what I do, fince notwithstanding what you have now told me, I alter not my Resolution. The thing however is at your choice : but for my own part, I will not let you come into my Coach, but upon that Condition. As the Spaniards are natually obflinate, I rather chose to suffer my Eves to be cover'd than to break off with her. I must needs own, that these appearances of Good Fortune, had fill'd me with some fort of Vanity, and I lancy'd my felf with some Princess, which for the present had nomind I should know her, but afterwards, that I should find her, one of the most perfect and rich Women of Spain. H 4

This conceit hinder'd me any longer to oppose her will. I told her, I submitted to her, to be hood-wink'd, and even to be blinded by her, if she could please her self in the Astion. She ty'd a Hankerchief about my Head so hard, that at first she put me in terrible pain; I sat me down by her; it was now dark, I knew not whether we were going, but I gave my self

She had with her two other Women; the Coach mov'd fo long, that I believe we pass'd through most of the streets of Madrid. She entertained me with fuch witty Discourse, that I had no need to think the time or way long; and I waseven charm'd with hearing her, when our unlucky Coach, which was but a mean one, run upon another, and all on a fudden was overturn'd. And we happen'd to fall in a place call'd the Mane, which is one of the greatest and nastiest Ditches in the City. I was never so vex'd in my life; the three Ladies fell upon me, they almost stifled me, and I was even deaf with their noise. Having my Eyes bound, and my Head turn'd about after a strange fashion, I could not have my share of making a noile without swallowing a great deal of this stinking Water. I then began to make some Reflections on the unlucky hours of a Man's Life; and though I dearly lov'd Ines, yet I found that I loved my felf more, and wish'd I had never seen her. I cannot positively tell how things past, but I felt my self deliverd from that heavy weight which so oppress'd me; and when by the help of some People which drew me out. I got upon my leggs, I could neither fee Ines nor her Companions. The Folk which stood about me, laugh'd like so many Fools, to see me hood-wink'd and fo cover'd with this black Water, that I look'd as if I had come out of an Ink-tub. I askt the Coach-man when his Mistress was. He told me the Lady with whom I was, wa none of his Mistress, and that she went away cursing of me; that fhe was very dirty; that he knew her not; and that fhe only faid to him at going away, that I must pay him. And prethet faid I, where didst thou take her up? He answered me, At th Gate Delcalcas Reales, and that an Old Woman came for him and brought him to that place where he took her up. Form Money I got him to carry me home. I expected Bellevil with a mixture of Impatience and Grief: It was late before h came, and he was extreamly fatisfied with Isabella, in whomh found abundance of good Nature, and an infinite deal of Wi

I related to him my Adventure, he could not but laugheartily at it; and as he was fill'd with an extraordinary lo fo he told me a hundred pleasant Stories, which put me is deed into a very bad Humour: It was day-light before we went to Bed, and I had not got up, but to take a walk with him in the Prado; As we were going along by some very low Windows, I heard Ines cry out to me Cavellero, go not fo falt, it is at least fit to ask you how you do after your fall last Night. Advancing to the Window, pray faid I to her, what became of you, fair Ines? And had not I misfortunes enough, but I must loose you too. You had not lost me, reply'd she, but that a Lady, who was my Relation, paffing by in that moment knew my voice, and I was oblig'd against my mind, to go with her in her Coach, for I was unwilling she should fee us together; though the Coach-man told me another story, yet I durst not examine any further into the matter, for fear of making her uneasie, and with abundance of kindness I askt her, when I should have an Opportunity without any restraint to let her know what a mighty Passion and Respect I had for her. It shall be very quickly, says she, for I now begin to think you love me; but yet time must confirm me in this Opinion. Oh! you are very cruel, faid I, and must have very little Love for me, thus to defer what I so easnestly beg. Speak the truth freely, fays she, and tell me whether you will Marry me? Yes, faid I, if you will, I'll Marry you, notwithflanding I never yet had a full fight of you, nor have had the happiness to know you. I am Rich, says she, and am of Birth, and they tell me, I have some Personal Merits. I replyed, . You have all the things which please me, beyond any Person in the World: Your Wit hath charm'd me, but you make me often despair, and I had much rather choose to dye at once, than fuffer what I do. She fell a laughing, and after that, there were few Evenings that we did not converse together, either at the Pracio, or at Manlanarez, or else at some House unknown to me, whither I was conducted. I must confess I never went into the Chamber with her, and I only talkt to her through the Grates of the Window, where for four hours together I used to make the most impertinent Figure in the World. To speak freely, one must live in Spain to be able to endure fuch ways and Customs; but yet really I loved Ines; lobserv'd in her something that was very smart and taking, which furpriz'd and affected me.

One time I met her in a Garden, where she had appointed me to be, and where she shewed me more kindness than she us'd to do. When she saw it begin to be dark, she desir'd me to be gone; I unwillingly obey'd her, and as I went along a narrow Street, I perceiv'd three Men with Sword in hand, set upon one fingle Man, who defended himself valiantly: I could not endure to fee so unequal a Match, and I run to second him, but just as I came up to him, they made a pass at him. and he fell upon me like a dead Man. These Murderers run away as fast as they could, and by this time the noise had drawn out a great many People, who feeing me with my Sword in hand, made no question that I was one of the Criminals. They prepar'd to feize me, but perceiving their ill intentions. I thought it was better to provide for my fafety by flight, than to trust to my Innocence. I was closely pursu'd, and which way foever I took, still they met with me. In this distress, I had a glimpse of a Door half open, I slipt into it without any body's feeing me, and groping along, I came at last into a very dark Hall; I perceiv'd Light through a door, I could not tell whether it was best to open it, nor what I should say, if there were People in it. I considered with my felf, that I had the looks of one affrighted, and that I should be taken for a Man that came from doing some ill Action, and fought for an Opportunity to do some other: I deliberated a long time, I liften'd with great Attention to hear some body talk, and hearing none, at last I ventur'd, and softly open'd the Door, and faw no body; I nimbly look'd about where to hide my felf; methought the Hangings stuck out in fome places, and really I got behind them in a little corner : I had been there but a very little while, when I efpy'd coming in, Ines and Isabella. I cannot express to you, Madam, what a pleasant Amazement I was in, to find my self in my Mistres's House: I no ways doubted, that Fortune favoured my Defign; I was in no fear of those who might search after me, and as I was even ready to go and throw my felf down at her feet, I heard Isabella begin to Discourse. Says she, What hast thou been doing to day, dear Ines, Hast thou seen Daucourt ? Yes, fays Ines, I have feen him, and I have reason to believe he loves me desperately, unless all my Rules deceive me; he talks very ferioully of Marrying me; that which perplexes me, is, that he will first see and know me. And how is it possible for thee to deny either the one or the other ? replies Isabella. No, I do not pretend to do it, anfwers Ines, only I'll take the most favourable Opportunities; I fancy I shall not think it cunning to set my felf in a full light, and all the Curtains open; no, I intend they shall be close drawn, and that the Windows shall only let in someglimmering Rays of the Sun, which shall serve to set me off. As to my Birth, I have got my Pedigree Authentically drawn, which off me nothing but a little Old Parchment gnaw'd by the Mice. And as to ready Money, thou knowest my Old Lover, honest Don Diego, will furnish me : when Daucourt has told and receiv'd it, he will little think, that Thieves appointed to take it away from him upon our very Wedding-Night: I have this day taken very fair Lodgings ready Furnish'd; so that thou wilt yield, I have neglected nothing which might contribute to the success of a business so advantagious to me, and which I so much defire. Says nabella, thy precautions feem very wife; but yet I fear the discovery of the Intrigue. But fays Ines, Prethee my Dear, what dost thou do? As to Marriage I make but a small Progress, says Isabella; but to speak truth that is not my Design : I find Belleville an honest Man, I am fenfible that I love him, I only defire the possession of his Heart, and I fancy, I should be forry if he would Marry me. Thou art of an odd fort of Humour, fays Ines; thou lovest him, thy Fortune is none of the greatest, thou. might'st be happy with Itim, and yet thou durst not defire to behis Wife. But Prethee, fays Isabella, who told thee that I should be happy with him? Love is so unconstant a thing that hardly are the first-moments of Marriage pleasant; I tell thee, Love must have something continually to provoke and four it; Novelty is a grateful Dish to it, and how is it possible for a Wife always to be new? And how can a Mistress either, cries Ines, be fo? Go, Isabella, thy Modifi Maxims are not reasonable. Neither, says Isabella, ean I like of what thou defignest; and if thou would'st take my Advice, thou should'st seriously consider thine own Age; for to speak freely, thou art Old, very Old: Is it just for fixty Years, to put a Cheat upon a Man of thirty? He will be enraged at thee, he will certainly forfake thee, or elfe he'll break thy Bones; nay, it may happen he'll knock thy Brains out before he leaves thee. Ines was of a Quick Apprehension and brisk; the took it hainously that Isabella should reproach her with her Age, and immediately the gave her the greatest box on the Ear which perhaps was ever given. The other, of as hafty a Nature, return'd her two. Ines leut her a dozen good cuffs with her fift, which were speedily repaid: So that my two Female Champions entred the Field of Mars. The Combat was so extream pleasant between them, that I almost broke my fides with laughing in my little Hole. I had much ado to hinder my felf from breaking out aloud; for you may eafily believe, Madam, that I had very little concern for either of them, after the Trick which I understood was to be put upon me with so much Malice, and when I must necessarily look up on Ines as a common Jilt. Isabella, who knew all the weak places of her Enemy, took her Opportunities, and being both younger and stronger, tore off her Head-dress, and left her all bald. In my whole Life I was never more surprized, than to see the Hair fall off, which before appeared so lovely to me, and which I thought had been her own: But this was nothing to what followed, for with one blow of her fift she not only made several of her Teeth leap out of her Mouth, but also two little Cork plumpers, which served to fill out her hollow Jaws. And here the Fray ended, for their Chamber-Maids, who had heard the noise of the Skirmish, run in, and with much ado parted them. They said the bitterest things one against the other, and even threatned to reveal to the Inquisition most terrible Crimes, with which they reproach'd each other.

Ines finding her felf with her Chamber-maid only, look'd at her felf a long time in a great Glass, and protested that there was nothing so injurious, which she had not faid to Isabella, that she might be reveng'd of her for the Abuses the had receiv'd from her: At last the fat her down and rested her felf a while; a little Table was brought and fet before her, and upon it she lays an Artificial Eye, which used to fill up the place of a Natural one she wanted; afterwards, she takes of her Face as much white and red Colour, as without any Hyperbole, would have covered a Mask. It would be hard to describe to you, Madam, the extraordinary ugliness of this Woman, who till now, had appear'd to me very pretty. I rub'd my Eyes, I was like a Man that could not tell whether he doted or had some idle Dream. To be short, she undrest her felf and was almost naked: and here I shall forbear representing to you this frightful Carcass. But certainly, Love never met with a better Cure; in all those parts where other Felks are fat and plump, the was lean and hollow; the lookt perfectly like a Skeleton, which by some secret Spring was made to move about the Room: She was in a Gown with a white Mantle upon her Shouldiers, her Head bald and her Arms appear'd extream little and lean; she bethought her felf, that in the Scuffle her Pearl Bracelets broke, the had a mind to gather them up, but had enough to do to find them; her Chamber-maid came to help her, they counted them, and found they had all but two which were well curs'd for my fake : Ines swore by St. James, Patron of Spain, that the would not go to Bed till the had found them : Her Maid and she lookt in every corner and hole, removing the Tables, tumbling fumbling the Chairs, and throwing this way and that way every thing they came near, for Ines was in a very ill Humour : As I faw her make towards my corner, fear of being discovered by fuch a Fury, made me lye as close as 'twas possible; but unluckly as I drew back, I threw down feveral Bottles which flood there upon Shelves, and these made a mighty noise : hes believing it was the Cat which had done this mischief; with all her might cry'd out, Gato, Gato; that is, Cat, Cat; and lifting up the Hangings to chaffife the Cat, with an amazement and rage which almost struck her dead upon the spot, she they'd me; the fell violently upon me, and pull'd the Hair off my Head; the revil'd me grievously, the was like one Frantick, the Veins of her Neck were fo fwell d, and her wrinkles and furrows were fo frightful, that methought I saw the Head of Medula; and in this my great Terror, I confidered my escape, when on a sudden I heard a strange noise upon the Stairs which gave me a fresh Alarm : But Ines left me, and run down to know what was the matter, and by that time. the whole House was fill'd with cries and weeping: The Officers of Juffice, who had found this Young Man (of whom I told you before, Madam) lying upon the Ground, and was the cause I was fo hotly pursu'd, after some diligent search, found that he was the Son of a Lady who liv'd in the fame House; they brought him thus with his Body all wounded and bloody, at which fad fight she fell into a desperate condition. And as I had told Ines something of my Adventure, that I might give her some satisfaction why I came into her Chamber, so this kan Hag, would not keep my Secret, but to be reveng'd on me for having discover'd her crafty tricks, was resolv'd to inform against me. I have the Murderer in my -power, cries he; come, come along with me, and I'll deliver him up to you. Immediately the opens her Chamber-door, and being follow'd by a Troop of Alquazils, that is to fay, Serjeants or Bayliffs, deliver'd me up to them with all the necessary Evidence for my speedy Tryal. Says she, I saw this wretch with his naked Sword all bloody with the wound he came from giving; he ran into my Chamber to fave himself, and threatned me with Death if I would not conceal him. Whatever I could fay in my Justification was all in vain, they would not so much as hear me; they bound my hands with Cords, and fo led me to Prison as a wretched Malefactor, whilst good Ines, and the Mother and Sifter of the wounded, loaded me with blows and curses; they caused me to be put in a Hole, where I was several days without having the liberty to give notice to my Brother or my Friends of what has past; they likewise were in mighty pain about me, concluding for certain, that I was murder'd in some corner of a Street, or else at some of my Night-Intrigues.

At last, Belleville, who still continu'd to see Isabella, acquainted her with his grief, and beg'd her to affift him to discover at least, what they had done with my Body : She was fo industrious to get Information about it, that Ines Chambermaid, who had been ill enough us'd by her Mistress, told her the whole Secret of the History, altho' her good Lady had strictly forbid her. Upon this News, my Brother ran to be the King to have pity on me, and to command them to remove me out of that hole, which feem'd more like Hell than a Prison: I swooned away when I saw light: I was so wasted and weak, that I frighted folks; but yet I could not come out of Prison for some time, because of certain Formalities ; and I leave you to think, Madam, what I meditated against the perfidious Ines; but yet I know not whether ever I should be in a condition to put in execution all the Projects of my just Revenge, for the Gantleman, who was wounded, continued very ill, and his Life was despair'd of ; mine depended upon such a ticklish point, that I put up most ardent Prayers for him; and in such a melancholy uncertainty, I past a great many hours: But my Brother, who was perswaded of my lonocence, omitted nothing for the discovery of the Authors of this Murderous Act. At last, he understood that this young and wounded Cavallero had a Rival, and he made fo diligent a Search and Examination, that he certainly new that the Blow came from thence; he was fo fortunate to get him apprehended, and this Man freely own'd the Fact, which acquitted me I was therefore fet at Liberty, and I conceiv'd fo much Joy at it, that I was fick for feveral days after; or rather perhaps, it was an effect of that unwholfom Air which I received in the Prison.

In the mean while, wicked Ines, who to be fure, was not much at ease, for sear of what might happen upon her serving me such a pleasant Trick, having notice that I was set see, and in a condition to Reward her according to her Merits, pack'd up her Baggage, and one Night privately runs away, and no body knew whither she was gone; so that when we wanted her, at least to make her an Example amongst the cheating filts, we were disappointed. But I was easily satisfy because naturally I do not love to do any hurt to Women. But I self she might play me some other pranks, I lest Madrid, that I might also avoid those of Spain. I am now returning into france, Madam, continued he, whither I shall be very glad to carry your Commands, if you'll do me so great an Honour to lay any upon me.

Though I have some trouble at what happened to this Gentleman, yet I could not chuse but laugh at some Circumstances of this Adventure, and I am willing to believe, Dear Cosin, that your will not be displeas'd, that I make you partake with me. I shall write to you no more till I come to Madrid, where I promise my self to see things far more worthy of your Notice, than hitherto I have been able to acquaint you.

From St. Augustin, this 25th. of March.

LETTER VIII.

I Would not, if you please, Dear Cosin, have you angry, that I did not write to you as foon as I arriv'd at Madrid: I thought it was better to tarry till I was in a condition to tell you fomething more exactly and curious. I knew that my Kinswomen was to go before me, as far as Alcouendus, which sabout fix Leagues diftance from Madrid. As the was not yet ome, and I had a mind to stay for her, Don Frederic de Cardonne proposed to me to go Dine at a very fine House, the Master whereof was his particular Acquaintance; So that inflead of going into this little Village, we cross'd by it, and through a Walk pleasant enough, we came to the House of Don Augustin Pacheco. This Gentleman is ancient, and yet he is ately marry'd to Donna Thoresa de Figueroa, This is his Third Wife, and the is but Seventeen Years of Age; but of fuch an greeable Humour, and so ingenious, that we were perfectly Charm'd with her Wit and her Person: It was then Ten a clock when we got there. The Spaniards are naturally Lazy, and love to rife late; and these Two were yet in Bed. Her lusband gave us such a frank and civil Reception, as sufficitatly testiss'd how much he was pleas'd that we came to see lim. He went to walk in his Gardens, whose Exactness yields nothing to ours. I accompanied him withour delay; for he Weather was very inviting, and the Trees in this Country reas forward in the Month of March, as they are in France at the latter end of June. Indeed this is the most Charming Season for the enjoyment of what they call La Prima Vera, that is to fay, the Beginning of the Spring: For when the Son begins to have more Force and Heat, it scorches and withers the Leaves, as if they had passed through Flames. These Gardens of which I speak, were adorn'd with Bowling Greens. Fountains and Statues, and Don Augustin was not backward to shew us all the Rarities. He is much taken with them, and values not spending Money thereon; for he is very rich. He led us into a Gallery, where there were divers Tables of Cedar Wood, fet full of Books. He immediately led us up to the Biggest of them, and told us, they contained an inestimable Treasure; and that there was a Collection of Plays of the bell Authors: Heretofore, continued he, Vertuous persons could not think fit to go to Plays; there was nothing to be feen but Actions contrary to Modesty; they heard Discourses which were offensive; the Actors made honest People asham'd; there Vice was flatter'd, and Vertue condemn'd; the Scenes became bloody with Combats; the weakest was always opprest by the strongest, and Custom gave continuance to Grimes. But fince Lopes de Vega hath so successfully labour'd to reform the Spanish Theatre, there is now nothing fuffer'd contrary to good Manners: Both the Favourite, the Footman, and the Ploughman, without disguise keeping to their Native Simplicity, and making that pleafant by an ingenious turn, find the Secrets to cure our Princes, and even our Kings, of that common Difease to hear Truth, when their own Faults are represented. It was he who gave Rules for these Ascents, and who taught them to divide their Plays into Three Jornada's, or Acts. Since his time, we have feen flourish the Mountalvanes, the Mendoza's, the Rojas Alarcones the Veles, the Mirade Mescuas, the Coellos, and the Villaizanes But above all, Don Pedro Calderone excell'd as to the Serious and Grave Part, and even in the Comick Part he furpafs'd all those that went before him. I could not forbear telling him That at Victoria I say a Play, which to me seem'd bad enough And if I might speak my Judgment freely, I would not have them intermixt with Holy Tragedies (which require great Re spect, and according to their Subjects should be worthily ma nag'd) any idle or filly Jests. He reply'd, That by this I had faid to him, he knew the Genius of my Country; that he had seldom observ'd the French to like what the Spaniards did and as this Thought carry'd him to some displeasing Reflections I affur'd him, That Naturally we have no Antipathy for an Nation; That we even thought our felves oblig'd to do Juftic to our Enemies. And as to Plays, though I had yet found none to my Fancy, it did not follow but that there might be others much better and more agreeable to me. The manner of my talking to him did a little compose him; so that he defired me to go into his Wise's Apartment, which was at the end of the Gallery.

Don Fernand de Tolledo, and the Three other Knights, tarry'd there, because it is not the Custom in Spain for Men to go into Womens Chambers while they are in Bed : A Brother has not this Priviledge, unless his Sister be sick. Donna Theresa receiv'd me in as kind and obliging a manner, as if we had been long acquainted. And this must be confess'd, in praise of the Spaniards, that nothing of that fort of Familiarity which comes from want of, or a mean Education, appears in their Entertainments; for with great Civility and Earnestness they are very careful to pay what they owe to others, and at the same time do not forget what's due to themselves. She was in Bed without any Coife or Cornet; her Hair was parted in the middle of her Forehead, ty'd behind with a Ribbon, and wrapt up with Carnation-colour'd Taffety: Her Shift was very fine, and of so vast a largness, that it lookt like a Surplice, the Sleeves were as big as Mens, and button d at the Hands with Diamonds: Instead of narrow Point at the Neck and Hands, she had hers wrought with Blue and Flesh colour'd Silk in Flowers; her Ruffles were of White Taffety Pinkt. --- She had several little Pillows ty'd with Ribbons, and trim'd with very broad and fine Lace; the had Baffes all of Flowers of Point de Spain in Silk and Gold, which lookt very pretty? Her Bed was all of Copper, Guilt, with little Balls of Ivory and Ebony; her Bed-Head was adorn'd with four Rows of little Copper Ballisters, very well wrought.

She ask'd me leave to rife, but when she came to put on her Stockings and Shooes, she caus'd the Key to be taken out of the Door, and that to be bolted. I enquir'd the Reason of this Barricading: She told me, That she knew there was with me some Spanish Gentlemen, and that she had rather lose her Life than they should see her Feet. I broke out into Laughter, and begg'd her to let me see them; for that I could not apprehend that the thing was of that moment. It is true indeed, that for their Littleness they are something extraordinary; for I have seen Children of six Years old have as great. As soon as she was up, she took a little Cup sull of Red, and with a good big Pencil she laid it on, not only upon her Cheeks, her Chin, under Nose, above her Eye-brows, and the Edges of her Ears; but the also bedaub'd the infide of her Hands, her Fingers, and her Shoulders. She told me, that every Night at going to Bed, and every Morning at rifing, they laid this Colour on; That she did not paint, and that she was willing enough to leave the use of this Red, but that it was such a General Cufrom, that it could not be dispensed with; for let one be of never fo fresh a Colour, they would look pale, and fickly when they were near others, if they did not use this Red. One of her Women perfum'd her from Head to Foot, with excellent Pastrils, the Smoak whereof she made to ascend to her; another took Orange Flower-Water in her Mouth, and dexteroully through her Teeth she sprinkled it like Rain upon her; and this they call Roussia. She told me, That there was nothing that spoil'd the Teeth more than this was of squirting it, but that the Water smelt better for it. Of this I doubted, and I thought it very ugly, that an Old Woman, such as that was which I faw there, should come and spurt Water out of her Mouth, in my Face.

Don Augustin having known by one of his Wife's Servants, that the was dreft, did not fland upon the Custom of the Countrey, but lead Don Fernand, and the Knights into her Chamber. The Conversation was not long in common, but we divided; for my part, I discoursed with Donna Therefa, and she told me, she was born at Madrid, but was brought up at Lisbon with her Grand-mother, who was Sifter to Don Augustin Pacheco; fo that her Husband was her great Uncle; and thefe fort of Alliances are often contracted in Spain. She talkt to me much of the Young Infanta of Portugal, and boasted mightily of her Wit, and told me, if I would go into her Closet, I might judge of her Beauty, for she had her Picture there. I immediately went, and was furpriz'd with the Charms I observed in this Princess. She had her Hair cut and curl'd like the Periwig of an Abbot, and an Invention for preserving Children from falling, so big, that there were upon it Two Baskets of Flowers, and little Veilels of a Medicinal Earth, of which they eat a great deal in Portugal and Spain, although tis an Earth that hath little Tafte. Donna Therefa fhew'd me the Skin of a Serpent, which her Husband kill'd in the Indies; and though it was dead, yet I was afraid of it. Those of this kind are extream dangerous; but it feems as if Providence had taken care to preserve Men from them, for these Serpents have a fort of Bell about their Head, which rings when they move, and gives notice to Travellers to secure themselves.

This young Lady, who is a great Lover of Portugal, discourfed to me much in its Favour : She told me, That the Sea, which flows up into the Tagus, renders that River capable to bear the greatest Gallions, and the fairest Ships upon the Ocean : That the City of Liebon stands upon the side of a little Hill, which infensibly descends to the very Brink of the Tagus : So that the Houses being built one above another, are all seen at once, and so becomes a very pleasant Prospect. The old Walls, which the Moore built about it, are yet standing: There are of them four Rounds, built at divers times; the last may have about fix Leagues Circumference. The Caftle, which flands upon a Hill, hath its particular Beauties: In it you fee Palaces, Churches, Fortifications, Gardens, Armories and Streets : There's always a good Garrison with a Governour: This Fortress commands the City, and from thence they may thunder upon it, in case it proves rebellious. The Palace where the King lives, is more confiderable, if not for its Strength, yet for the Uniformity of its Buildings: Every thing there is Great and Magnificent; the Prospect it has to the Sea hath made them take so much care to beautify it. She discoursed to me afterwards of the Publick Places, which are adorn'd with Vaults and Arches : and of the great Houses round about the Dominicans Convent, where the Inquisition is, before the Gate of which there is a Fountain, with a great many Statues of White Marble, which throw the Water every way. She added, That the Fair of Roucio is kept on the Tuelday of every Week, in a Place which might be taken for an Amphitheatre, because 'tis environ'd with little Hills, upon which are built several fair Palaces. There's another Place on the fide of the Tagus, where the Market is kept; and there one may meet with every thing which can be defired, of the best in his kind, either in Fowl, Fish, Fruits, Herbs or Pulse. The Custom-House stands a little higher up. where there is infinite Riches and Rarities, and some Fortifications are lately made to preferve them. The Metropolitan Church is not eminent for any thing but its Antiquity: It is dedicated to St. Vincent; it is pretended that after he had fuffered Martyrdom, they refused him Burial, and that the Ravens watcht over his Body, till some pious Persons came and took it up, and carried it to Valentia in Spain, to have it worthipt a and for this Reason there are Ravens kept in the Church; and there is a Box for them, into which are put the Alms to buy them Food.

Although Lisbon, continued she, is a very pleasant place to live in, yet we dwelt at Alcantara: This Village is not above a Quarter of a League from the City; There's in it a Royal House not so fine for its Buildings as for its Situation; the River supplies the place of a Canal: There one fees admirable Gardens; all fill'd with Grotts and Cataracts, or great Falls of Water, as well as Spouts of Water. Belem is not far from hence: it is the place defign'd for the Sepulture of the Kings of Portugal, in the Church of the Hieronimites: It is all covered over with White Marble; the Pillars and Statues are of the fame; the Tombs are in even Rows in three different Chappels, amongst which there are some well wrought. Belem, Feriera, Sacavin, and some other places about the City, are remarkable for the vast quantities of Oranges and Lemons growing there; the Air you smell there is all perfum'd; you can hardly fit down under the Trees, but you are covered with their Flowers; one sees running amongst them a Thousand little Rivulets, and it may be affirmed, that there is nothing more sweet in the Night, than the Murmurs and Harmony which are there frequently heard. At Belem there are great Magazines of Oranges, both fweet and four Lemons, Pome-Citrons and Lemons. They load them on small Vessels, and so transport them into most parts of Europe.

Likewise she told me of the Knights del Habito de Christo, of the Habit of Christ, whose multitude made them less considerable; and also of the Counts of the Kingdom, which have the same Priviledges as the Grandees of Spain; they are possess'dof Las Comarcas, which are certain Lands belonging to the Crown, and divided into Counties of a confiderable Value. She told me, that when the King intended to go abroad, the People had notice of it by a Trumpet, which founds very early in the Morning in the place through which his Majesty is to pals For the Queen, 'tis a Flute and a Drum ; for the Infanta, Hautboy. When they all go abroad together, the Trumpet, the Drum, the Flute, and the Hautboy, march in a Company and by this means, if any one which cannot get into the Pa lace to present a Petition, he need only wait for the King's coming by. Eight Leagues from Coimbrie, there's a Founting in a place called Cedima, which draws in, and swallows down every thing which touches its Water; Experiments are often made upon great branches of Trees, and fometimes of Horles which they cause to be brought there, from whence they cannot get back, but with great difficulty. But that which causes the greatest wonder, added she, is the Lake of the Mountain of Strella, where there are often found the Wrecks of Ships, broken Mafts, Anchors, and Sails, and ye the Sea is above twelve Leagues off, and this is upon the top. of a very high Hill too; it cannot be imagin'd by what means all these things should come there. Whilst I was hearing with great delight Donna Theresa relate these things, her Husband and the rest of the Company came and interrupted us. Don Augustin was a Man of Understanding, and for all his Age, was very pleasant. If my Curiofity is not indifcreet, pray Madam, lays he, tell me, what Subject this Child has entertained you with? Mi Tio, replied the, that is my Uncle, you may eafily believe it was Portugal: Oh! I thought as much, cry'd he There it is the always choses her Field of Action. Dear God, lays she, every body has some place they love, and when once you are got to your Mexico, one cannot draw you from thence. You have been in the Indies, refumed I, and Donna Therefa hath hew'd me a Serpent, which she says you kill'd there. It is true, Madam, continued he; and if it were not time for you to Dine, it would not, it may be, be unpleasant to you to hear of what I have feen there. But, fays he, I should go to Mabid, and if you please, I'll bring to you Donna Theresa : It is there indeed, where I should lay the Scene of Discourse, and where I could tell you of things which I believe you would not be unwilling to know. I affur'd him, that he would do me a particular favour to give me fo fignal a mark of his kindness; and that I should be over-joy'd to see the fair Donna Theresa, and to hear her talk of the Indies, The that discours'd so admiably of every thing. He took me by the Hand and led me down into a Hall paved with Marble, which was hung with Pictures instead of Tapistry, and set round with Cushions. Cloth was laid there upon a Table for the Men, but upon a Carpet on the Floor, it was laid for Donna Therefa, my felf, and my Daughter.

I was surprized at this Fastrion, not having been used to Dine b; however I took no notice of it, and I hadla mind to try it, but I was never more uneasie; my Leggs ak'd most horribly: me while I lean'd upon my Elbow, and then upon my Hand: ha word, I could not Dine, and yet the good Lady was not inside of it, for she thought the Women in France were used be eat upon a Floor, as they did in Spain. But Don Fernand be Toledo, who observ'd me uneasie, rose from Table with Don hederic de Cardonna, and both of them told me, that absoluted I should sit with them; I was willing enough, provided Don Theresa would do so too; but she durst not, because there were Men, upon whom she did not so much as lift up her Eyes but by sealth. Don Augustin bid her come without Ceremony and told her, that they must let me know, that they were glad to see me at their House. But that which was very pleasant, was when this Lady was set upon a Chair, she was no less at ease, than I was when I sat upon the Carpet; she protested with a pretty fort of freedom, that she never before sat in a Chair, and that she had never once thought on't. Thus we dined very merrily, and there was nothing which could be added to the obliging manner of my Reception in this House. I gave to Donna Theresa some Ribbons, Pins, and a Fan. She was mightily pleased, and gave me as many thanks, as if the Present had been of value. Here thanks were not common, one could not observe in them any thing that was low or covetous. And to speak truth, they have abundance of Wit and Sense in this Country, it appears even in the smallest trifles.

I had not been gone an hour from this House, when I saw coming towards us two Coaches drawn by fix Mules apiece, which gallop'd a great pace, and faster than the best Horses could do. I could hardly have believed that Mules could run to faft. But that which I wondred most at, was the manner of their being harnasi'd. These two Coaches and their Furniture took up almost a quarter of a League of room. There was one with fix Glaffes indifferent large, and made like ours, except that the upper part is very low, and fo, Inconvenient. Within it had a Cornish or Wood gilt but so large, that it lookt like one for a Chamber. The Coach was guilt on the out-fide, which is only allow'd to Embassadors and Strangers. The Curtains were of Damask and Cloth few'd together. The Coach-man rode upon one of the fore-Mules, they do not fit in the Coach-box although there is one; and upon my asking the Reason of it Don Frederick de Cardonna told me, that he had been affur'd that this Custom had been ever fince the Coach-man of the Lord Duke D' Olivares drove his Master, who over-hearing fomething of great Importance which the Duke told to one o his Friends, reveal'd it; the matter having made a great noil at Court, (for it feems the Duke accus'd his Friend of fomein discretion, which nevertheless he was innocent of) ever find they have been so cautious to make the Coach-man ride upo the first Mule. Their Traces are filk or Hempen Cords, foc ceffive long, that from one Mule to another, there's above three Ells diffance, and I cannot understand, but every thin should break at the rate they run. It is true, that though the run very fast in the Country, yet they go very softly in the City; and 'tisa tirefome thing to go fo flowly as if they to their steps. And though at Madrid, they have but four Mule vet they have a Postilion. My Relation was in the first of these Coaches, with three Spanish Ladies. The Gentlemen and the Pages were in the other, which was not made after the fame manner. It had Boots, as formerly our Coaches had, they are to let down, and the Leather is open at bottom, fo that when the Women come out (if they have no mind their Feet should be feen) the Boot is let down to the ground to hide their Shooes. It had Glasses twice as big as my hand, made fast to each end of the Coach, for the conveniency of calling to the Footmen. Nothing more refembles our Garret-windows than these do. The top of the Coach is covered with Gray Parragon. and the Curtains are of the fame, large and long, hang without and draw round, and are fastned with Buttons and Loops: This looks very ill, and you are inclosed within as if you were in

My Relation was dreft, half French and half Spanish : she feem'd over-joy'd to fee me, and I was no less to fee her. As to her Person, I found her not at all chang'd; but I could not forbear laughing at her way of speaking: She now understands very little French, although the continually speaks and loves it fo much, that it is impossible for her to learn any other Language: But the now mixes Italian, English, and Spanish with her own Natural Language; and this makes fuch a Fargon, as isvery strange to one, who knew her, as I did, to have the French Language, in its purity, and able to read Lectures of it to the Learned. She cannot endure to be told, that the has forgot it; and indeed she does not believe it, having never left off speaking it; either with some of her own Women, or with Ambaffadors and Strangers, who generally underflood it. Nevertheless, she speaks very ill: And if one is not at the Fountain-head, it is difficult long to speak a Language well, which is every day changing, and continually making new progreffes.

I found the Ladies which were with her extream pretty: I do affure you, that there are in this Country some very handome and aimable. We embraced each other often, and went back to Madrid. Before we came there we past over a fandy Plain, of about Four Leagues, but so uneven, that every moment we fell into holes big enough to bury the Coach, and which hindr'd it for going very fast. This uneven way lasted fill we came to a little Village call'd Mandes, which is but half a League from Madrid. All the Countrey here is dry, and very open; you can scarcely see a Tree on any side you look . The City is scituated in the middle of Spain, which is New Castile. It is above an Age fince the Kings of Spain have chosen to keep their their Court in it, because of the purity of the Air, and the goodness of the Water, which really is so good and so light, that the Cardinal Infanta would drink no other when he was in Flanders; and he caus'd it to be brought by Sea in Earthern Jars, well stopt. The Spaniards pretend, that the Founder of Madrid was a Prince nam'd Ogno Bianor, Son of Tiberino, King of the Latines, and of Manto, who had a Queen, more Famous for the Science of Astrology, which she understood to a wonderful degree, than for her Birth. 'Tis thought, that Madrid must be in the Heart of Europe, because the little Village of Pinto, which is not above Three Leagues from it, is called in Latine, Punslium; and that is reckon'd to be in the Center of Europe.

The first thing I observ'd was, that the City is not enclosed either with a Wall or Ditch; the Gates, as one-may fay, are only made fast by a Latch; those which I have already feen, are all broken; there is not feen any place of Defence, neither Castle, nor in a word, any thing which might not be for ced with throwing of Oranges and Lemons; but yet it might be necessary to fortifie this City: The Mountains which are round it, are of some use for its Defence; I have pass'd through fome places of them, which are fo narrow, that one might flui them up with a good big Stone, and with a hundred Men op pose the passage of a whole Army. The Streets are long and ftraight, and of a good largeness, but there's no place work paved; let one go as foftly as 'tis possible, yet one is almos jumbl'd and shaken to pieces; there are more Ditches and dirty places than in any City in the World, the Horses go up to the Bellies, and the Coaches up to the middle fo that it dashes a upon you, and you are spoyl'd unless you either pull up the Glasses, or draw the Curtains which I have spoke of : very of ten the Water comes into the Coaches at the bottom of th Boots, which are open.

The Houses there have rarely any great Gates to them, thol which have are without Courts. The Doors indeed, are pre ty large; and for the Houses, they are very graceful, spaciou and convenient, though they are only built of Earth and Brid I think they are altogether as dear as at Paris. The first Stor which they raise belongs to the King, and he can either le or sell it, unless the Owner of the House buy it off, which almost constantly done, and this is a considerable Revenue to the King.

There is commonly in every House Ten or Twelve Room on a Floor; in some Twenty and more; they have their Sun mer and their Winter Apartments, and very often, one for Autumn, and another for Spring-time: So that having very great Families, they are forced to Lodge them in some Neighbouring Houses, which they hire on purpose for them.

You mult not wonder, Dear Coufin, that they have so many Domesticks: There are two Reasons for it. The first is, that both for Food and Wages the Spaniards give but two Rials 2 day, which is not above Six pence of our Money. I fay the Spaniards do this, for Strangers pay after the rate of four Rials, which is about Twelve pence of our Money. Neither do the Spaniards give to their Gentlemen above Fifteen Crowns 2 Month, with which they must wear Velvet in Winter, and Taffety in Summer: But then they live only upon Onions, Peafe, and fuch mean stuff, and this makes the Pages and Footmen as greedy as Doggs. But I should speak of the other Domesticks as well as the Pages, for in this matter they are all alike, let them have what Wages they will. They are kept fo very hungry, that in carrying the Dishes to the Table, they eat half the Victuals that is in them; they throw it into their Mouths fo burning hot, that you shall observe their Teeth all rotten with the Practice. I advis'd my Kinfwoman to get a little Silver Stew-pan made and fastened with a Padlock, like that I saw of the Arch-Bishop of Burgos, and she did so; and now after the Cook hath fill'd it, he looks through a little Grate to fee whether the Soupe does well; and thus the Pages get nothing of it but the Steam. Before this Invention, it happened a hundred times, that when we thought to have taken up some Broth, we found neither that, nor any Flesh; for you must know that if the Spaniards are Temperate, 'tis when the Expence is their own; they are not fo, when they eat at another's coft. I have seen Persons of the Highest Quality eat with us like so many Wolves, they were so hungry: They were sensible enough of it themselves, and pray'd us not to wonder at it, for they found the Ragoas after the French way, so excellent, that they could not forbear.

There are Cooks-shops almost at every corner of a Street: These have great Kettles set upon Trevets. There solks may have such ordinary things as Beans, Garlick, Leeks, or a little Broth, in which they steep their Bread. The Gentlemen and Waiting-women go thither as other People, for at home they only dress Victuals for the Master and Mistris, and their Children. They are strangely Temperate in Wine; the Women never drink any, and the Men so little, that a quarter of a Pint will serve one a whole day. You cannot affront a Man worse, than to call him a Drunkard. Here's indeed, a great many things to make up the first Reason why they keep so many Servants. Now follows the fecond.

When a great Man dies, if he had a hundred Servants, his Son keeps all he found in the House, without putting one away: When the Mother happens to dye, either her own Daughter or her Daughter-in-law takes into her Service all the Women- Servants; and this Cuftom holds to the fourth Generation, for they are never turn'd away. They are put, as I have told you, into neighbouring Houses, and have their Ration, or Allowances. They come often to their Mafter or Mifires's House, but 'tis rather to shew they are not dead, than to do any Service. I was to fee the Dutchess of Oslona, which is a very great Lady, and I was amazed to fee fo many Chambermaids and Women, for every Room was full of them. I askt ther, how many the had? She told me, the had now only 200. but that very lately she had 500 more. If particular Persons have this Custom of keeping of so many Servants, the King must needs keep abundance more, which without doubt is very chargeable to him, and must hurt his Affairs. I have been told that in Madrid only, if the Pensions which he gives are reckoned, he gives Ration or Allowances to above Ten Thoufand Persons.

As to the King's House, the Provision for it is daily brought in, and it is regulated according to the Quality of the Persons. There is distributed both tame and wild Fowl, Fish, Chocolate, Fruit, Ice, Gharcoal, Wax-Candles, Oyl, Bread, and in a word, every thing that is necessary for Life.

Embassadours have their certain Expences, and so have some Grandees of Spain. There are Persons appointed to Sell at their Houses whatever I have just now named, and that without paying any Custom or Excise: And this saves them a great deal of Money, for the Duties upon all sorts of Goods and Wares are excessive high.

None but Embassadors and Strangers are allow'd to have a great many Footmen and Pages to follow them: For by the Pragmatick (by which name they call all their Edicts of Reformation, they are forbidden to have any more than two Footmen to follow them.) It is somewhat strange, that they who keep sour or five hundred Persons, may not be allow'd above three to accompany them. This third, you must know, is a Groom, which goes on soot, and keeps near the Horses, to hinder them from putting and intangling their Leggs in their long Traces, and he does not wear a Sword as the Footmen do:

do: And I must needs say, that if Age is a recommendable Quality, these three Men have that in a good degree. I have feen Footmen of Fifty Years of Age, and never any under Thirty. They are very unpleasant to look at, being very tawny, and of a Clownish Aspect : They cut their Hair close on the top of their heads, only let a Round be a little long, but very greafie, and feldom comb'd. The Hair they cut on the top of their heads, is done in the shape of a Wild Boar's Head. They wear long Swords, with Shoulder-Belts and Cloaks. They are all cloath'd either in Blew or Green, and often their green Cloth Cloaks are lined with blew Velvet cut in Flowers; their Sleeves are either of Velvet, Sattin, or Damask. One would think that these should be handsome Liveries, but yet I affure you, nothing is uglier; and their ill Looks disparage their Clothes. They wear Bands, but without any Collar, which is ridiculous. And upon their Coaches they have neither Galloons, nor tufted Buttons and Loops, nor any fort of Lace or

Their Gentlemen and their Pages always go in a Coach that follows; these wear black Cloathes in all Seasons. In Winter they wear Velvet, with Cloth Cloaks very long, but when they Mourn, they draw upon the ground. Although they are Pages, they wear no Swords, only most of them have a little Poniard hid under their Cloaths. In Summer they wear either Damask or Taffety, with Cloaks of a black Stuff very light.

It is only the great Lords, and the Titulado's, or Men of Title, which are permitted to have four Mules to their Coaches with those long Traces in the City. If any Person, without the diffinction of some Character, let him be as Rich as he will, should appear in the same Equipage, he would be affronted and abus'd in the open Street, his Traces would be cut, and himself Fin'd very high. Here, it is not enough to be Rich, a Man must also be of some Quality. The King only, can have fix Mules to his own Coach, and to those of his Attendants; which Coaches are not like others, and are diftinguish'd by this, that they are covered with green Oyl-Cloth round, as well as on the top, just as the Stage-Coaches in France, except that they are not of Wickers; but the carved Work is very coarse, and ill done, and they have falling Boots, and all is very ugly; and one would wonder how fo great a King can make use of them. But I have been told, that these fashion'd Coaches were in use in Charles the Fifth's time, that his were just like them; and that it is in imitation of so great an Emperour, that all the Kings which have Reigned fince, will have no other. Without doubt doubt there must be some such great Reason; for notwith standing this, the King has as fine Coaches as any are in the World, some made in France, and others in Italy, and other Parts. The great Persons have also very stately ones; but after the King's Example, they do not use them four times a Year. All Coaches are kept in large Courts, in which there are feveral Partitions enclosed. There are it may be to the number of two hundred in one Yard, and there are several of these Yards or Courts in divers parts of the City. The Reason why they fet them abroad is, because they have no room for them at home, their Houses being built, as I have already said, without Courts or great Gates. Of late, they begin to alter their Fashion, and use Horses instead of mules. And to be just. these Horses are extream beautiful; there is nothing wanting to them, and it would be difficult for the best Painters to draw any in greater Perfection. But 'tis a piece of Cruelty to make them draw fuch huge Coaches, which are almost as heavy as a House; besides the Streets are so very ill pav'd, that their Feet are quite spoyl'd in two Years time. They cost very dear, and are not big enough for their Coaches. But I have feen fome draw their pretty little Calashes, which were all painted and gilt, like those which are made in Holland, and nothing look'd more pleafant; and by their fwift running, and handfom carrying of their Heads, you would take them for Stags. As foon as you are out of Town you may put fix Horses to your Coach, Their Harness is very neat, and they trim their Manes, which hang to the ground, with Ribbons of divers colours; and fome times they dress up their Manes with a great many puffs of Silver Gauze, which makes a very pretty shew. The Harness for their Mules, are made of Leather, flat and broad, with which they cover them almost all over.

Two days ago I went with my Kinswoman to walk without St. Barnardine's Gate. 'Tis a place they frequent in Winter. Dom Antonio of Toledo, Son to the Duke of Alva, was there, with the Duke of Uzeda, and the Count of Alvanire. He had a Harness for his Horses of an Isabella colour, which so pleased me, that I could not forbear speaking to him of it when his Coach came near ours. According to Custom, he told me, that he laid them all at my Feet, and at Night when we got home, I was told, that his Gentleman desir'd to speak with me. He made me a Complement, and told me, that his Master's six Horses were in my Stable. My Kinswoman fell a laughing, and made Answer for me, that I was so lately arriv'd at Madrid, that I did not yet understand, that one must not praise any thing thing which belong'd to so generous a Cavaliero, as Don Antonia; but however, 'twas not the Fashion to receive Presents of so great value, and desired him to take them back again. But this he would not do, we sent them back immediately; he returned them, and so did we. To be short, the whole Evening past thus in sending backwards and forwards; and at last, we were forced to write him a Letter, and give our selves a great deal of Trouble to perswade him not to take it ill, that I would not accept them.

I am told, that after the King has once made use of a Horse, in Respect to him, no body afterwards will ride on him. It happened, that the Duke of Medina De las Torres had bought a Horse worth Five and Twenty Thousand Crowns, he was the handsomest and the bravest which was ever seen. He caus'd his Picture to be taken; King Philip the Fourth saw it, and had a mind to see the Horse. The Duke begg'd him to accept of him; but he resus'd him, and gave this Reason, that as he should seldom ride on him, and that no body would make use of him after he had mounted him, so the strength and usefulness of the Horse would be lost.

It is usual here for good Families to put their younger Daughters to Ladies; by whom they are employ d for the most part to Embroider in Gold and Silver, or in Silk of various colours, about their Shist-Necks or Hands: But if they are left to sollow their own Natural Inclination, they work very little, and talk much. They keep also both Male and Female-Dwarfs, and very ugly ones: The Females particularly have very frightful looks, their Heads are bigger than their Eodies; they always wear their Hair loofe about their Ears, and hanging down to the ground: At first fight, one would wonder what these little Figures were when they present themselves before ones Eyes. They wear Rich Cloaths; they are their Mistress's Considents, and for this Reason, they are denyed nothing they have a mind to.

In every House at a certain stated hour, all the Women meet with the Mistress of the Family, in the Chapel, there to repeat their Rosary aloud; they make use of no Book to say their Prayers by; indeed it is very seldom they have any. The Count of Charny, who is a Frenchman, very handsom, and of great worth, and is the King of Spain's General of his Horse in Catalonia, told me, that the other day being at Mass, and as he was saying his Prayers by his Book, an Old Spanish Woman came and snatch'd it from him, and with great Indignation threw it to the ground, saying to him, Let this alone, and make nually fond they are of their Beads; every Woman there has a pair fastned to her Girdle, and so long, that they almost touch the ground. They are perpetually without ceasing using them, in the Street, as they play at Omber, as they Discourse, nay, when they are making Love, when they are telling Lies, or speaking evil of their Neighbours. They are continually muttering over their Beads, let them be in never so much Company, nothing of this hinders them still to keep on their pace. I leave you to judge what Devotion there can be in this a but

Custom has a great Power in this Country.

Till of late, Women wore Vertingales of a prodigious bignels; this Fashion was very troublesome to themselves as well as others. There were hardly any doors wide enough for them to go through: But they have left them off now, and only wear them when they go to appear in the Queen's or the King's Presence: Commonly in the City they wear a certain fort of Vestment, which to speak properly, is a young or little Vertingale. They are made of thick Copper Wyre in a round form, about the Girdle, there are Ribbons fastned to them, with which they tye another round of the same form, which falls down a little lower, and which is wider; and of these they have five or fix rounds which reach down to the ground, and bear out their Peticoats and other Garments. They wear a vast number of this Device; and one would hardly believe that fo little Creatures as the Spanish Women are, could bear such a load. Their upper Garment is always of a coarse black Taffety. or of a grey plain Stuff made of Goats-hair, with a Trus or Fardle coming down a little above the Knees, and round the upper Garments; and if you ask them to what end this ferves they'll answer you, that with this they can make it longer as it wears out. The Queen-mother, as well as others, uses this to all her Garments. Even the Carmelites wear them in France 25 well as in Spain. But as to Women, it is rather a Fashion which they follow, than any Frugality; for they are neither Covetous nor good Housewifes, and of these things, they have two or three new ones in a Week. These upper Garments are To long before and on the fides, that they draw a great dea upon the ground, but behind, they do not draw at all. Though they wear them down so low, yet they will tread upon them that their Feet may not be feen, which are the parts they mol industriously hide. I have heard fay, that after a Lady ha Oblig'd her Gallant by all possible Civilities and Compliance, to confirm to him her Kindness, she will shew him her foot; and this here, they call the highest Favour; one must needs own, that in its kind, there is nothing prettier. As I have already told you their Feet are fo small, that their Shooes look like those of our Babies. They are made of black Spanish Leather, cut upon colour'd Taffety, without Heels, and as strait as a Glove. When they go, you would think they flew; we should not in a hundred Years learn their way of walking; they keep their Elbows close to their fides, and go without raising their feet just as one slides. But to return to their Habit; under this plain upper Garment, they have a dozen more, one finer, than another, of rich Stuffs, and trim'd with Galloons and Lace of Gold and Silver, to the Girdle. That I have told you a dozen, pray do not think that I exceed the Truth : During the exceffive Heats of the Summer, they only wear feven or eight, of which some are of Velvet, and others of thick Sattin. wear at all times a white Garment under all the rest, which they call Sabengua; it is made either of the fine English Lace, or of Muslin embroidered with Gold, and so wide, that they are four Ells in compals. I have seen of these worth five or fix hundred Crowns. At home they wear neither the little Vertingale nor Patens, these last are a fort of little Sandal, made of brocado or Velvet, set upon Plates of Gold, which raise them hif a Foot, and when they have thefe, they walk very ill, and me apt to fall. They use but very little Whale-bone in their stays, the midst of which are a third part of an Ell. One can ardly see in other Countries Women so slender. They shape heir Bodies before pretty high, but behind, you may fee them the middle of the back, they are so naked, and yet this is o Charming fight, for they are all dreadful lean, though they ould be very forry to be fat. And this is a grear Error among tem. Befides, they are very swarthy; so that this brown kin which is glew'd to their backs, must necessarily be diseasing to those who are not us'd to it. They put Red upon eir Shouldiers, which are all naked, as well as on their heeks. Neither do they want there for White, which is very od, but there are few which know how to use it; at first fight u can discern it. I have seen some of a very clear Comexion that was Natural. Most of them have very fine and aft Features; in their Looks and all their Actions you may ta Little affectation of being Courted, which their Humour es not diffemble. It's reckon'd beautiful among them to have Breafts, and they take care very early to hinder them from owing big. As foon as they begin to appear, they bind thin ces of Lead upon them, as close as one would swaddle a Child. And

And indeed their Breafts are as flat and even as a sheet of Paper, except the holes and hollowness, which their leanness causes, and those are pretty many. Their hands have no defect, they are little, white, and well shap'd. Their large Sleeves, which they fasten at the bottom of their wrifts, still contribute to make them appear less. These Sleeves are made of Taffety of all colours, like those of the Egyptians, with Ruffles of broad Lace. Their Stays are commonly of Gold and Silver Stuffs. mix'd with lively colours; the Sleeves of them are very firait. and their Silk Sleeves appear instead of their Shifts. Nevertheless, People of Quality wear very fine Linnen; but all others wear little or none. It is scarce and dear, besides, the Spaniards have that foolish Vanity to desire it very fine; infomuch that they had rather have but one fuch Shift than half a dozen a little coarse; and either Jye in Bed till 'tis wash'd, or else dress themselves without any, which they frequently enough do. They use this fine Linnen after an ill manner when they washit; for the Women lay it upon rough Stones, and so beat it hard with a flick, by which means, there shall be a hundred holes in't immediately. There's no difference between the best and the worst Landress; all these Creatures are very aukward.

But return to the Womens Cloaths, which I have often left, that I might give an Account of feveral things which occur'd to me. I must tell you, that they wear about their Necks Bone-lace, embroider'd over either with red or green Silk, or Gold or Silver. They wear Girdles all of Medals and Reliques. There are divers Churches which have not so many; they wear also the Cord of some Order, either of St. Francis, the Carmilites, or some other. It is a small Cord, made either of black, white, or brown Wool, and is worn on the out-side of their Stays, and hangs down before to the edge of their Petticoats. They are full of knots, and commonly upon every knot there's a Diamond-stone sastned. They make Yows to some Saint or other to wear their Cords; but if the reason of these Yows was enquired into, it would not be found very good.

They have great store of Jewels, the finest that can be seen. Neither is it enough to have one Sett of Jewels, as our Ladies in France have, but these must have Eight or Ten; some of Diamonds, others of Rubies, Emeralds, Pearls, Turkey-stones; and in short, of all sorts. But the work-men set them very ill, for the greatest part of the Diamond is hid, very little of it is seen. I asked the reason of it, and they told me, that to them, the Gold look'd as well as the Stones. But I am of Opinion, that their Lapidaries do not understand how to set them better. I must except Verbec, who can do them well if

The Ladies wear at the top of their Stays a broad knot of Diamonds, from whence there hangs a Chain of Pearl, or ten or twelve knots of Diamonds, which they fasten at the other end, to their fides. They never wear any Necklace, but they wear Bracelets, Rings, and Pendants; which last are longer than ones Hand, and so heavy, that I have wonder'd how they could carry them without tearing out the hole of their Ears. To which they add whatever they think pretty. I have feen fome have good large Watches hanging there, other Padlocks of Precious Stones, and even your fine wrought English Keys, and little Bells. They also carry upon their Sleeves, their Shoulders, and all about their Bodies, Agnus Dei's, and little Images. They have their Heads stuck full of Bodkins, some made of Diamonds in the shape of a Flye, and others like Butterflies, whose colours are distinguished by various Stones. They dress their Heads after several Fashions, but still they must be naked; they part their Hair on the fides of their Heads, and lay it crofs on their foreheads; it shines so, that without lying, one may see themselves in it. Formerly they wore a Tress or Lock of Hair, the worst made that one should see, and this fell all spread upon their Shoulders, lest their own Hair should mix with it, which indeed is very fine. They have usually five broided Rolls, to which they fasten Knots of Ribbons, or else Pearls, and these they tye altogether to their Girdles, and in Summer when they are at home, they wrap them up in a piece of colour'd Taffety, trim'd with Thred Bonelace. They never wear any fort of Coif, either Night or Day. I have feen some which had their Heads drest up with Feathers like little Children: These Feathers are very curious, and spotted with different colours, which made them much more beautiful. I cannot imagine, why they do not make fuch in France.

The Young Women, or new marry'd, have very Rich Cloaths, and their upper Garments are coloured and embroidered with Gold. I was to fee the Princess of Monteleon: She's a little Body not above Thirteen Years old, and she is lately marry'd to her Cousin-German, named Don Nicholas Pignatelle; her Mother is the Daughter of the Dutchess of Terra Nova, nominated to be Camarera major, or first Maid of Honour to the new Queen. These, that is to say, the Dutchess of Terra Nova, D'Hijar and Monteleon, with the Young Princess of the same Name, and her little Sisters, dwell all altogether. The Dutchess of Terra Nova may be about Threescore Years old: m Rinfwoman is one of her intimate Friends, and the received a with such Civility and Kindness as is not usual with her : For it may be, there is not in the World a more haughty Spirit, which her very looks declare. Her voice is harfh, the ipeals little, and would be thought of a kind and good Nature; but if what is faid, be true, fire is not really to : One shall hardly meet with a greater share of Wit, and a more piercing Judg. ment, than the has; the discoursed to us much of the Place the was going to take upon her in the Queen's House. Says she, I'll neglect nothing to make my felf acceptable to her, I'll endeavour to discover every thing that may pleafe her; I am lenfible that a Young Princefs, born in France, must be allowed a greater Liberty than an Infanta of Spain, born at Madrid. So that by me, the shall not be able to find any difference betwixt this and her own Country. She presented me with a pair of Beads of Paulo d' Aguila, which is a curious fort of Wood that comes from the Indies. Really they are so long, that when I hold them in my hands they reacht to the ground. They are trim'd with two bunches of small green Taffety Ribbon, each bunch has about three hundred Ells in it. She gave me also fome Pucatos of Portugal, which are Pots and Diffee made of that Medicinal Earth, and are adorn'd with Filigrane Work: And the prefented me likewife with feveral other pretty Toys.

One can hardly fee any thing that looks more splendid than this House of theirs; they use the upper Apartments, which are hung with Tapiffry all done with rais'd Work of Gold. In one great Chamber, which is longer than 'tis broad, you may fee leveral Glass doors which go into Closets or little Gells. The first of which is the Darchels of Terra Nova's, hang with grey, and a Bed of the fame, and all other things very plain. On one fide Lodges her Daughter, the Dutchefs of Montelenn, who is a Widow, and has her Room fpruish'd like her Mother's. Afterwards you come to the Princels of Monteleon's Chamber, which is not larger than the others, but her Bed is of Gold and green Damask, lin'd with Silver-Broeade, and trim'd with Point De Spain. The Sheets were lac'd about with an English Lace of half an Ell deep. Over against it were the Chambers of Monteleman Hijer's Children, which were Furnish'd with white Damask. Next to these is the little Chamber of the Dutchels Ajar, Furnish'd with Crimion-colour'd Velver upon a Gold Ground. Their Rooms were no otherwife divided than by Partitions of a certain Sweet Wood; and they told me, that fix of their Women lay in their Chambers, upon Beds brought thithen at Night.

The Ladies were in a great Gallery, spread with a very rich Foot-cloth; there were let round it Crimfon-colour'd Velvet Cushions embroidred with Gold, and they are longer than they are broad: There were also several great Cabinets in-laid, and adorn'd with Precious Stones, but they are not made in Spain; and between them were Tables of Silver, and admirable Looks ing-Glailes, both for their largeness and rich Frames, the worft of which were of Silver. But that which I thought finest, were their Escaparates, which is a certain fort of a close Cabinet with one great Glass, and fill'd with all the Rarities which one can imagine, whether it be in Amber-greafe, Porceline, Cryftal, Bezoar-flone, Branches of Coral, Mother of Pearl, Fillagran in Gold, and a thousand other things of Value. There I faw a Fish, and upon its Head there was a little Tree; it was neither of Wood nor of Moss; it grew on the top of the Fift's scull, which is very small. This feem'd to me a great Curiofity.

We were above threescore Women in this Gallery, an fo much as one Man among us. They all fat down upon the Floor cross-legg'd. This is an Old Custom, which the deriv'd from the Moors. There was only one great Elbow-Chair of Spanish Leather stitch'd with Silk, and very ugly. I ask'd for whom it was defign'd? They told me it was for the Prince of Monteleon, who came not in till after all the Ladies were retird. I could not long fit after this fashion, and therefore I got fome Culhions under me, five or fix of which were fastned together by a Silver brace full of Olive-stones, that it might not break through. When any Lady comes to Vifit, the He or She-Dwarf comes to give Notice, by kneeling down upon one Knee, upon which all the Company rifes, and the Young Princess walks before as far as the Door to receive her which comes to see her after her Marriage. In Saluting each other, they do not kifs, perhaps, that is, because they will not rub off the colour from one anothers Faces; but they shake Hands with their Gloves off, and in Discourse, they say Thou and Thee; and without calling one another either, Madam, or Lady, or Highness, or Excellency, they only fay, Donna Maria, Donna Clara, or Denna Therefa. I was willing to know the reason of this Familiar way, and I learnt it was to avoid all occasion of Offence amongst them; and that as there were different ways of speaking to diffinguish the great difference of Quality and Degree, and that it was not case to observe all the Rules about them, without sometimes giving distaste; therefore to prevent which they have chosen to speak to each other without any Ceremo-By at all. I must also add, that the Women here do not intermix, and so these are always Persons of Quality together. The Wives of the Long Robe never so much as go to visit the Court-Ladies, and a Man of Birth never Marries with a Woman of Quality: Here one never sees those which are not Gentlemen mix with the Nobility, as in France; so that there can be little danger, as long as they Associate together. If there comes in a hundred Ladies one after another, every one rises up as often, and they go, as in Procession, as far as the Anti-Chamber to receive them. I was so tyr'd that day, that I was in a very ill Humour.

They were all very well dress'd; and as I have already told you, they have very rich Cloaths, and their Jewels are extream fine. There were two Tables for the Game of Ombro, at which they play'd very high, and without any Noise. I could not understand their Cards; they are as thin as Paper, and painted after a Quite different way from ours. One of those Cards look as if one held a Letter; when they have a good Game in Hand, it were easie for a Cheating Gamester to discover several of their Carde, if not the whole Game.

While they play'd, they discours'd of News, of the Court and the City: Their Conversation is free and pleasant, and it must needs be confess'd, that they have a certain quickness of Wit, which we cannot come up to. They are very kind and friendly, they love to praise, and do it after a gentile way, very ingeniously, and with great Judgment. I am amaz'd to find such strength of Memory joyn'd with so great a degree of Wit and Understanding. They are compassionate, even almost to a fault. They Read little and Write not much; but yet by that little which they do Read, they improve much, and that little they Write is both exact and concise.

Their Features are very regular and delicate; but their exeffive leanness offends one that is not us'd to it. They are of a brown Complexion, and their faces very smooth: The Small-Pox must needs not do them so much hurt here, as in other Countries, for I have seldom seen any mark'd with them.

Their Hair is as black as Jett, and very shining, notwithstanding there is cause to think that they comb long with one and the same Comb, for t'other day I saw at the Marchioness of Alconnizas (who is Sister to the Constable of Castille, and whose first Husband was the Count and Duke of Olivares) her Toylet spread; and although she is one of the neatest and richest Ladies, and the Toylet was said upon a little Silver Table, yet it was only furnished with a little bit of Cassico, a Looking-Glass to bigger than ones Hand, two Combs, and a little Box, and in a small China Cup some White of an Egg beat together with Sugar-candy. I ask'd one of her women what fhe did with this: The told me, this was to take the dirt off her Face, and to make it shine. I have seen some-whose Faces were so bright. that you would wonder. One would think that they were Varnish'd over; and the Skin is so pull'd and rub'd, that I am confident it does a great deal of hurt. Most of the Women make themselves Eye-brows, and they have only as 'twere a little thred of Hair, which in my mind looks very ugly; but that which is yet worse, is they comb the middle of their Foreheads so much till they make their Eye-brows meet; and this with them is extream Beautiful.

But yet there are a great many whose Fancies do not lye this way, I have feen some Spanish Women more exact to the Rules of Beauty than our French Women, norwithstanding their way of dreffing cross-wife, and the little advantage which they give to their faces. One may fay, that they are like things made out of Rule, for they have neither Hair, nor Cornet, nor any Ribbon, to fet them off; and yet, what Country can shew fuch Eyes as theirs? They are so very sprightly, and declare fo much Wit, and by them, talk to one in a Language fo kind and intelligible, that if they had no other Charms, these alone would make them pass for handsome Women, and unavoidably fleal away ones Affections. Their Teeth are very even, and would be white enough, if they took a little care of them, but they neglect them; and besides, their frequent use of Sugar and Chocolate does them much hurt. They have all a bad Cufrom here, the Women as well as the Men, which is to pick their Teeth, let them be in what Company they will : This they reckon as a Diversion, and do it with grave looks. do not fo much as know what belongs to having them clean'd by an Artist, there is no such Trade there, and when they need them to be drawn out, they get the Surgeons to do it, if they

At my first coming in to Visit the Princess of Monteleon, I was furpriz'd to fee fo many Young Ladies with great Spectaeles on their Noses, and fastned to their Ears; but that which yet feem'd ftrangest to me, was, that they made no use of them where it was necessary: They only discours'd while they had them on; I was disturb'd at it, and ask'd the Marchioness De la Rosa (with whom I have contracted a dear Friendship) the reafon of it: She's a pretty fort of Woman, and understands how to live. She has a neat Wit, and is a Neapolitan. She fell a Laughing

Laughing at my Question, and told me, that it was done to make them look grave, that they did not wear them for any need, but to draw Respect. Do you see that Lady, says she to me? meaning one that was near us. I do not believe, that fince the was Ten Years Old, the ever left them off, but when the went to Bed. Without lying, they both eat with them, and in the Streets and Affemblies you can never fail of meeting a bundance of Men and Women with their Spectacles. Upon this Occasion, I must needs tell you, continu'd she, that some time ago, the Jacobite Fryars had a Suite in Law of high Importance; the fuccess of which they were too much concerned for, to negled any means. One of the Young Fathers of the Convent had some Kindred of the greatest Quality, which upon his Account did follicit very hard on their behalf. The Prior affur'd him, that if through his Credit and Interest they should get the better of the Suite, he could ask nothing that should not he granted him for an Acknowledgement : At last, they gain'd their Point, and the Young Father, transported with Joy, immediately ran to tell the News, and at the fame time prepard himself to ask a Favour which a long time he had had a mighty defire to obtain. But the Prior, after having embraced him, with grave looks and tone, faid to him, Hermano, ponga las Ojalas, that is to fay, Brother, put on Speciacles. The Honour of this Permiffion filled the Young Monk with a ftrange Joy; he thought himself and his care too highly recompensed, and had nothing elfe to ask. The Marquels of Aftergas, Vice-Roy of Naples, added the, had his Statue to the middle cut in Marble, upon which he was very careful to cause his best Spectacles to be put. It is so common a thing to wear them, that I have heard, there are different Spectacles, according to the different Qualities and Degrees of Men and Women. Proportionably as a Man's Fortune rifes, he increases in the largepels of his Spectacle-Glaffes and wears them higher upon his Nofe. The Grandees of Spain wear them as broad as ones Hand, which for distinction, they call Ocales. They fasten them behind their Ears, and leave them off as feldom as they do their Collars. Heretofore they had the Glaffes of them from Venice, but ever fince the Enterprize of the Marquess of Cueva, which was called the Triumvitat, because they were three Persons who undertook to Fire the Arlenal of Venice with Burning-Glaffes, and by this means to make the King of Spain Master of that City: The Venetians, to be reveng'd, caus'd a vast number of those Ocales to be made, and fent to their Embassador at Ma-He presented of them to the whole Court, and all that he ned them were almost blinded with them; for they were made of burning Glass, and very artificially done, and let in certain Frames made of combuffible Matter, which with the least Rays of the Sun would put all in a Flame. It happen'd upon a Conneil day, that in the Room where they fat, one of the Windows was left open, and the Sun shining perpendicularly mon their Spectacles, all on a fudden they perceiv'd a dangerous fort of fire contriv'd against their Eye-brows and Hair; one can hardly imagine what a fright these venerable old men were in. I could with, faid I to the Marchioness, that this flony were credible, for 'tis very pleafant. As I did not fee it reply'd the in fmiling, to I cannot positively affure you that 'tis true: But the business of the Jacobite Fryars which I have related to you, I had from the best Authority. I have fince, obferv'd leveral Persons of Quality in their Coaches, sometimes alone, and fometimes in Company, with these great Spectacles hung upon their Nofes, which in my Mind, is a strange fight.

This Princess gave us a Collation, her Women, to the number of eighteen, brought every one of them a great Silver Bafon full of dry Sweet-meats, wrapt up in Paper, for that purpole cut and guilt. In one, there was a Plum, in another a Cherry or an Apricock, and fo in all the rest accordingly. This to me seem'd very neat, for by this way, one might either eat or carry away, without foyling the Fingers or Pockets. There were some ancient Ladies, who after they had eat of these Sweet-meats till they were ready to burst, fill'd five or fix Hankerchiefs full, and they bring them on purpole; and although they are well observ'd, yet no notice seems to be taken, but they are fuffer'd to take as much and as oft as they will; they tye these Handkerchiess with strings quite round their little Vertingales: This is like the hook which is us'd in a Pantry, upon which is hung all forts of Flesh and Fowl. Afterwards they prefent you with Chocolate, every one a China Cup full upon a little Dish of Agat set in Gold, with Sugar in a Box of the same. There was some Chocolate order'd with Ice. and some hot, and some made with Milk and Eggs: One drinks it with some Bisket, or else with some thin bread as hard as if it were toasted, which they make so on purpose. There are some Women which will drink fix Cups one after another, and this they do, very often twice or thrice aday. One should not wonder that they are fo dry, fince nothing is hotter than this Liquor; and befides, they eat every thing to very high feafon'd with Pepper and Spice, that one would think it impossible they are not burnt up: There were several also, which eat great pieces of the Medicinal Earth. I have already told year that they have even a great passion for this Earth, which frequently causes in them great Obstructions; their Stomachs and their Bellies will be swelled with it, and become as hard as a Stone, and they themselves as yellow as Sassron. I had a mind to taste this Ragoue which is so much esteem'd beyond its worth, but I declare I had rather eat a piece of a Stone.

If one had a mind to oblige them, one must treat them with fuch kind of things which they call Barros; and very often their Confessors enjoyns them to no other Pennance, than to forbear one whole day from eating thereof. It is faid to have a great many Properties; and is good against Poylon, and cures abundance of Diseases. I have a great Cup made of it, which holds a pint; it spoils Wine that's put into it, but it makes Water excellent, which feems as if it boyl'd in it, at least one may observe it to work and fret, if it is proper to say so; and if one leaves it a little while, the Cup shall be quite empty, the nature of the Earth makes it so full of Pores; it has a frong fent. We drank Water there, which was very well order'd; one may truly fay, that in no place they drink it cooler: They make use only of Snow, and are of Opinion that it cools much better than Ice; It is the cuftom here to drink very cold Water before they take their Chocolate, which otherwise they think would be unwholfome.

After the Collation was ended, Flamboys were brought in; there came in first a little simple Fellow, white with Age, who was Governour of the Pages: He had a great Gold Chain and a Medal about his Neck; this was the present he had at the Prince of Monteleon's Marriage: He kneel'd down upon one Knee in the middle of the Gallery, and aloud, faid, Let the most Holy Sacrament be prais'd; to which every body answer'd, For ever: This is their Custom, when Light is brought in. Next came in four and twenty Pages following two by two; and in the fame minner kneel'd upon one Knee; every one of them brought two great Flamboys, or one Branch, and when they h d plac'd them upon the Tables, went out with the fame Ceremony. And then all the Ladies made to each other a low bow, accompany'd with a wish, as when they Inceze. It is fit I should tell you, that these Branches are full of Lamps fastned to a Silver Pillar, whose Foot is very broad; there are most times eight and twelve Pipes to every Lamp, in which the Week burns, fo that this gives a very great Light. And to encrease it yet more, they fasten a silver Plate to it, in such manner, that the Light reflects upon it. One is not troubled with with the Smoak, and the Oyl they burn is altogether as good as that of Provence, which is eat with Sallads. I lik'd this fashion very well. When all the Lights were put in their proper plaes in the Gallery, the young Princels of Monteleon bid her Wonen bring her Wedding-cloaths, that I might see them; they brought thirty filver Baskets full, which were as deep and as wide, as Table Baskets; they were so heavy, that there were four Women to carry one Basket. In them there was, what ever is possible to be seen that is fine and rich, according to the fashion of the Country; amongst other things, there were fix of a certain fort of close Coat of Gold and Silver Brocard. made like Vefts to wear in a Morning, with buttons, some of Diamonds, and others of Emeralds, and of these every one had fix dozen. The Linnen and the Lace were not inferiour to the reft. She shewed me her Jewels also, which were admirable, but so ill set, that the biggest there made no better a shew than lewel fet in Paris, which one might buy for thirty Lew's.

I will not write to you often, because I will always have a flock of News to tell you, which in this place, is pretty long in picking up. Pardon this tedious Letter, and the little method which I have observed in it; I sent things down just as they come into my Mind, and that's ill enough; but in your Love, dear Cofin, I am fafe from all my faults.

LETTER IX.

Fear you'll take it ill that I have omitted writing to you one Post; but dear Cousin, I was willing to be inform'd of divers things, which I am now going to relate.

And first, I will speak of the Churches of Madrid, which I said extream beautiful and neat: The Women of Quality seldom go to them, because they all have their Chappels in their

* Go to receive year, they never fail to be at them, of which their Indulgences. number are all the days in the Passion-week; and there also they make their * Stations,

Our Ladies Church of Atocha, that is to fay, our Lady of the Bush, is indeed a very fine one. It stands within a vast comvent, which is fill'd with Religious Women, who feldom or never go out of it, that being one of their Rules they are to obferve. They lead an auftere Life; and from all parts. People come to pay their Devotion here; and when the Kings of Span have gain'd any Victories or happy Success, thither they go to fing Te Deum. There you'll fee a Virgin holding a young To fus, which they report to be miraculous. She's of a black Complexion, and very often they drefs her up like a Widow: but upon great Festivals she is richly clothed, and so adom'd with Jewels, that nothing can be feen more magnificent. She hath in a particular manner the Sun drawn round her Head. whose Beams shine admirably. She always has a vast pair of Beads either in her Hand, or hung at her Girdle. This Chappel is on one fide of the body of the Church, and in fuch a place, as it would be very dark, were it not that there's continually burning above an hundred great Lamps of Gold and Silver. The King has his Gallery there, whose fore part is made up with a Lattice Window. In all their Churches they make use of Hassocks to kneel on; and when a Person of Quality, or a strange Lady comes in, the Sexton spreads a large Carpet before 'em, upon which he either fets an Oratory with Cushions, or else he leads 'em to certain little Closets, all painted and gilt, with Glass-windows round, where one is very conveniently placed. There never fails a Sunday that the Altaris not illuminated with above an hundred thick Wax Candles. It is likewife adorn'd with a prodigious quantity of Plate, and to are all the Churches in Madrid. Here are abundance of fine Walks made of your green Turf, and fet full of Flowers, in which they place a great many Fountains, from whence the Water falls into Balins, either of Silver, or Marble, or Porphiry ftone. Round about them they plant great numbers of Orange-Trees, as high as a Man, and these are set in very fine Boxes; and among these they turn loose several Birds, which make a pretty fort of Musick. And this as I have described to you, lasts almost all the very, peither are their Churches ever without Orange or Jaffemin Trees, which perfume them much better than their Incenfe.

In the Chappel which they call our Lords of Almunada, you fee a Virgin, which they tell ye St. James brought from Jerufalem, and hid in a Tower which is in the middle of madrid. The Moors having belieg'd the City the Inhabitants were reduced to so great a want of Provisions, that they were deliberated to so great a want of Provisions, that they were deliberated ting to Surrender, when on a sudden they found this Tower full of Corn; they concluded such a plentiful and seasonable supply could be no less than the effect of a Miracle; this fill'd them with Joy and new Courage, and made them so vigoroully defend the City, that the Moors toyl'd with a long Siege, were force to retire. Afterwards they found the Image of the Virgin, and in gratitude, they built a Chapel for her, upon the Walls of which, this whole History is painted in Fresco. The Altar, Rayles, and all the Lamps are of solid Silver.

The Minime Fryars have a Church near this, in which is the Chappel of our Lord of Soledad, where the Salutation is every night faid; this is a place of great Devotion; I mean for those that are truly devout, for there are a great many Persons which make it their Rendezvouz for other ends.

But St. Isidore's Chappel surpasses all in beauty. He is the Patron of Madrid, and he was but a poor Labourer. The Walls of the Chappel are all cased with Marble of divers Colours, and its Pillars are of the same, and so are some Statues of certain saints: this Tomb is in the middle, and sour Pillars of Porphing supports over it a Crown cut in Marble, in which are represented Flowers, whose Colours are so very natural, that one may say, Art has outdone Nature. The Cupulo, without is adorn'd with the Images of the Twelve Aposiles, which stand round it.

I law at St. Sebastines, (which at present is my Parish) a Canopy which the Queen-Mother caus'd to be made, for the carrying the holy Sacrament to the Sick in had Weather: It is made of Crimfon Velvet embroider'd with Gold, it is cover'd with Chagin, and nail'd with Gold Nails; it has several great Glaffes about it, and in the middle of its roof, there is rais d a lort of Steeple, which is full of little Bells of Gold, Four Priefts carry it when any Person of Quality is sick, and desires to retrive the Sacrament, and all the People at Court attend it. There are about a thousand Flamboys of white Wax to give light, and several musical Instruments play before it. They make some stay at all the great Places in their way, to give leave to the People to kneel and receive the Benediction, and to let the Musicians play upon their Harps and Guittars, and ing to them. It is generally in the Night-time that they carly it with fo much Ceremony and Respect.

When they are to celebrate a Festival in some Church, the Evening before they set up a long Pole fastned in the Ground, on the top of which is a kind of a deep Chassing-dish, which they sill with wooden Chips mixt with Brimstone and Oyl:

This burns a long while, and gives a very great Light; they place these Poles in the form of Allies, which make a delightful fort of an Illumination.

The Women which go abroad to Mals, hear a dozen of them. but flew fo much Diffraction and wandring of Thoughts, that one may eafily perceive their Minds are employ'd on some other thing than their Prayers. They wear Muffs that are above helf an Ell long; they are made of the finest Martins and Sables which can be feen, and are worth 4 or 5 hundred Crowns apiece. They must stretch back their Arms as far as possible they can, to be able only to put their fingers ends into the entrance of their Muffs. I fancy, I have already told you that the Women are extream little, and these Muss are very little less than themselves. They always wear a Fan too, and be it in Summer or Winter, they never cease fanning themselves all the time of Mass. . In the Church they all sit upon their Legs, and are continually taking of Snuff, and yet never fmut themselves with it, as 'tis usual; for in this, as in all other things, they have very neat and dexterous ways of managment. Every time the Elevation is made, both the Women and Men give themselves a score of blows with their fists upon their Breasts, which makes fuch a noise, that the first time I heard it, I was very much afrighted, and thought they wear beating one another.

As to the Cavalleros, (I mean those which by Profession are Gallants, and wear a piece of Crape round their Hats) as soon as Mass is ended, they march up to the place where the Holy Water is kept, and ranging themselves round it, they present of it to all the Ladies, who also come thither, and at the same time say something to them that's kind; to which the Women make a pertinent answer in sew words; for it must needs be granted, that they speak precisely what they should, and that extempore, without any trouble of studying for words. But the Pope's Nuncio, has upon pain of Excommunication, forbid the Men to present the Women any Holy Water. And 'tis said, that this Prohibition was obtained at the Intreaty of some jealous Husbands. However it be, it is observed, and they say, the Prohibition even forbids the Men to give each other any Holy Water.

Let the Spanish Women be of what quality they will, they meither have Cushions, in the Church, nor any kind of Train held up. For our parts, as soon as we appear there in our French Cloaths, every body gets round about us; but the most troublesome of all, are the big belly'd Women, which are more inquisitive than the others, and for whom they have here, the greatest treatest respect and complaisance; for its pretended, that if they long for any thing, and miss of it, they receive so much but that they immediately miscarry; so that they have a liberty to pull off ones Gloves, and to tugg, hale, and examine every body as they lift.

he cft At first, I could not take such kind of Jesting, and talkt to them so roughly, that some of them went away weeping, and durst not return: But there were others which were not so eally put out of Countenance; they would see my Shooes, my sarters, and what I had in my Pocket; my Kinswomen seeing I would not permit them, told me that if the People once took notice of me they would certainly stone us, and bid me let them have their humour. My Women and Chamber-maids were set worse tormented than I; and I am assam'd to tell you how far the curiosity of these big-belly'd Woman proceeded.

I was told that there was a young man at Court, who was desperately in love with a very fine Woman, whose Husband ontinually kept her under his Eyes, so that finding no other way of peak to her, he disguised himself like a Woman big with shild, and so went to her House; he address'd himself to the valous Husband, and told him, he had the Lantajo (which is the word for Longing) to discourse with his Wife in private. The Husband deceiv'd by this appearance, made no question that this was a young big belly'd Woman, and immediately onsented that his Wife should make this Person happy with a long and pleasant audience.

When any of these Women long to see the King, they give im notice of it, and he has the Goodness to come into a great klon, which looks into the Palace Court, and there he tarries slong as they defire.

Not long fince a Spanish Woman just come from Naples, sent beg the King that she might see him, and when she had wokt upon him as long as she had a mind in a transport of Zeal, with hands listed up, she said to him, I beseech God, Sir, that shis Mercy, he would one day make you Vice Roy of Naples. 'Tis id, that this Passage was acted before the King, to inform us that the Magnificence of the then Vice Roy, who was not bewed far exceeded his. Very frequently there comes into my lelation's House, Women which are perfect Strangers, to show nevertheless she is very kind and civil, because they are ig with Child, and such we must not vex.

Thanks to Heaven, Lent is over, and though I only observed the Passion-Week, yet that was more tedious to me, than a shole lent kept at Paris, for there's no Butter here; that little which one meets with is brought about Thirty Leagues off, was up like Saufages in Hoggs Bladders. It is full of Worms, and very dear. But the Oyl makes amends, for its very excellent only you know, every body loves it not, and I amone of those which cannot eat it, without being very fick.

That which makes it yet worse here, is, that Fish is ver scarce; it is impossible to have any sweet which is eaught in the Sea, for that is distant from Madrid above Fourscore League Sometimes there is a Salmon brought, of which they make he which being season'd with Spice and Sassron, is eatable. There wery little Fresh water Fish, and yet for all this, they do no suffer much inconvenience, for indeed, there's hardly any bod keeps Lent, neither Master nor Servant, because of the great want of Provisions. They take a License from the Pope's him cio, which costs about a Shilling, which gives them leave to eat Butter and Cheese all Lent, and the Heads, Feet, and inward of Fowl, Gr. every Saturday throughout the Year. And seems to me pretty odd, that on this day they should eat the Feet, Head, and Inwards, and yet dare not eat of any other par of the same Creature.

The Shambles are as open in Lent, as they are in the Came wal. Their way of felling Meat is very troublefome; it is close that up in the Butcher's Shop, one speaks to him through little Window, and defires to buy of him half a Calf, or th like : he neither vouchsafes to answer you, nor to shew you the least bit of Meat; at last, you are content with a Lovn of Vell but he makes you pay your Money down before-hand, and the through his little Window he gives you a Leg of Mutton; yo return it, and tell him, this is not what you ask for; he take it again, and inflead thereof he gives you a short Rib of Beef then you make a noise for your Loyn, but he concerns himse no further than to throw you your Money, and that the Win dow upon you. This vexes one, and you go to another, an he treats you after the fame manner, if not worse; so that it best, to tell them how much Meat you would have, and leav the rest to them. This Flesh is ill for the Stomach, it is lean, dry, and black; but as bad as 'tis, yet there's less requir of it than of ours in France, to make a good Soup. Everythin here nourishes so extreamly, that an Egg does one more go than a Pigeon elsewhere; and this I take to be an Effect of the Climate.

As to their Wine, it does not please me; this is not the Courtry where the Excellent Spanish Wine is drank, that comes fround and also fia and the Canary-Islands, which must pass the Seato to gain that strength and pleasantness which we find in it. At madrid the Wine is strong enough, if not too strong, but it wants that delicious taste. Add to this, that they keep it in Bags made of Buck-skin, and sitted up for that purpose, so that it always smells and tastes either of Pitch, or as if it was burnt. I now begin not to wonder that Men are so temperate with such Liquor. They'll sell as little a quantity of it as one will, even to the value of a French Double: But that which is so retail'd out to the poor People, is yet made worse than it would be, by their letting it stand all day in an open Earthen Bason, out of which they sell to those who have a mind. It grows sour, and smells so strong, that it makes one's Head ake in passing by.

Lent makes no alteration in their Pleasures, indeed they are 6 moderate, or at least those they use make so little noise, that they enjoy them at all times.

No body fails of going to their Station in Passion-week, but particularly from Wednesday to Friday. In these three days, there is acted very different things, by real Penitents, Louise, There are divers Women, which under preand Hypocrites. tence of Devotion, conflantly go to certain Churches, where for a Year before, they are aftur'd to meet him they Love; and though they are attended with several of their Women, which they call Duennas, yet as the Growds are great, and Love makes them ingenious, to they make a thift in spight of all the Argus's, to flip on one fide into a little adjoyning House, which by a private fign they know, and is hired for that purpole and without the help of any body, but at that very moment of times When they have done, they return to the same Church, where they find their Women busie in searching for them; they fall a chiding them for their carelelness in losing them; and thus the Husband, who for a whole Year hath industriously watch'd his dear Wife, loses her at that very season when she is obliged to be the most faithful to him: The great Constraint they live under, put violent defires in them to enjoy some freedom; and their very Amorous Nature makes them Witty to find out means to bring about their Deligns.

'Tis an unpleasant thing to see the Disciplinarians: The first time I met one of them I thought I should have swooned away. The unexpectedness of such a terrible sight seized me; sancy a Man coming so near you, that he'll cover you all over with his Blood; this, it seems, is one of their Pastimes: there are certain Rules by which to Discipline themselves handsomly, and Masters to teach the Art, just as to Dance and to sence. They have a fort of a Gown made of their Baptist Cloth very fine, which comes down to their Shooes; it is laid in fmall plights, and so prodigiously wide, that it contains at least fifty Ells of Cloth. They wear upon their Heads a Cap three times higher than a Sugar-loaf, and of the same shape: It is cover'd with Holland, and from it falls a great piece of Cloth which hides all the Face and the forepart of the Body; there's two little Holes in't to fee through : On the back of their Waltcoars they have two great holes upon their shoulders; they wear white Gloves and Shooes, and abundance of Ribbon which tres their Wastcoat-sleves, but hanging down, and not in knots. They also tye one to their Whip; commonly tis their Mistress which Honours them with this Favour : And to be the more admired, they must not lift up their Arms, only the Wrist and the Hand, and the blows must not follow hastily, nor the Blood which runs out spoil their Cloaths. They give themfelves most terrible cuts and slashes upon their shoulders, from whence runs streams of Blood. They walk so foftly in the Streets as if they counted their steps; they present themselves before their Mistress's Window, and there with wonderful patience lash themselves. The Lady through the Lettice of her Chamber fees this fine fight, and by fome fign encourages her Gallant to Flea himself alive, and lets him know how very kindly she takes this Action of his. When they meet a handsome Woman, they whip them selves after such a rate, as to make the Blood flye upon her: This is esteemed a particular Civility, and the Lady acknowledges and thanks them for it. When once they have begun to give themselves this Discipline, the preservation of their Health obliges them afterwards to use it every Year, otherwise they would be fick. They have also little Needles fluck in Sponges, with which they prick their shoulders and their fides to eagerly as if it did not hurt them. But I'll tell you something yet stranger. Several Courtiers often take this Walk in the Night: But they are commonly the Young Fools, and they give notice to all their Friends of their Delign, who immediately come to them very well Arm'd. The Marquels De Villa Hermola was one of them this Year, and the Duke De Vejar was the other. This Duke went out of his House about Nine a Clock at Night, he had a hundred Flamboys of White Wax carry'd before him, two by two. Threefeore of his Friends went before, and a hundred follow'd after him, and every one had his Page and Footmen; and it was a very long Procession. It is known when Men of this Quality are to walk; so that all the Ladies are in their Windows, and hang out their Carpets in their Balconies; and that they may may the the better fee and be feen, they have Flamboys faffned to the The Knight of Discipline with his Guard, passes along and falutes the Spectators. But that which often causes a great deal of Mischief, is, when the other Disciplinarian, who stands ipon his Honour and Reputation, marches with his great Company in the same Street. This happen'd to these Persons I have now mentioned. Each of them would have the upper hand, and neither would yield it. The Footmen with their Flamboys began to lay one another over the Faces, and burn their Wiskers and Hair; the Friends of each Party drew their Swords against one another. Our two Heroes who were only Arm'd with this Instrument of Penance, search for each other, and being met, begin a most terrible Battel. After they have us'd a little Discipline about one anothers Ears, and cover'd the Ground with the ends of their Whip-cords, they fall to downright Fifty-cuffs like any Porters: Though after all, there's but little matter to laugh at in this piece of Mummery, for they beat one another well-favouredly; they wound, and often kill; and here old Enmities revive and are reveng'd. But at last, the Duke de Vejar yielded to the Marquess De Villa Hermola; they gathered up their broken Whips, and mended them as well as they could : The great Cap, which was thrown into the Canal, was wip'd and put upon the Penitent's Head again; the wounded were carried home, and the Proceffion began again, and they walked more gravely than ever, through a great part of the City.

The Duke had a great mind the next Morning to be reveng'd; but the King commanded both him and the Marquess not to stir out of their Houses. But to come to what they do upon these Occasions: You must know, that after these Servants of God are return'd home, there's a magnificent Supper prepar'd of all forts of Meats; and observe that this is on the last day of Passon Week: But after so good a Work, they think they may do a little Evil. Immediately the Penitent causes his shoulders to be a long time rub'd with Sponges dipt in Vinegar and Salt, lest there should remain any bruised Blood, after that, he sets himself at the Table with his Friends, and receives from them the Elogies and Applauses which he believes he has merited. Every one in his turn, tells him, that in the Memory of Man, none was ever feen to receive the Discipline with so good a They magnifie all his Actions, but above all, the Happinels of that Lady for whose sake all this Bravery was perform'd. The whole Night is spent in such kind of Discourse, and fometimes he that has been fo well flog'd, is so sick, that he cannot go to Mass on Easter-day. Do not think that I we any Art to let out the History of this matter to make you merry, it is all literally true, and I tell you nothing, which you may not be satisfied in, from every body that has been at Madrid.

But there are also true Penitents, which indeed troubles one extreamly to look on them; they are dreft just as those who gives themselves the Discipline, except that they are naked from the shoulders to the middle, and with a kind of a narrow Matt are fwadled and bound fo very hard, that all the Flesh which appears is black and blew; their Arms stretch'd out, are wrapt about with the same Matt. They carry to the number of seven Swords flicking in their Backs and Arms, which hurt them grievously when they stir too much, or happen to fall, which they often do; for they going bare-foot, and the Stones in the Streets being sharp, and cutting their Feet, they cannot possibly always keep themselves up. There are others, who instead of these Swords carry Croffes so very heavy, that they are even born down with them, neither would I have you think that these are of the ordinary People, some of them are of the highoft Quality. They are forc'd to have feveral of their Servant to accompany them, but they are disguised, and their Facesco vered, left they should be known. These carry Wine, Vine gar, and other things, to give their Mafter from time to time who very frequently drop down dead with the extream pain and toil they endure. Generally these Penances are enjoyn'd by their Confesiors, and they are so very severe, that he which undergoes them seldom out-lives the Year. The Pope's Nunci told me that he had forbid all Confessors to impose them; yet have seen divers, though in likelihood it proceeded from their own Devotion.

From the beginning of Paffion Week to Low-Sunday, one cannot flir out of Door without feeing an infinite number of Pent tents of all forts; and on Good-Friday they all come to the Procession, which is but one general one for all the City, and is composed of all the Parishes and Convents. Upon this day, the Ladies are more finely dress'd than on their Wedding-days they place themselves in their Balconies, which are set out with rich Carpets and Cushions. Sometimes there's above a hundred Women together. The Procession begins about four a Clock and is not ended till past eight; for I cannot express to you the numberless Number of People I have seen, counting from the King Don John, the Cardinals, Embassadors, the Grandees, the Courtezans, to all sorts of Folks, both of the Court and City-Every one holds a Wax Candle in his Hand, and all their Servants.

vants, which are numerous, earry Torches and Flamboys. In the Processon, all their Banners and Crosses are covered with Crape, and there's a vall number of Drums covered with the fame, and they eat, as at the Death of a General. The Trumpets found some melancholy Tune. The King's Guards, which are four Companies of different Nations, to wit, Burgundians, Spaniards, Germans, and L'Ancillians, have their Arms covered with Mourning, and trail them upon the ground. There are certain Machins set upon Theatres, which represent the Myfleries of the Life and Death of our Lord; the Figures are as big as Life, but very ill made and dreft: There are some to heavy, that a hundred Men can but lift them, of which there's avait number, for every Parish has some. I observed that of the Bleffed Virgin flying into Egypt; The was upon an Als which had good Furniture; the Housing was all over embroider'd with fine Pearls, the Figure was very great and heavy.

Here they are afraid lest sometimes the People should fail in their Devotion at Easter, and therefore for that reason, each Parish-Priest goes to every House, and enquires of the Master, sow many Communicants he has? Being informed, he notes the Number in his Book: To every one that has received the Communion, they give a Printed Certificate. After Low-Sunday they visit all the Houses again, and demand to see the Certificates, which they ought to have according to the first Account taken of them; and if they can shew none, there's a strict enquiry made after him or her who has not Communicated. At this time the Poor who are sick, hang out a Carpet at their Door, and the Sacrament is brought to them in a very fine and Devout Proceffion.

Since my being at Madrid, I have seen very sew stately Runcrals, except one for the Duke of Medina Celi's Daughter. Her Cossin was made of rare Indian Wood, put into a blue Velvet Bag and crost with Silver Mohair with Cords of Silver Thred, and the Strings were of the same, and fastned the Bag at each end, like a stuff Cloak-bag. The Cossin was in a Hearse cover'd with white Velvet, set round with Garlands and Coronets curiously made of Flowers. And thus they carried her to Medina Celi, the Capital City of the Dutchy of that Name.

Commonly they dress up the dead in the habit of some Religious Order, and carry them all bare-fac'd into the Church where they are to be bury'd. If it is a Woman, they put her on the habit of the Carmelites. This Order is in great Veneration here; the Princesses of the Blood retire to their Convent. The Queens themselves, when they are Widows, are oblig'd to spend the rest of their Lise there, unless the King othewise appointed before his Death, as Philip IV. did in savour of Queen Mary Ann of Austria his Wise. And in case a Queen is Divorced, she must go into a Religious House; for Divorced or Widow, she has not the Liberty to marry again.

The Kings of Spain presume so much above other Kings, that they will not endure a Princess who has once been their Wife, should ever be so to another, let her have the greatest Passion in the World.

Don John hath a natural Daughter, a profess'd Carmelite at Madrid. She is wonderful handsome, and 'tis said she had no mind to take the Habit; but it was her sate, as 'tis of divers others of her Quality, who like it no more than she.

They call them the Descalcas Reales, which is to say, The Royal bare-feet. This reaches even to the King's Mistresses, whether they be unmarried or Widows, when he can love them no longer, they must turn Nuns.

I have feen some of the Works of St. Therela, writ with her own Hand; the Character is Legible, large, and indifferent fair. Donna Beatrix Carillo, who is her Neece's Neece, keeps them very choicely. It was she that shew'd them to me. They confist of a Collection of Letters; I do not believe they were ever Printed; there's a great deal of Perfection in them; and throughout, one may discover a certain air of chearfulness and sweetness of Nature, which sufficiently declares the Character of that great Saint.

All the time of Lent, and even at other times, one meets with Preachers at every corner of a street, whose Sermons are ill enough contriv'd, and do as little good; but however in preaching as they do, they both fatisfie their zeal and their defire. Their most constant Auditors are the blind Folks, which relemble our fingers upon Pout-Newf. Every one of them being led by a little Dog which does it very well, they go about finging of Romances and Cacara, which are certain old Stories or Modern Events, which the People are very glad to know. They have a little Drum, and a Flute, on which they play. They of ten fing a Song on King Francis the First, it beginning, When the King left France, to his Sorrow he left it, &c. Now I doubt you know it, dear Cosin, for who does not : This Song i fung in very bad French, and by Folks that do not undeffand one word of it; All that they understand is, That the King was taken by the Spaniards; and as this Prince was much for their Glory, fo they are willing to convey the Memory of it down to Posterity. There's a Flower-de-Luce all gilt upon the root roof of the Chamber where this King was Prisoner; and I must not omit telling you, that the Prison is one of the fairest Buildings in Madrid; the Windows are as large as those of other Houses. There are indeed Iron Bars, but they are all gilt, and set at a distance great enough, to make any one think they were not design'd to hinder escapes. I stood amazed at the seeming neatness of a Place which in reality is unpleasant enough, and I thought that in Spain, they had a mind to contradiction french Proverb, which says, That there's neither any handsome Prison, nor ugly Love. Pardon this Proverb, I do not love them so well to trouble you often with them.

All the Houshold-stuff one sees here, is extream rich, but not so neatly made as ours in France, and they come altogether short of our skill. It consists of Tapestry, Cabinet, Paintings, Looking Glasses, and Plate. The Vice Roys of Naples, and the Governours of the Low-Countries, have had most admirable Tapistry; the Vice-Roys of Sicily and Sardinia, shew most excellent Embroideries and Statues; those of the Indies, Precious Stones, and Vessels of Gold and Silver. So that several returning home from time to time, laden with the Riches of another Kingdom, cannot chuse but to have enrich'd this City with abundance of valuable things.

They change their Furniture several times a year; their Winter-beds are of Velvet trim'd with thick Galoons of Gold; but they are so low, and the Valens so deep, that one is as if they were bury'd in them; and when one is in Bed, the border of the Valens lying almost upon the Counterpain, one can hardly be seen. In Summer they have neither Curtains, nor any thing else about the Bed, this looks very ill. Sometimes they

in Winter they have their Appartments very high, sometimes in the fourth Story, according as the cold encreases, to keep them from it. At present they use their Summer Lodgings, which are low and very commodious. All their Houses have a great many Rooms on a floor; you go through a dozen a fifteen Parlours or Chambers one after another. Those which he the worst lodg'd have fix or seven; the Rooms are generally longer than they are broad, the Floors and Scelings are neither painted, nor gilt, they are made of Plaister quite plain, but so white that they dazle ones Eyes, for every year they are stand whited as the Walls, which look like Marble, they are so well polisht. The Court to their Summer Appartments a made of certain matter, which after it has had ten Pails of Water thrown upon it, yet is dry in half an hour after, and leaves a pleasant coolness; so that in the Morning they water all, and a little while after, they spread Matts or Carpets made of very fine Rushes which cover all the Pavement. The whole Appartments are hung with the same small Matt about the depth of an Eil, to hinder the coldness of the Walls from hurting those which lean against them. On the top of these Matts, there are hung Pictures and Looking-Glasses. The Cushions which are of Gold and Silver Brocado, are placed upon the Carpet, and the Tables and Cabinets are very fine, and at little distances there are set Silver Cases or Boxes, fill'd with Orange and Jaffamin-Trees. In their Windows they fet things made of Straw, to keep the Sun out, and in the Evenings they walk in their Gardens. There are feveral Houses which have very fine ones, where you fee Grotta's and Fountains in abundance, for they have great plenty of Water here, and 'tis very good. In the number of these fine Houses they reckon the Duke D'Offona's, that of the Admiral of Cassile's Lady, the Countels of Ognate, and the Cunstable of Castile; but I do wrong in particularizing of them, for there are a confiderable number of them.

For the rest, it seems to me, that the great care they take prevents the heats (let them be never so excessive) from being troublesome to them. But do not fancy, I beseech ye, that only the great Lords have their low Appartments, for indeed every body else has them according to their Ability; though it be on ly a little Cellar, they'll live in't very contentedly.

There are but few ordinary People at Madrid, one seldon sees any but Persons of Quality, if seven or eight Streets which are full of Tradesmen, are excepted. You see no Shops in this City, unless it be those where Sweet meats, Liquors, ice, and Paftry are fold.

I will not neglect telling you, that a thousand People here have their Canopys; for without reckoning the Princess and the Dukes, the Tituled, (of which there is a vast number) have their aiso. These Tituled, are those they cail the Grandees of Spain the real Marquises, and the real Counts. If there be thirt Chambers on a floor in a house, you shall there see as many Compys. My Kinswoman has twenty in her House: The Kinshas made her Marchioness of Castille. You cannot imagine ho gravely I look under a Canopy, particularly when they bring my Chocolate; for three or four Pages clothed in black is Lawyers, serve me upon Knee. This is a Custom I had much ado to bring my felf to, for methinks this Respect ought to be paid to God only. But it is so common here, that if a Cobier's Prentice should present an old Shope to his Master, he must do it with knee upon the Ground. This quality of Thules gives them divers Priviledges, of which I have already told you, and particularly that of having a Canopy. They use no Ballisters bout their Beds.

I have observed to you before, Dear Cosin, that our sour sour not near so well surnished in France, as the Persons of Quality here are, but chiefly as to Vessels of Silver, the difference is so very great, that one which had not seen it could hardly believe it: They use no Vessel of Tin or Pewter, but either Silver or Earthen-ware only, is what they make use of; and you must know their Plates here, weigh little less than our Dishes in France, every thing is made to strangely heavy.

The Duke of Alburgerque dyed some time ago. I have ken told, that they were fix Weeks in weighing his Veffels of Gold and Silver, and writing them down; during this time they employed two whole hours every day; this was very chargeable. Amongst other things, there were fourteen hundred dozen of Plates, five hundred great Dishes, and feren hundred little ones, and of every thing elfe proportionably; there were also forty Silver Ladders to set things on the Cup-bord, which was made to ascend by little Steps, like your Altars in a great Hall. When they told me of fuch great Wealth of a particular Man, I thought they jelled with me, md therefore defir'd the Confirmation of it from Don Antonio le Toleda, Son to the Duke of Alba, who was in the fame House; he affur'd me it was very true, and that his Father, who did not esteem himself rich in Vessels of Silver, had three hundred dozen of Silver Plates, and eight hundred Dilhes. The mighty Meals which they make do not require such great flore, unless it be at their Marriages, where every thing is magnificent. But that which causes such great abundance of Vessels, is, that they are brought from the Indies ready made, and pay no Custom to the King. The truth is, they are little better shap'd than their pieces of four Pistols, which they flamp in the Galeon as they come from that Country.

It would grieve a body to see the ill management of some great Lords; there are divers which will never go to their E-states, (for so they call their Lands, their Towns and Castles) but pass all their Lives at Madrid, and trust all to a Steward, who makes them believe what he judges most for his own Interest. They will not so much as vouchsafe to enquire whether he speaks true or false; this would be too exact, and by consequence below them. This methinks is one considerable fault, the strange profusion of Vessels only for an Egg and a Pigeon, is another.

But it is not only in these things which they fail, but 'tis alfo in the daily Expences of their Houses; they know not what it is to lay up flores, or make Provision of any thing, but every day they fetch in what they want, and all upon trust, at the Bakers, Cooks, Butchers, and all other Trades; they are even ignorant what they fet down in their Books, and they put down what price they will for every thing they fell, this matter is neither examin'd into, nor contradicted. often fifty Horses in a Stable, without either Corn or Straw, and they perish with Hunger; and when the Master is in Bed, and should be taken 'ill in the Night, he would be at a great loss; for they let nothing remain in his House, neither Wine nor Water, Charcoal nor Wax-candle, and in a word, nothing at all; for though they do not take in Provisions to near that there is nothing left, yet his Servants have a Custom of carrying the overplus away to their own Lodgings, and the next day they furnish themselves with the fame things again.

They observe no better Rules with the Tradesmen; a Man or Woman of Quality had rather dye, than to haggle for, or ask the price of a Stuff, or Lace, or any other thing, or to take the remainder of a piece of Gold; they rather choose to give it the Tradesman for his pains of having sold them that for ten Pistols, which was not worth five. If there is a reasonable price made, he that sells to them is so honest not to take advantage of their easiness to give whatever is askt them; and as they have Credit given them for ten years together without ever thinking of paying, so at last they find themselves under great difficulties with their Debts.

It is very rare they engage in tedious Suits at Law, or let things come to extremity; they bring themselves to account, call their Creditors, and make over to them a certain part of their Lands, which for a limited time they enjoy. Sometimes they give up every thing, and reserve only a Pension for Life, which cannot be medl'd with by any Creditors who may afterwards sell or lend any thing to them; and to the end they be not defrauded of it, they publish the agreement between the Lord and his Creditors.

All Law-paper is mark'd, and costs more than the other. There's a certain time when they make a distribution of Law-Suits; they give the instructions at Madrid, but there are few judg'd there; all the Papers of one fide are put into a Bag, and those of the other, into another Bag, and the Instructions into a third; and when the time to distribute the Law-Suits is come, they fend them to some distant Parliaments, so that very often one's Cause is try'd and judged without knowing any thing of it; It is writ in a Register whether the Cause was sent, which is kept very secret. When Judgment is given, it is fent back to Madrid, and is fignifi'd to the Parties. This Method faves a great deal of Trouble and Sollicitations, which in my Opinion ought always to be forbidden. As to business here, it is excessive tedious, whether it be at Court or in the City, and ruines one in a little time. Spanish Practitioners are great Knaves in their Trade.

There are several different Councils, all compos'd of Persons of Quality, and the greatest part are Councellors of the Swerd. The first is the Council of State, the others are call'd the supream Council of War, the Royal Council of Castille, the Alcaides of Court, the Council of the Holy Inquisition, the Council of Orders, the Sacred, Supream and Royal Council of Arragon, the Royal Council of the Indies, the Council of the Chamber of Castille, the Council of Italy, the Council of the Finances, the Council of the Croisado, the Council of Flander, the Court for the Duty of Horse, the Court for his Majesty's Woods, and the Courts of the Millions.

They understand so little how to manage things to the best advantage, that when a Father dyes and leaves ready Money, and some Children under Age, that they lock the Money up in a Chest, and never put it out to be improved. For Example, The Duke de Frias, whose Widow is marry'd to the Constable of Castille, lest three Daughters, and six hundred thousand Crowns in ready Money, they put it into three Chests, with the Name of each Daughter. The Eldest was not seven years old; she is now marry'd in Flanders to the Prince de Ligne. The Guardians constantly kept the Keys of these Chests, and never open'd that of the Eldest, but to compt it to her Husband. Observe what a loss there is of Interest: But they tell you it would be much worse, if the Principal happen'd to be lost; that sometimes when one thinks they have put it securely curely out, it proves quite otherwise: That a Bankrupt makes one lose all; so that it is better to gain nothing, than to hazard the Pupil's Effate.

It is time to come to an end, Dear Cousin; I shall be asked to tire you with a longer Letter: I beseech you cause all those I send you, to be deliver'd, and pardon the freedom I take; Adieu, I embrace and constantly love you with all my Heart.

The Last PART.

LETTER. X.

O U did me a particular Kindness in letting me know that all my Letters come to your hands, for I was a little concern'd for the Two last: And fince you still desire it, (dear Cousin) I shall continue to inform you of every thing that passes, and of all that I observe in this Country.

The Royal Palace is built upon a Hill which infentible defeends to the very Banks of the River call'd Manzanarez: It looks several ways upon the Country, which is very pleafant there. One goes to it through the Callemayor, that is to say, the great Street, which indeed is both very long and broad, several considerable Houses add to its Beauty. There's a large open place before the Palace, no body of what Quality soever, is allow'd to come with a Ceach into the Court, but they stop under the great Arch of the Porch, except it be when Bonefires are made there, or when there are Majquerades, and then Coaches go in, a very small number of Halbardeers fland at the Gate, upon my asking, why so great a King had so small a Guard, why, Madam, says a Spaniard to me, Are not we all his Guards? He reigns too absolutely in the Hearts of his Subjects, either to fear any thing, or diffrust them. The Palace stands at the end of the City towards the South, it is built of very white Stone, Two Pavilions compleat the Front, the rest is not regular. Behind it, there are two square Courts, each confishing of four sides, the first is adorn'd with two great Tarrass-walks, which run quite through, they are rais'd upon high Arches, and are beautified with Ballisters and Statues: That which I observed very fingular, was, that the Womens Statues had Red upon their Cheeks and Shoulders; you go through fine Porches which bring you to the Stair-case, which is extream large, the Apartments are furnisht with excellent Pictures, admirable Tapiftry, most rare Statues, stately Houshold Goods, and in a word, with every thing suitable to a Royal-Palace. But there are divers of the Rooms dark, I faw fome which had no Window, and receiv'd Light only when the Door open'd, those which have Windows are but little lighter, because of their smallness, they alledge that the Heat is so excessive, that they are willing to hinder the Sun from coming in, as much as they can. But there's yet another Reason, for Glass is very scarce and dear; and as to other Houses, there are many which have Windows without any Glass; and when they would describe a compleat House, they'll tell you in one word, that 'tis Glaz'd. want of Glass does not appear without, because of the Latices. The Palace is adorned with divers gilt Balconies, which indeed look very fine. All the Councils fit there, and when the King has a mind to be present, he passes through certain Galleries and little Entries unperceiv'd. There's a great many People perswaded, that the Castle of Madrid, which Francis the Fifth caus'd to be built near the Wood of Bologn, was after the Model of the King of Spain's Palace; but 'tis a miftake, and nothing is less alike. The Gardens are not fuitable to the Dignity of the Place, they are neither large enough, nor so well improved as they should be, the Ground as, I have observ'd, reaches to the very Brink of Manzanarez, the whole is inclos'd with Walls; and if these Gardens have any Beauty, they owe it purely to Nature. They work hard to get the Young Queens Apartment ready for her Reception, all her Servants are nam'd, and the King expects her with the great-

The Buen Retira is a Royal House near one of the Gates of the City, the Count Duke caus'd at first, a little house to be built there, and call'd it Galinera, it was for keeping his rare Poultry in, which had been presented to him, and as he often went to fee them, and the Scituation of the Place was on the descent of a little Hill, and there was a pleasant Prospect, so he was invited to undertake a confiderable Building. Four great Apartments and four great Pavillions make a perfect Square. In the middle there's a Flower-Pot, well furnish'd with Flowers and a Fountain, whose Statue (which throws the Water when they have a mind) Sprinkles the Flowers and the Crofs-Walks, which goes from one Apartment to another. This Building has the fault of being too low, the Rooms are large, stately and adorn'd with curious Paintings. Every thing fhines with Gold and lively Colours, with which the Cielings and Floors are beautified. I took notice in the great Gallery, of the Entry of Queen Elizabeth, Mother to the late Queen, she's on Horseback, with a Ruff and Fardingal, she has a Hat trimm'd with Jewels and a Plume of Feathers; the is fat, fair and pleafing, the has fine Eyes, and her Looks are sweet and ingenious. The Room for acting Plays in, is well defign'd, very large, all well fet out, with Carving and Guilding, there may be fifteen in a Box without inconvenience to each other, they have all Latice Windows, and the King's is richly guilt, there's neither Galleries nor Amphitheatre, every body fits upon Benches on the Floor. On the fide of the Terrass is the Statue of Philip the II. upon a Horse of Brass. this Piece is of great Value, those that are curious please themselves in taking a draught of him. The Park is above a good League in compass, there are in it divers separate Lodges, very pretty, and which have good Accomodation of room, there's a Canal which is supplyed with Water from Springs at a vast Gharge, and another square Place in which the Ring has little Gundoloes painted and gilt, thither he goes during the great Heats of the Summer, the Fountains, Trees and Meadows making that Place more cool and pleafant than any other; there's Grottos, Cataracts, Ponds, Shades, and in some parts even something of the wild Fields, which shews the simplicity of the Country, and is extream delightful.

The Casa del Campo is for rural Affairs, it is not great, but its Scituation is fine, being upon the Bank of Mansanarez, the Trees in't are high, and yield a Shade at all times. I speak of the Trees of this Country, because one finds very few of them, there's Water in divers parts of it, particularly one Pond which is surrounded with great Oaks. The Statue of Philip the IV. is in the Garden, this Place is a little neg-Here I faw Lions, Bears, Tigers and other wild Beafts, which live very long in Spain, because the Climate is little different from that from which they come, many People go there to think, and the Ladies usually choose this Place to walk in, because 'tis less frequented than others. But to return to Mansanarez, this River does not run up to the City. at certain times it is neither River, nor fo much as a Brook, tho at other times, it is so big and rapid, that it carries before it all that stands in its way, all the Summer People walk in it. there's fo little water in't at this season, that one can hardly wet ones foot, and yet in Winter, all on a sudden, it overflows the adjacent Country, this is caus'd by the melting of the great Quantities of Snow which covers the Hills, and fo descends into the Mansanarez in violent Torrents of Water. Phillip the II. caus'da Bridge to be built over it, which they call'd the Segovie Bridge, it is a very lofty one, and every way as fine as the Pont-neuf, over the River Seine at Paris, when Strangers fee it, they fall a laughing, they think it ridiculous to have caus'd fuch a Bridge to be built, where there's no Water. Hereupon there was one faid wittily enough, be would advife rem to fell the Bridge, and buy fome Water.

The Florid is a most pleasant House, and its Gardens are infinitely delightful; there are in great numbers Italian Statues by the best Masters: The Water there makes a pretty fort of a murmur, which with the sweet swell of the Flowers, (of which they have a Collection of the rarest and best scent) is very charming. From thence we come to the Prado Nuevo, where there are several spouting Fountains, and Trees there are of an extraordinary height; this is a Walk, which though it be not even Ground, yet is not less agreeable; its descent is so easie, that one hardly perceives the unevenness of the Place.

There is also the Carzuela, which affords nothing but Contrary delights, and some cool Rooms, where the King comes and rests himself after Hunting; but 'tis the Prospect which yields the Pleasure, and very fine things might be there made.

That I may tell you of something else besides the Kings Houses, you must know, dear Cousin, that on May-day, they resort to a Place without the gate of Toleda. This is called

El Setillo, and no body excuse themselves from going thither: to be fure then I went, but it was more to fee then be feen. tho' my French Dress made me very remarkable, and drew a great many Eyes upon me. The Women of great Quality never go abroad to take the Air in their whole Life, except it be in the first year of their Marriage, I mean into publick Walks and Places; and then too, 'tis under the very nofes of their Husbands, the Wife at the lower, and the Husband at the upper end of the Coach; the Curtains all open, and the finely adorn'd : but 'tis a rediculous thing to fee thefe two Creatures fit like Statues, looking at each other, and without speaking a word in an hours time. There are certain days fet apart for walking and taking the Air, all Madrid go abroad then; the King is feldom there, but except the King and a few Courtiers no body else fail of going. That which makes it very trouble-fome is, their long Traces, which take up a great compass of Ground, and occasions the Horses often to entangle. Several Ladies which are not of the highest Rank, resort thither, but with their Curtains close drawn; they only look through little Glasses which are fastned into the sides of the Coach : but at Night the Ladies of great Quality come Incognito; and when 'tis dark they please themselves so far as to walk a foot . They wear white Mantles upon their Heads, thefe are a kind of a Hood made of Woolen fluff, which covers them all over : they Embroider them with black Silk : they are only the ordinary Women, and fuch as go upon some Intreague, which wear them; yet fometimes, as I have faid, certain Court-Ladies will go in this Drefs. The Cavellero's also alight and walk, and fay fome odd thing or other to them, but they meet with their Match.

The Count de Berka, the German Envoy, told me, that tother night as he was at Supper, and his Windows (because of the cold) being shut, somebody knock'd at the Lattice of his Hall, he sent to see who it was; they found three Women in white Mantles, who desired to have the Windows open'd that they might see him. He sent them word, that they would be more conveniently in the Hall: They came in all concealed, and placed themselves in a corner, and so stood all the while he was at Table. He intreated them (but in vain) to sit down and eat some Sweet-meats, but they would neither do one nor t'other; but after they had said a great many merry things to him, in which they abundantly shewed a strange quickness of Wit, they went away. He discovered that these were the Dutchesses de Nelina Celi, d'Ossona and Ducado, having feen them at their own Houses; for Ambalfadors have the priviledge sometimes to go to the great Ladies and to give them a visit of Audience; but he was willing to have yet a greater certainty, and therefore caused them to be followed: and they were seen to go into one of their Houses by a talse Door, at which some of their Women waited for them. These little Disguises are not always attended with over much Innocence.

As to the Men, when Night comes, they walk a foot in the Prado; they make up to the Coaches in which they see Women, and leaning upon the Bouts, they either throw Flowers, or sprinkle sweet Water upon them; and when they are permitted, they go into the Coach to them.

But as to the meeting on May-day. It is certainly a great pleasure to see the Citizens and the People how they sit; some upon the young Corn, some upon the fides of the Manlanarez, others playing at Ombre, and others either with their Wives, Children, Friends or Mistresses, basking themselves in the Sun; fome are eating of a Sallad with Leeks and Onions, and others, hard Eggs; and others Gamon of Bacon, and even Galinas de Loche, which are Sea-Hens, and very excellent. They all drink Water like Ducks, and play either upon the Guittar or Harp. the King came there with Don John, the Duke de Medini Celi, the Constable de Castile, and the Duke de Pastratie; I only saw his Coach of green Oyl-cloth drawn by fix py'd Horses, the finest in the World; and allcovered over with Gold-spangles, and knots of Rose-coloured Ribon: The Curtains of the Coach were of green Damask, with a fine gold Fringe, but so close drawn, that one could perceive nothing but through the little Glasses on the sides of the Coach. It is the Custom, when the King passes by, to stand still, and in respect, to draw the Curtains; but we, according to the French fashion, let ours be open, and were fatisfied in making a very low Bow. The King took notice of a Spanilbitch I had in my Arms, and which the Marchioness d' Alvi, who is a very pretty Lady, defired me to carry to the Conflable of Colonna's Lady; and as I lov'd it mightily, the fen it to me very often. The King fent the Count de los Arcos, Captain of the Spanish Guards, to ask me for it; he came up to the Coach fide on Horse-back. I immediately gave it to him, and the Creature had the Honour to be made much of by his Majesty, was mightily pleased with the little Bells about her Neck, and the Buckles upon her Ears. He had a Bitch which he lov'd extreamly, and he fent to ask me if I would be willing ing that he should keep mine for Daraxa, which was the Name of his.

You may easily imagine, Dear Cousin, what answer I made. He returned me the Spaniel, but without either her Collar or Buckles, and he ordered the Count de los Arcos to give me a gold Box full of Pastrils, which he had about him, and desired me to keep it. It is but of a small value, but coming from such a hand, I mightily esteem it.

It was Don John, who is my Kinswomans Friend, which obtain'd this mark of the King's bounty to me; for he knew of my being in Madrid, though I had not had the Honour yet to fee him.

Two day afterwards, as I was all alone in my apartment, busie in painting a small piece, I saw come in, a Man whom I hew not; but one, who by the air of his Face, I could eafily judge to be of Quality: He told me, that not having met with my Kinfwoman, he was refolved to tarry till the came, for he had Letters to give her. After some little Discourse, he gave occasion to talk of Don John, and told me that he doubted not that I frequently faw him. I replyed, that indeed, face my arrival, this Prince came often to visit my Kinswoman, but he never ask'd for me. The reason of that perhaps, idds he, was, because you were fick that day. I was not sick, reply'd I, and I should have been very glad both to have feen and heard him, for I have been told both good and ill of him, and I have a mind to know whether they do him right or wrong. I have fignify'd my defire to my Kinfwoman, but he told me, there was no way to gratifie me, for he was fo devout, that he would speak to no Woman. Is it possible, lays he, in smiling, that his Devotion should so much disturb his Mind? for my part, I am confident he ask'd for you, and was affur'd that you were ill of a Feaver; Of a Feaver! cry'd I, that's very strange! I beseech ye, how do you know it? But just then, my Kinswoman came in, she was extreamly amazed to find Don John with me, and fo was I, for I little thought it was he. He told her several times, that he knew not how to pardon her for the Idea she had given me of him, that he was no Bigot, and that he was perswaded, true Devobondid not make a Man rude and inhumane,

I think him very handsome, of a noble Carriage, very welldiead, and extream witty, and of a mighty quickness of Mind. As my Kinswoman has a great share of Wit, so she clear'd her self well enough from what he taxt her with. But when he was gone, she was ready to eat me for anger, because I deny'd having had a Feaver. I defired her to excuse me, because I was ignorant what she had said to him, and that I could not divine: She answer'd me, that at Court, one must either be able to divine, or else they would act avery filly

She ask'd the Prince, if it was true, that the Queen-Mother had writ to the King, and beg'd that she might see him, and that he had refus'd her. He agreed it was, and also, that that was the only reason which hindred his Majesty from going to Aranjus, left she should come to him there, contrary to the Prohibition for her not fliring out of Toleda. What, my Lord laid I will not the King fee the Queen his Mother? Says rather, reply's he, that 'tis State-Policy which forbids Sovereigns to follow their Inclinations when they do not Suit with the publick good. We have a constant Maxim in the Council of State, always to consult the Spirit of Charles V. in all difficult Matters we enquire what he would have done upon fuch an occasion and that we endeavour to practice in our turn. For my part, I am of Opinion with a great many others, that he ought not to fee his Mother, fince it was fit for him to baniff her; and the King himself is so fully perswaded of this, that he answered her, it could not be. But it was not difficult for me to see, that Don John fitted the Genius of charles V. to his

The King in gone to Buen Retiro, where I had the Honou to see him first, at a Play, for he open'd the Lattice of his Box to look at us in ours, because we were drest after the French way. The Danish Ambassador's Lady was drest after the same fashion, and so handsome, that he told the Prince of Monteleon, he was mightily taken with us, only it was pitty that our Heads were not trim'd, and our Bodies clad after the Spanish mode; that the more he look'd at the French Ladie Cloths, the more they displeas'd him, that the Mens did no so much offend him. The Opera of Alcinus was acted before him, but I gave little Attention to it, looking so earnestly a the King, that I might be able to describe him to you. I mul tell you then, that his Complexion is delicate and fair, he has a broad Fore-head, his Eyes are fine, and have a great dealo sweetness in them; his Face is very long and narrow, his Lips like those of the House of Austria, are very thick, and his Mouth is wide, his Nose is very much hawk't, his Chin is tharp and turns up, he has a great Head of Hair and fair lank and put behind his Ears, his Stature is pretty high straight and slender, his Legs are small, and almost all of a thickness:

He is not of a Vindicative Spirit, k is fober, liberal and pious; his Inclinations are Vertuous, he of an even temper, and of easie access: He hath not had all that Education which is requifite to form the Mind, but yet the does not want any neither. I will now note some of his nerry Humours which have been told me, and though they ne of no great importance, yet it may still be pleasant to how them.

It is not long fince the Lady Connestable de Collonna, who is in a Religious House at St. Domingo, got out of the Abbey, from whence she had made several Escapes; the Nuns tyr'd with her proceeding, refolved to admit her no more; and indeed the last time the endeavoured to get in, they plainly told her, that the might either betake her felf to the World, one other place than their House for a Retirement. streamly offended at this refulal, which by no means fuited with a Person of her Quality and Merit. She got some of her friends to apply themselves to the King, and he sent Orders to the Abbess to receive her in again. The Abbess and all the has were obstinate in their refusal saying, that they would themselves represent their Reasons to his Majesty, and in their lesions go to him. When this Answer of the Nuns, was rehed to the King, he burst out a laughing, and said, It will be netty sport to see this Procession of the Nuns, who will come long singing, Libera nos Domine de la Contestabile. Some days ago it rain'd and thunder'd most terribly; the ling, who sometimes pleases himself in Playing little Tricks with his Courtiers, commanded the Marquis d' Aftorgas to wait whim upon the Terras walk in the Pallace. The good old un said to him in smiling, Sir, will it be long before you come? Why do you ask, said the King? that your Majesty, reply'd k, may send a Coffin to put me in, for there's no likelyhood at I should be able to contend with such Weather as this. o, go Marquess, says the King, I'll come to you. The Marless went out, and without any Scruple, stept into his Coach ad went directly home. Two hours afterwards, the King id, for certain the good old Man is wet to the Skin, let bim call'd in, I have a mind to see him in such a Condition. But why art thou so afflicted, repli'd he, fince thou haff got thy Revenge? Ah Sir, continued she, in seeking my Revenge, I have punisht my felf, I am now upon the brink of Despair, I beseech your Majesty to command them to put me to death, for I have deserv'd the severest Torment. Heretofore there was a Liberty for feveral forts of People to come into the great Room, but this Gustom is chang'd, and now there's only suffer'd to come in, the Great Lords, and at the most, Tutulados and the Knights of the Three Military Orders. This Room is certainly a very fair one, it is all painted and gilt; the Boxes, as I have already told you, are always Barr'd with Lattices like those we have at the Opera; but they reach from top to bottom, and look as if they were Chambers, that fide where the King fits is magnificent. As for the reft, the finest Comedy in the World (I mean those that are acted in the City) very often receives its Fate from the weak Fancy of some ignorant Wretch or other. But there is me particularly, and a Shoomaker, which decides the matter, and who hath gain'd fuch an absolute Authority so to do, that when the Poets have made their Plays, they go to him and as twere, sue for his Approbation, they read to him their Plays, the Shoomaker with grave Looks thereupon, utters abundance of Nonsence, which nevertheless the poor Poet is forced to put in after all, if he happens to be at the first Acting of it, every body has their Eyes upon the Behaviour and Actions of this ntiful Fellow, the Young People of what Quality foever imithe him. Person, and for whom several Duels have been sought, and great many People kill'd. I do not know how charming the Discourse may be, but I am sure their Persons are the uglic in the World, they are extravagantly expensive, and some must a whole Family perish with Hunger and Thirst, than on of those beggerly Players should want the least Supershuity.

We are now in a Season that's troublesome enough, so 'tis the Custom here to put their Mules to Grass; and ever body almost walks a foot. At this time you can see nothin but Grass brought from all parts, and the greatest Lord hard keeps two Mules to draw him, for this reason they often go of the season the se Horseback.

Those Horses which have been at the Bull-batines and a good for these sort of Sports, are dear, and much in reque The King had a mind to divert himself, and ordered a Bu Feaft to be on the Twenty second of this Month. I was ve glad of it, for though I had heard much talk of them, I nev faw any yet; and the young Count De Conismark, who is Swede, would Taurise, or Bait the Bull for a young Lady of a Acquaintance, so that I was the more eager to go to the Pl ca-Major, where my Kinswoman, as she was a Tutulada Castille, had her Balcony set up with a Canopy, a Carpet a Cushion of State. To give you a particular Account of all th passes at these Feasts, I must tell you, that after the King h appointed one of them, there are some Cows, which they Mandarines, led into the Forrests and Mountains of Andalou It is known that the most furious Bulls are in these Places, as they are train'd up for this purpose, so they run into the Woo the Bulls spy them out, and eagerly court them, those fly a these pursue them, and so are decoy'd into certain Pallisado let on purpole along the way, which is sometimes Thirty Forty Leagues in Length, several Men are armed with He pikes and well mounted, hunt these Bulls and hinder the from coming back, but it is not feldom that they are forced fight them within these Pales, and frequently they are kill'd wounded.

There are People placed all along the Road, which bring wice when the Bulls will arrive at Madrid, and there also the fet Pillisadoes in the Street to prevent any michief.

The Mandarines, who are real traitors, go conftantly before and the poor Bulls quietly follow after into the very place fign'd for baiting them, where there are great Stables built purpose with Shutters, contriv'd to keep them in, there formetimes 30, 40, or 50, together, this Stable has two Dog the Mandarines go in at one, and escape at the other; and when the Bulls think to follow them still they are hindred by a mp, in which they are caught.

After they have rested a sew hours, they are one after another let out of the Stable into the great Place, where there are great many young, lusty, strong Peasants, some of which ake the Bull by the horns, and others by the tail, and because hey mark him upon the Buttock with a hot iron, and slit his ars, they call them Heradores. This is not so easily done, or there are frequently divers Persons kill'd, and this is the beinning of the Shew, which always mightily delights the Peole, whether it be upon the Account that Blood is shed, or see, that they love to see something extraordinary, and at first ght surprizing, and which afterwards surnishes with matter for mg Reslections; but though unlucky Accidents do happen at ness Feasts, yet it does not appear that they take any Warning som them, for they are still forward to expose themselves at very Baiting that's made.

The Bulls are fed, and the best of them are pickt out for the liting; they can even distinguish those that are either Sons a Brothers of those Bulls which made a great slaughter in former Feasts, they tie to their horns a long Ribbon, and by the abour of that every body knows them again, and recites the listory of their Ancestors; that the Grandsire or great Grandsie of these Bulls bravely kill'd such and such a one, and they spect no less from those that then appear.

When they have sufficiently rested, the Placa Major is comed with Sand, and round it are placed Bars as high as a Man, pon which are painted the Arms of the King and his Kingloms. I fancy this Place to be larger than the Place Royal at lais, it is longer than it is broad, and about it are. Houses wilt upon Pillars and Arches like Towers, five Stories high, nd to each a row of Balconies, into which there are great lass-doors. The King's stands more forward than the rest, is fore spacious, and all guilt. It is in the middle of one of the ides, with a Canopy over it; over against it are the Ambas-dours Balconies who have a place when the King goes to Chapd, that is the Nuncio, the Emperor's Ambassadours, that of hance, of Poland, the Venetian, and that of Savoy; those of Ingland, Holland, Swedland, Denmark and other Protestant hinces, have none there. The Councils of Castille, Arragon, be Inquisition. Italy, Flanders, the Indies, the Orders, War, the froisado, and of the Finances, are on the right hand of the King: hey are dishinguisht by their Arms upon their Crimson Velvet

Carpets

Carpets which are all embroider'd with Gold. After these, are placed the city Companies, the Judges, the Grandees and Tiplados, according to their several Degrees, and at the King's Charge, or else at the City's, who hire these Balconies of private Persons that dwell there.

For all those I have now nam'd the King makes a Collation; and it is given in very neat Baskets, to the Women as well as the Men, it consists of Fruits dry'd, Sweet-meats, and Water cool'd with Ice, of Gloves, Ribbons, Fans, Pastiles, Silk-stockins, and Garters, infomuch that these Feasts always cost above a hundred thousand Crowns, and this Expence is defray'd out of the Fines and Forseitures adjudg'd to the King, or to the City, this is a Fund which must not be medi'd with, tho' twere to save the Kingdom from the greatest Danger, the doing of it might cause a Sedition. So bewitcht are the People with this kind of Pleasure.

From the Level of the Pavement to the first Balcony, there are Scaffolds made for the rest of the People, they give from Fifteen to twenty Piftols for a Balcony; and there is not any but what are let, and adorn'd with rich Carpets, and fine Canopies. The People are not feated under the King's Balcony, that Place is fill'd with his Guards, there's only Three Gates open into it, through which the Persons of Quality pass in their richest Coaches, and particularly the Ambassadors; and they make feveral turns round it, a little before the King comes. The Cavaliers falute the Ladies who fland in the Balconies. without being cover'd with their Mantles or Vails, they are deck'd out with all their Jewels, and whatever they have that is finest. One can see nothing but extream rich Stuffs, with Tapistry, Cushions and Carpets, all of rais'd work in Gold. I never faw any thing more glorious, the King's Balcony is hung round with Green and Gold Curtains, which he draws when he will not be feen.

The King came about sour a clock, and immediately all the Coaches went out of the Place. Generally the Ambassadour of France is the most taken notice of, because he and all his Train tre dress'd after the French mode; and he is the only Ambassador that has this Priviledge here, for the others are in the Spanish Dress. There's five or fix Coaches go before the King's, in which are the Officers, the Gentlemen and Pages of his Chamber. The Coach of Honour, in which there goes no body, marches immediately before his Majesty's own, whose Coachman and Postillion are always barehead, a Footman carrying their Hats; the Coach is surrounded with Foot-Guards. Those which they call the Life-Guard have Partifans, and march very the Coach, and next the Boots go a great many of the Ri Pages, cloath'd in Black, and without Swords, which is the on ly mark to known them from other Pages. As the Ladies that are defign'd to be about the young Queen, are already nam'd, so they all came under the Conduct of the Dutchess of Terra Nova, in the King's Coaches, they march by the Mens Boutes of the highest Quality, some on Foot that they might be nearer, others mounted on the finest Horses in the World, train'd up for that purpole, and which they call Horjes of Motion. That they may perform this piece of Gallantry, they must have leave from their Mistresses, otherwise 'tis a great Blemish to their Reputation, and even engages the Ladies Kindred in Trouble, for they take their Honour to be concern'd in this Liberty : But when the approves of it, they may practife all the pleasant flumours for which these fort of Fraft's minister occasion. But though they need fear nothing from the Ladies they ferve, nor their Relations, yet they are not freed from all uneafiness, for the Duegno's or Women of Honour, of which there's too great a Provision in each Coach, and the Guardadamas which go on Horseback, are troublesome Observers, hardly can one begin to discourse, but these old Haggs will draw the Curtain, and the Guardadamas will tell you, that that Love which is fulleft of Respect is the most discreet, so that very often one must be content to let the Eyes speak, and to figh so loud, that one may be heard at a Diffance.

All things being thus dispos'd, the Captain of the Guards and the other Officers mounted upon very fine Horses, enter the Place, at the Head of the Spanish, German, and Burgundian Guards, they are cloathed in Yellow Velvet or Sattin, which the Livery of the King, trim'd with tufted crimfen Gallet mixt with Gold and Silver. The Yeomen of the Guard, which I call the Life-Guard, wear only a short Cloak of the same the ry, over black Cloaths. The Spaniards wear Breeches tucktur after the old way. The Germans, which are called Tudesques wear them like the Switzers, they stand in Ranks near the King's Balcony, while the two Captains and the two Lieutenants, who carry each of them a Staff of command in their Hands, and are follow'd by a great many Liveries, march all four in a Rank at the head of the Guards, several times round the Place, to give the necessary Orders and to salute # dies of their Acquaintance; their Horses curvet and bound continually, they are covered with knots of Ribbons, and embroidered Housings: they are called Piffadoyes for Diffinction. Upthat day every one of these Lords affect to wear that colour when the People are come without the Bars, and are feated upon their Scaffolds, the place is watered with forty or lifty Tuns of Water which is brought thither in little Carts. Then the Captains of the Guards come back, and take their Posts under the King's Balcony, where all the Guards are likewise placed, and make a fort of a Fence, standing very close together; and although the Bulls are sometimes ready to kill them, yet they must not go back nor stir from their place; they only present to them the point of their Halberds, and so with a great deal of hazard defend themselves.

I do affure you that this strange number of People (for every place is full, even the tops of the Houses as well as the rest) the Balconies so richly set out, and so many beautiful Women in them, this great Court, the Guards, and in a word, the whole place makes one of the finest shews that ever I faw.

As foon as the Guards are possessed of the quarter where the King is, six Alguazils, or City Door-keepers enter the place, each holding a white Rod: Their Horses are excellent, harnas'd after the Morisco fashion, and cover'd with little Bells. Their Habit is white, they wear Plums of Feathers, and put the best Looks on they can, in so much danger as they are in; for they are not allow'd to stir out of the List: and 'tis their business to fetch the Knights that are to fight.

I fould tell you, before I proceed any further in this short Description, that there are certain Laws establish'd for this fort of Baiting, which are call'd Duelo, that is, Duel, because one Knight affaults the Bull, and fights him in fingle Combat. These are some of the things which are observed : One must be a Gentleman born, and known for fuch. If at he may fight on Horseback. It is not allowed to draw the aword upon the Bull, unless he has insulted over you; they can it insulting when the Bull breaks or forces the Garrochion and ance out of the Hand, or if he make your Hat fall off, or your Cloak, or has wounded you or your Horfe, or any of your Company. this case the Knight is oblig'd to push his Horse directly upon the Bull; for this is an Empenno, that is to fay, an affront that engages one to be reveng d, or to dye; and he must give him Una Cacbilada, or a back stroke upon his head or Neck. But if the Horse on which the Cavellero rides, refuses to go up to the Bull, then immediately he alights, and couragiously marches ap a foot to this fierce Animal. The Sword is very fhort, and about three fingers broad. The other Knights which are the to fight, are also oblig'd to alight off their Horses and a pany him, that is under the Empenne; but they do not is him, so as to affish him in the least against his Enemy. If they all march up in this manner towards the Bull, and he flies to the other end of the Place instead of tarrying for them, or meeting them, after they have pursued him some time, they have satisfied the Laws of Duelling.

If there be in the Town any Horses that have been at a Baiting, and are dexterous at it, though they do not know the Owners, yet they'll borrow them; nay, though they do not defire to fell them, nor the others in a condition to buy them, yet they never refuse them. If by mischance the Horse is killed, and they offer to pay for him, it is not accepted; because to receive Money upon fuch an occasion would not be agreeable to the Spanish Generosity. Nevertheless, it would vex a Man to have a Horse that he had taken pains to breed up, without any more ado taken from him by the first Stranger, and through his means kill'd. This fort of Combat is reckoned to dangerous, that Indulgencies are expos'd in several Churches for those days, because of the great Massacre that is then made, Several Popes would have quite abolish'd such barbarous fights. but the Spaniards begged the Court of Rome so earnestly to let them continue, that their Humour has been comply'd with and to this day they are tolerated.

The first day I was there, the Alguarils came to the Gate, which is at the end of the List, to tetch the fix Knights (of whom the Count de Conismark was one) which offered themselves to Combat. Their Horses are handsome to admiration, and most richly harnass'd: Besides those they ride on, they had each of them a dozen led by Grooms, with as many Mules loaded with Rejones or Garochons, which are, as I have said, Launces made of very dry Fir, about four or five foot long, paint'd and gilt, and the Iron-work very well polish'd; and the Mules were covered with Velvet Cloths or the same colour of the Combatants, with their Arms embroider'd in Gold: This is not practis'd at all Feasts, when the City orders one, there's far less Magnissence; but as the King commanded this, and it was upon his Marriage, nothing was omitted,

The Cavalleros were dreft in black, embroider'd either with Gold and Silver, Silk or Bugles, they had white Plumes of Feathers spotted with several colours, and a rich knot of Diamonds, with a Hat-band of the same. They had Scarfs, some white, and others crimson, blew and yellow, embroidered with Gold. Some wore them round their Wast, others over their Shoul-and fhort, without doubt their Arm; these last were and fhort, without doubt their Mistresses presented tem, for commonly they run to please them, and to shew that there's no danger to which they would not expose themselves for their diversion. They had also a black Cloak which wrapt them about. But the ends being thrown behind them, it did not hinder her Arms: they wore little white Buskins, with long guilt Spurs, which have only one sharp point after the Moore salied cavalgar they also sit a Horse like them, which is called Cavalgar

The Cavalleros were handsomely mounted, and lookt gracefully enough for this Country; they were nobly born, and every one had forty Foot-men, some cloath'd in gold Mohair trim'd with Lace; others in Carnation-colour'd Brocado, fiript with Gold and Silver, and the rest in some other fashion. Every one of them was dreft like a Stranger, whether 'twas Turb, Hungarian, Moor, Indian, or wild People. Several of the foot-men carried a bundle of these Garachons I have mentioned, and this lookt very well; Thus with all their Train they croft the Plaza Mayor, conducted by the fix Alguazils, and the Trumpets founding. They came before the King's Balcony, and made a profound Reverence to him, and defired leave of him to fight the Bulls, which he granted them, and wisht them Victory, Then the Trumpets every where began to found again, and this is done, as'twere, in defiance of the Bulls. All the People fall a shouting, and repeat Viva, viva los bravos Cavalleros: After this they separate, and salute the Ladies of their Acquaintance. All the Foot-men go out of the Lift, except two for each Knight, which are left to carry their Rejones; they keep close to their Masters, and 'tis very seldom that they forsake them.

Several young Men enter into the place, and they come a great way off to fight on these days: These I now speak of are a foot, and not being nobly born, they use no Ceremonies with them. Whilst one Cavallero is sighting, the rest withdraw, but not out of the Bars; and they do not assault that Bull which another has undertaken to fight, unless he makes at them. The first to whom the Bull comes when they are altogether, is he that sights him. When he has wounded the Knight, they cry out fileno es Empenno, that is to say, it is an Obligation upon such an one to revenge the Affront he has received from the Bull; and indeed Honour engages him, either on Horseback, or a foot, to attack the Bull, and give him a cut with his Sword, as I have said, either upon his Head or Throat, without striking him in any other part. Afterwards he may sight him as he will, and strike him where he can; but is doing ones Life is a thousand times in danger. When this given, if the Knights are a foot, they may mount their less.

When the King thought it was time to begin the Baiting two Alguarils come under his Balcony, and he gives to Don Folia the Keys of the Stable where the Bulls are fecur'd; for the King keeps the Key, and when it must be thrown, he delives it into the hands of a Privado, or Chief Minister, as a Favour. Immediately the Trumpets found, the Timbrels and the Drums. the Fifes and the Haut-boys, the Flutes and Bagpipes make a noise round the Place one after another; and the Alquarile. who are naturally great Cowards, go trembling to open the Doors where the Bulls are kept. There was a Man hid behind the door, who shut it as fast as he could, and then by a Ladder climbed up to the top of the Stable; for 'tis usual with the Bull. in coming out, to look behind the door, and to begin his Expedition by killing, if he can, the Man that stands there : after that he falls a running with all his might after the Alguarils, who four their Horses to save themselves, for they are not allow'd to stand upon their defence, and their best play is to run away. Those Men which are on foot, throw at him Arrows and very harp Darts, which are trim'd with Cutt-paper; these Darts flick in him in such a manner, that the pain causing him to flir much, makes the Iron enter deeper; besides when he runs, the Paper makes a noise, and being on fire, vexes him extreamly; his Breath looks like a thick mift about him, his Eyes and his Nostrils are like fire, he runs swifter than a Race horse, and holds it much better; to speak truth, he strikes Terror. The Knight who is to fight him comes near him, takes a Rejon. holds it like a Ponyard, the Bull makes up to him, he declines his blow, and thrusts his Gorachon at him; the Bull so thrusts it back, that the Wood being weak, it breaks, immediately his Foot-men, who holds ten or twelve dozen, prefent him with another, which the Cavallero thrusts also into his body; with this the Bull falls a bellowing, grows angry, runs, leaps, and woe be to them that stand in his way : And if at any time he is ready to run at a Man, a Cloak or Hat is thrown at him: and this flops him; or elfe, one falls down on the Ground, and the Bull in running, passes over him. They have also great Figures made of Past-bords, with which they deceive him, and so gain time to escape. That which helps them further is that the Bull constantly stuts his Eyes just before he pushes with his Horns, and they are so quick in that moment to avoid the but yet this is not so certain, but that a great many

plaw a Black, with a short Poniard, go directly to the Bull. when he was in the height of his Fury, and between his Horns thrust it into the very seam of his Skull, which is a place very foft and easie to be pierced, but withal, very small to hit. This was of the boldest and most dextrous blows that can be The Bull fell down dead upon the fpot; and pre-Trumpets founded, and several Spaniards ran with their Swords in their Hands, to cut in pieces the Beaft that was no longer able to hurt them. When a Bull is kill'd, four Alguazils go out to fetch four Mules, which some Grooms. cloath'd in yellow, and Carnation-colour'd Satin, lead in. They are covered with Feathers and little filver Bells; they have filken Traces, with which they tye the Bull, and so draw him away; upon which the Trumpets and People make a prodigious noise: There were twenty baited the first day. There came out a furious one which very dangerously wounded Count Conilmark in his Leg, and yet the force of the blow did not light upon him, but upon his Horse, whom it burst, he quickly got off him, and though he is no Spaniard, yet he would not be excus'd from any of the Laws : It would have drawn pity from any body to see one of the finest Horses in the World in such a condition; he ran violently about the place, striking fire with his feet, and kill'd a Man with a blow upon his Head and Breaft: The great Rayle was open'd for him, and he went out. As for the Count, as foon as he was wounded, a very fine Spanish Lady, who believ'd that he fought for her fake, stood forward in her Balcony, and with her Handkerchief made feveral figns, in all likelihood to encourage him, but he did not feem to need being animated; and although he had loft abundance of Blood, and was forc'd to lean upon one of his Footmen, who held him up, yet with great fiercenes he advane'd with his Sword in his Hand, made a shift to give a very great wound to the Bull on his Head; and then prefently turning himself towards that side where this young Lady, for whom he fought, was, he kis'd his Sword, and suffer'd himself to be carry'd away by his People half dead.

But you must not think that these fort of accidents interrupt the Feasts, tis said, that it will not end but but by the King's Order; so that when any Kinght is wounded, the others accompany him to the Bars, and immediately they return to sight. There was a Biscanier so bold, as to throw himself off his Horse upon the back of the Bull, held him by his Horns, and in spight of hi all the endeavours of the Animal to throw him off, yet the Bifcaneer fet upon him for above a quarter of an hour, and broke one of his Horns. If the Bulls defend themselves too long, and that the King would have others come out, (for fresh ones afford more delight, because every one has his particular manner of fighting) they turn loofe some English Dogs; these are not fo big as is generally feen there, but 'tis a Breed fomething like those the Spaniards carry'd into the Indies when they conquer'd them; they are small and low, but so street, that when they once seize the Throat, you may sooner cut them in pieces than make them let go their hold. They are very frequently kill'd, the Bull takes them upon his Horns, and toffes them up in the Air like Foot-balls; fometimes they hamftring the Bull with certain Irons made cross-wife, which they put at the end of a long Pole, and this they call faretar al toro.

There was another Cavallero under the Empenno, because in fighting his Hat fell off; he did not alight, but drew his Sword, and pushing his Horse upon the Bull which expected him, gave him a wound in the Neck; but as it was a flight one, fo it ferv'd only to enrage him the more : he tore up the Earth with his Feet, he roar'd, and he leapt about like a Stage Icannot well describe to you this Combat, nor the Acclamations of every body, the claping of hands, nor the multitude of Handkerchiefs which are thrown up in the air, for an Expression of Admiration, some crying out, Viller, Viller, and others He Toro, Ha Toro, the more to excite the Bulls fury. Neither can I tell you my particular disturbance, and how my Heart fail'd me every time I saw these terrible Creatures ready to kill those brave Cavallero's: these things are equally impossible to me.

There was a Toledian, both young and handsome, which could not avoid being wounded by the horns of the Bull, who tofs'd him up very high, he immediately died; there were two others mortally wounded, and four Horses either kill'd or desperately hurt, and yet every body faid, it had not been a fine Baiting. because there was so little Blood shed; and to have been such. there should have been at the least, ten Men kill'd upon the Spot. It is hard to describe the Dexterity of the Cavalleros in fighting, and that of the Horses in avoiding the Bull. They'll turn sometimes an hour about him, and tho' they be not a foot distant from him, yet he is not able to touch them, but when he does hit them, he wounds them cruelly. The King threw Fifteen Pistols to the Black that kill'd the Bull with his Ponyard. and he gave as much to one that had fubdu'd another, and faid, he would remember the Knights that had fought.

I observ'd a Castillian, who knew not how to defend himsel jump upon a Bull, as nimble as a bird. Thefe Feafts are fine. great and magnificent; 'tis a noble Sight, and cofts abundance One cannot give a just Description of it, it must be seen to be well understood. But I assure you that all this did not please me; Do but think if a Man that is very dear to you, should be so rash to go and expose himself against a furious Beast, and that for your fake, (for generally that's the Motive) you fee him brought back weltering in his Blood, and half dead, is it possible I fay, for you or any one, to approve of such Actions and these Customs? Nay suppose one had no particular concern. would one defire to be present at such Sports; that cost the Lives of fo many Men? For my part, I wonder that in a Kingdom, where their King bears the name of Catholick, there should be fuch barbarous Diversions permitted. I am satisfied that 'the very ancient, because they derive it from the Moors; but yet methinks this, as well as divers other Customs which they have

Don Ferdinand observing me very much disturbed and uneasie during the Baiting, and taken notice, that I was sometimes as pale as death, I was fo much frighted to see some of those kill'd which fought, said to me in fmiling, what would you have done Madam, if you had feen what had happen'd fome years ago ? A Cavallere of worth, passionately lov'd a young Woman, who was only a Jeweller's Daughter, but a perfect Beauty, and was to have a great Estate. This Cavallero having understood. that the most furious Bulls of the Mountains were taken, and thinking it would be a very glorious Action to vanquish them, resolved to Taurize as they call it, and for that end defired leave of his Mistress. She was so surprized at the bare proposal only which he made, that she swooned away, and by all that Power which he had given her over himself, she charged him not to think of it, as he valued his Life. But in spite of this Charge he believed he could not give a more ample proof of his Love, and therefore privately, caus'd all things necessary to be got ready in order thereunto. But as industrious as he was to hide his defign from his Mistress, the was informed of it, and used all means to diffwade him from it. In fine, the day of this Feaff being come, he conjur'd her to be there, and told her, that her very presence would be sufficient to make him conquer, and to acquire a Glory, which would render him yet more worthy of her. Your Love, fays the, is more ambitious than 'tis kind, and mire is more kind than 'tis ambitious. Go where you think Glory calls you, you have a mind I should be there, you will fight fight before me; well, I do affure you, that I will be the but yet perhaps my presence will afford you more matter o Trouble than Emulation. However he left her, and went to the Placa Mayor where there was already a mighty Affembly but scarce had he begun to defend himself against the fierce Bull which affaulted him, when a Country Youth threw a dart at this Terrible Creature, which pierced him to deep that it put him to a great deal of paint. He immediately left the Cavallero that was fighting him, and roaring ran directly after him that wounded him, this Youth thus frighted would have faved himfelf, when his Cap which cover'd his head fell off, and then the lovelieft and the longeft hair which could be feen appeared up on his shoulders, and this discovered it to be a Maid of about Fifteen or fixteen Years of Age. Fear had put her in such a Trembling, that the could neither run, nor any way avoid the Bull. He gave her a desperate push on the side, at the same inflant her Lover knew that it was the, and was running to affift her. Good God! what a grief, it was for him to fee his dear Mistress in this sad Condition ! Passion transported him; he no longer valued his Life, and grew more furious than the Bull, and performed things almost incredible. He was mortally wounded in divers places. On this Day, certainly the People, thought the Batting fine, they carried thefe, two unfortunate Lovers to her unhappy Father's House, they both defired to be in the same Chamber, and though they had but a little time to live, yet beg'd the Favour they might be married, acordingly they were married, and fince they could not live together, yet at least were they buried together, in one and the same Grave. The Story has mightily increased the Averfion I had already conceived against these sort of Feasts, and I told Don Ferdinand so, after I had thank'd him for his pains in relating it to me.

Hitherto I have faid nothing to you concerning the Spanish language, in which I am endeavouring to make some Progress. It pleases me extreamly, it is expressive, noble, and grave, Love finds it commodious for its work, and can play the sool prettily enough in it. The Courtiers speak more toucisely than others, they make use of such abstracted Comparisons and Metaphors, that unless one is used to hear them, half their meaning is lost. I have learnt several Languages, or it least understand the first Rudiments of them, but yet in my aind, it is only our own which exceeds the Spanish.

I come just now from feeing Ten Gallies which are arrived his is somewhat strange in a City that is Eighty Leagues from Sea, but thele are Land-Gallies; for if there be Sea-horfes d Dogs, why not Land ones? They are sharp'd like a Chariot. but four times longer, and have fix Wheels, three on a fide and do not go much flower than a Chariot, the upper part is round, and is very like a Gally, they are covered with Canvas and may contain forty Persons; there one sleeps and dresses victuals, indeed 'tis a Moving-house, they put eighteen or twenty Horses to draw it, the Machine is so long that it cannot be turn'd but in a field; they come usually from Galicia and Manca, the country of the brave Don Quixot, they let out eight, ten or twelve in a Company, to be helpful to one another in case of need; For when one overturns, it makes a great havock, and the best that can happen, is a broken Arm or Leg, there must be above a hundred to raise it up again. In it there is carried all forts of Provisions, for the Country through which they pass is so very barren, that on Mountains which are fourscore Leagues broad, the biggest tree one meets with is a little wild Tyme, there's in't neither Inn nor Inn-keepers, you fleep in the Gally, and itis a miserable Country for Travellers.

Monsieur Mollini the Popes Nuncio, consecrated the Patriarch of the Indies on Trinity Sunday, and the King was there. I faw him come in, he had a Black Suit and a gold coloured Silk Belt on, and little Pearls were fet round the flowers, his hat was so broad which they never cock here, that the Brims laid upon his shoulders, and lookt ill. I observed, that during the Ceremony he eat of fomething which was held to him in a Paper, they told me it was either Leeks or Shallots, of which he eats very often. I was too far off, to fee him well, he did not return to Buen retiro, because of Corpus Christi-day, at which Ceremony he would affift. In coming out of the Church, I knew a French Gentleman whose Name is Juncas, he is of Burdeaux, where I faw him. I ask'd him how long he had been here, he to told me but a little while, and that his first Buliness had been to have feen me, had he not been engag'd at Bayon, not to lose a minute's time, in the search of a very wicked Fellow, which was supposed to be hid at Madrid; That it was not the Curiofity to fee the Patriarch of the Indies confecrated, which drew him to the Hieronimites, (otherwise the D ters of the Conception) but that having defired to for one of the Nuns, he was told, that he could not fee h King was gone. He added, that this was one of the most Women in the World, and hath been the cause of a unhappiness in the Family of Mounsieur De Lande, I remember to have feen her as I have gone by, and intreated him to tell me the matter. It is, fays he, too long and metancholy a Mifchance to relate presently; but if you will see the young Nun I speak of, I am persuaded Will not be unpleasant to you. I willingly accepted his Offer, because I have so often been told, that they have so much more wit in Monasteries, then elsewhere in the world. We went into a Parlour, which had three fuch terrible Iron doors with spikes, as made me wonder. How is this, faid I? It has been told me, that the Nuns in this Country are very amorous, but I cannot be perfuaded, that Love is bold enough to venture over these long Spikes, and through these little holes, where one must undoubtedly perish. You are deceived, Madam, cri'd Juncas, at the Appearances of things; if the Lady which is coming, can spare me so much time, Ill presently tell you, what I learnt of a friend of mine a Spaniard, the first Journey I made bither. But at the very instant, Donna Isidora came into the Parlour. I found her much handsomer, than I had fancy'd her in my own Mind to be. Monsieur De Juncas, told her, that I was a French Lady which had a great mind to be acquainted with her, upon his report of her Merits. She thankt me in a very modest manner, and afterwards told us, that it was very true, that the Wretch after whom Euquiry was made, had been lately at Madrid; but that the was certain he was not now there, and that he had even had the Impudence to write to her by the Hands of a Man where he lodg'd; that the Letter was brought to her after his Departure, and that she would not receive it. It seems to me, said I, interfupting of her, that he could not be taken, supposing he were yet here. Sometimes, fays Donna Isidora, Permission is obtain'd from the King. There are certain Crimes for which there is no Sandwary, and that is one of them. She fell a weeping, notwithstanding all her endeavours to hinder her tears, and added, that thanks be to Heaven, The could not reproach her felf with any thing in the late Bufiness, but yet the tould not forbear grieving extreamly that she had been the cause of it. We talk'd together a good while longer, and I was as much charm'd with her Wit as with her Beauty. Afterwards I withdrew. I am absolutely yours, most dear Cousin, be throughly perfwaded of it.

LETTER XI.

On E must love you as mightily as I do dear Cousin to resolve to write to you in a Season when the Weather is so excessive hot: Whatever has been told me, and whatever I could imagine of it, is nothing in comparison to what I now seel. To desend my self from the heat, I leave open all my Windows all night long, without searing the Gallick Winds which criples a body. I sleep bare-head, I put my hands and Feet in Snow, enough to kill one; but I think its much at one to dye, as to be smothered with heat, as they are here. Tis Mid-night before one feels the least breath of Air from the Western Brizes.

In going to take the Air, one is sufficiently puzzled; for if the Glasses are open, one's choak'd with the Dust, of which the Streets are so full that one can hardly see, and although the Windows of the Houses are shut, the Dust sinds a way through and spoils all Houshold Goods; so that what with the ugly smell in the Winter, and the dust in the Summer, all things of Silver, and every thing else is so tarnish'd and spoyl'd, that little can be kept handsome any considerable time: Notwithstanding all care at present, ones face will be covered with sweat and dust, like those Wrestlers which are represented to us in a Ring.

I should now tell you that I have seen the Ceremony on Corpus Christi-day, which is very solemnly kept here: There's a general Procession of all the Parishes and Monasteries, which are very numerous; the Streets thro which the Holy Sacrament is to pass, are hung with the richest Tapistry in the World; for I do not only speak of that which belongs to the Crown which is there, but also of that which belongs to a thousand particular Persons which have most admirable Tapistry. All the Balconies are then without their Lattices adorn'd with Carpets, rich Cushions, and Canopies: They hang Ticking cross the Streets to hinder the Sun from being troublesome, and they throw water upon it, to make the Air cooler: All the Street are spread with Sand, well watered, and filled with so great a quantity of Flowers, that one can hardly tread upon any thing elfe. The Repositories are extraordinary large, and adorned with the greatest splendor.

No Women go in the Procession : the King was there in a black Lute-ftring Taffety Suit, a Sholder-belt of blue Silk edg'd with white; his Sleeves were of white Taffety, embroider'd with Silk and Bugles, they were very long and open before he had little Sleeves hanging down to his Waste, his Cloak was wrapt about his Arm, and he had on his Collar of Gold and precious Stones, at which there hung a little sheep in Diamonds: He had also Diamond Buckles at his Shooes and Garters, and a great Hat-band of the fame, which fhin'd like the Sun; he had likewife a knot which button'd up his Hatt, and at the bottom of that a Pearl which they call the Pereagrine, it is as big as the Ruflet Pearl, and of the same shape; it is pretended to be the finest in Europe, and that both its colour and kind is in persedi-The whole Court without exception, followed the Hely Sacrament, the Councils walk'd after it without any Order or Precedency, as they happen'd to be, holding white Wax Candles in their hands; the King had one, and went foremost, next the Tabernacle where the Sacrament was. It is certainly one of the finest Ceremonies that can be seen. I observed that all the Gentlemen of the Bed-chamber had a great gold Key by their fide, it opens the King's Chamber, into which they can go when they will; it is as big as a Cellar-door Key; I there law several Knights of Malta, who wore every one a Cross of Malta made of Holland, and embroidered upon their Cloaks; it was near two a Clock, and the Procession was not yet gone in; when it past by the Palace, they fir'd several Rockets, and other Inventions.

The King went to meet the Procession at St. Mary's, which is a Church near the Palace. Upon this day all the Ladies begh to wear their Summer Garments, they make their Balconies very fine, in which they have either several Baskets of flowers, or Bottles fill'd with fweet Water, which they throw bout whilst the Procession passes by; Commonly the three Compasies which guard the King, are new cloathed. As food as the Holy Sacrament is gone back to the Church, every body goes home to eat, that they may be at the Autos, which are ontain kinds of Tradegies, upon Religious Subjects, and are odenough contriv'd and manag'd: They are acted either in the fourt or Street of each Prefident of a Council, to whom it is he. The King goes thither, and all the Persons of Quality retive Tickets over Night to go there; so that we were invited, nd I was amaz'd to see them light up abundance of Flamboys, whilft the Sun beat full upon the Comedians Heads, and meked Wax like Butter; they afted the most impertinent piece N 3 that ever I faw in my days. This is the Subject of it

The Knights of St. Fames are affembled, and our Lord comes and defires them to receive him into their Order; there are divers of them that are very willing to it, but the Seniors represent to the others, the wrong they should do themselves, if they should admit into their Society, a Person of ignoble Birth, that St. Joseph his Father was a poor Carpenter, and that the Holy Virgin wrought at her Needle : Our Lord with great impatience expects their Resolution, at last they determine with some unwillingness, to refuse him; but at the same time propose an expedient, which is to institute on purpose for him. The Order de Christo, and with this every body is satisfied. This is the Order, that is in Portugal, but yet these things are not done with a wicked defign; no, they had rather dye than in the least to fail of the respect due to Religion. These Autos last for a Month; I am so weary of going to them, that I excuse my self as oft as I can : They use Sweet meats and Water cool'd in Ice very much, and they have need of them, for the heat almost kill's one, and the dust choaks a body: I was ravish'd with Joy to meet Don Augustin Pacheco, and his Wife (of whom I have formerly told you) at the President d' Hazienda's House; they come thither, because they are related to the Prefident: We were placed near one another, and when the Ceremony was over, we went to take the Air in the Prade, after the French Mode, that is Men and Women together in the fame Coach. Don Frederick de Cardona was one; our Curtains were close drawn whilft there was a great many folks, because of ou beautiful and young Spanish Women; but as we tarry'd later than others, the Nuncio, and Frederick Cornaro the Venetian Am baffador, caus'd their Coaches to drive up to ours, and talk' with us; when all on a fudden we faw a great Illumination al along the Walk, and at the same time appear'd fixty Cardinal upon Mules, in their Habits and red Caps; after them follow the Pope, he was carry'd upon a certain Machine all cover'd wit a foot Carpet; he fat under a Canopy in a great Chair, and S Peter's Keys laid upon a Cushion, with a Vessel full of holy Wa ter of Orange-flowers, with which he sprinkled every bod The show march'd on gravely; and when they were com to the end of the Prado, the Cardinals began to play a tho fand cunning tricks to make his Holine's merry; some three their Hats upon the Trees, and standing directly under, the fell upon their Heads again; and others flood upright upont Saddles on their Mules, and made 'em run as fait as they coul There was a vaft number of People follow'd them; we ask the Pope's Nuncio what this meant, and he affur'd us he underflood nothing of it; and that he did not like this fort of Mirth. He fent to enquire from whence the Holy Colledge came in that manner; and we understood it was the Bakers Holy-day, and that every year they us'd to make this fine shew. The Nuncio had a great mind to have disturb'd them with a Volly of Cudgels, and had already commanded his Attendants to begin the Fray, but we interceded in the behalf of these poor People who had no other intention than to celebrate the Festival of their Saint. In the mean time, some that had over heard the Orders which were given, and were Diffurbers of the publick Peace, gave Information thereof to the Pope and Cardinals; this was enough to put all in confusion, every one escap'd as well as he could, and their fear made our Pleasure short liv'd. In France fuch Mascarades would not be suffer'd, but perhaps there are many things innocent in one Country, which would not be fo in another.

My Kinswoman knowing how very civily I had been receiv'd by Don Augustin Pacheco, invited him to Supper at her House; I desir'd him to remember his promise of giving me a Relation of what he knew of the Indies, immediately I'll tell you, says he, concerning those they call the West-Indies, in which a part of America is compris'd.

In the Reign of Ferdinand King of Castille and Arragon, Christopher Columbus a Genoway, discover'd this Part of the World in the Year 1492. As the Spaniards were the first that found this fortunate Country, unknown to the Europeans, fo King Ferdinand and Queen Isabel, had the Propriety of it by a Bull from Pope Alexander VI. He establish'd them and their Succeffors perpetual Vicars of the Holy See, over this vaft Country; fo that the Kings of Spain, are both Spiritual and Temporal Lords, and nominate Bishops and other Ecclesiasticks, and receive Tenths from them. Their power there, is of a larger extent than in Spain, for you must know that America alone is one of the four Parts of the World, and that we possess more Land there, than all other Nations together besides. The Council of the Indies, which is establisht at Madrid, is one of the most considerable of the Kingdom, and there being so great a necessity of holding a very frequent Correspondence between Spain and the Indies, to fend Orders to maintain the Court Authority, they were oblig'd to eflablish beside, a particular Chamber, which is compos'd of the eldest Counsellors of the Council of the Indies, and they are to take Cognizance of all things concerning the Revenues, and cause Expeditions by the Secretaries of the Council. N 4

Besides this Chamber at Madrid, there's another at Seville call'd the House of Contratation, it is composed of several Counsellors both of the Robe and the Sword, with other necessary Officers. Those of the Sword, take Cognizance of things which concern the Fleet and the Galeons. The other Counsellors take Care of matters of Justice. Appeals from this Tribunal are made to the Council of the Indies at Mindrid. There are Registers kept in the House of Contratation at Seville, in which are writ all the Merchandize that are sent to the Indies, and all that come from thence, that so the King may not be cheated of his Customs; but this signifies little, the Merchants are so cunning, and those who keep the Accounts are so easily drawn to share with them, that the King is not a whit the better for them, and the Duty to him, which is only the fifth Part, is so ill paid, that he does not receive the fourth Part of what is due to him.

It is the Council of Madrid which proposes Subjects to the King to fill up the vacant Vice Royalties of New-Spain and Peru, they are granted for five Years, and fo are all other Places, of which the most considerable, are these following, viz. The Governour and Captain general, and Prefident of the Royal Chancellary of St. Domingo in the Spanish Islands, the Governour and Captain General of the City of St. Christophers of the Havana, the Governour and Captain of War, of the City of St. James of Cuba, the Governour and Captain General of the City of St. John of Puerto Rigo, the Governour and Captain General of the City of St. Augustine, in the Province of Florida, the Governour of the City of Ascension of the Island of Margueretta, the Governour and Captains General of the City of Cumana, Capital of New-Andalousia, the Vice Roy, Governour and Captain General of New Spain, A President of the Royal Audience, who refides in the City of Mexico, the Governour and Captain General of the City of Merida, Capital of the Province of Tucatan, the President and Governour of the Royal Audience and Chancellery, which refides in the City of Gaudalaxara, capital of the Kingdom of Galatia; the Governour and Captain General of the City of Guadiana, Capital of the Kingdom of New Biscay: the Governour Captain General and Prefident of the Chancellery which refides in the City of Santiago of the Province of Guatemela; the Governour of the Province of Locausco in the Strait of Guatamela; the Governour and Captain general of the City of Cornagua, of Province of Honduras, the Governour of the City of St. James of Lyon, capital of the Province of Nicaragua; the Governous and the Governour of the great Caxamarca.

I do not hear mention the Places of Judicature, nor the Benefices, which are very numerous; But it must be observed, that all the Employments I have spoken of, are given either from three to three Years, or from sive to sive Years, that so one Man alone may not grow rich, whilst there are so many others that stand in need to partake of the King's Kindness.

In those Places where there is no Vice Roy, he that is Prefident, is also Governour, and when a Vice Roy dies, the Prefident of the Vice Royalty for the time being, takes the Government upon him, till another Vice Roy is fent from Spain. It is his Catholick Majesty which gives those great Posts and the most considerable Governments. The Vice Roys fill up the lef-fer, and these Vice Roys make a shift very easily in five Years time, to bring home two Millions of Crowns all charges paid, the Governours of the Principal Places, get in the fame Compals of time about five or fix hundred thouland Crowns; none goes thither, but what grows rich, and this is so certain, that even the Fryers which are fent thither to preach the Faith, and convert the Indians, make fuch a Profitable Mission, that they bring home every one of them, thirty or forty thousand Crowns. The King disposes of divers Pensions paid by the Villages of the Indies. And from these they draw from two to fix thousand Crowns per Annum. And this is another way the King has to gratifie his Subjects.

The Phillippine Islands which lie near the Kingdom of China, depend upon the King of Spain, the Trade there is in Silk: these Places cost him more to keep, then they bring him in.

The Castillians had their Reasons why they would not let any sort of Manufallures be set up in the Indies, nor any Stuffs made there, nor any of those things else, which are indispensible necessary. This Policy causes every thing to go from Europe, and make the Indians, who passionately love all the Commodities and Ornaments which come from thence freely to sa crisice their Silver to their Satisfaction: by this means, they are put out of a Capacity to grow rich, because they are forced at very dear rates to buy the least Trisle they want, and with which they amuse them.

The Flota confifts of divers Vessels soden with rich Merchandizes which are sent to the Indies, and there are other great Ships of War which are call'd Galleons, which the King sends to convoy them. These Men of War ought not to carry any Merchants Goods, but the Lucre of Gain tempts them against the express Prohibition of the King, and sometimes they are so full laden, that if they should happen to be attack'd, they could not defend themselves. When these Vessels are ready to fail, the Dispatch which the Merchants obtain from the Council of the Indies at Madrid for leave to send them, cost for each of them, from three to six thousand Crowns, according to the bigness of the Vessel. It is easie to imagine, that since they give so much, they are sure of gaining a great deal more.

The Galleons go no further then Porto Velo, whither they bring all the Silver of Peru, the Flota leaves them at this Place and continue their Voyage to New Spain. The Galleons fail from Sanlucar to Cartagene in fix Weeks or two Months at most, they tarry there a little while, and in five or fix Days they come back to Porto velo; it is a Town scituated on the Coast of America, the Air there is very unwholsome, and the Weather excessive hot. On the other side of the Isthmus some ten Leagues distance only, is the City of Panama, whether is brought from Peru a valt quantity of Silver in Bars or Wegdes and divers Merchandizes which are convey'd by Land-carriage to Porto velo, where the Galleons are, and where there is kept one of the greatest Fairs in the World, for in less then forty or fifty Days there is fold of all forts of European Goods to the valve at least of twenty Millions of Crowns ready Money. After the Fair is done, the Galleons return to Cartagena, at which place there's a confiderable Trade for Indian Goods, and those of the Kingdom of St. Foy, as well as for those, from Morigenta: After this, they go to the Havana to take in necessary Provisions for this Voyage, and from thence they are commonly two Months in Sailing to Cadiz; But as to the Flotta, it Stops at Porto Rico to refresh, and arrives at Vera Crux in five Weeks, there they unload their Merchandizes, which is afterwards carry'd by Land fourfcore Leagues beyond to the great City of Mexico, the Sale of them is quickly over, and the Flota parts afterwards to go to the Havana; but this must be past only in the Month of April or September, because of the North Winds. The Galleons are commonly Nine Months in their Voyage to Peru, and the Flota is thirteen or fourteen Months. fome particular Persons go thither also at their own Charge, after they have obtained Leave from the King, and have Registered themselves at the Contrataction at Sevile, these go to the Coasts of St. Domingo, Honduras, Caracas, and Buenos Ayres.

The Money which comes directly from the King from the Indies, must be brought in one Galleon, this Silver is deliver'd to one of the Masters of the Mint, who pays to the King every Voyage he makes, six thousand Crowns, and he keeps one per Cent. Of all the Silver that goes through his Hands, which arises high. As to the Silver which belongs to particular Persons, that is brought in what Vessels they will choose; and it is the Captain that is responsible for it.

Cent

There's a certain Duty which is Call d Avarie, and it is taken for all Goods Registred, and for all the Silver which is brought from the Indies. This Duty is so considerable, that it suffices to fit out the Galleons and the Flota for their Voyage, although the Charge amounts to nine Millions of Crowns; but that of the Flota is not fo great.

He that the King chooses to be General of the Galleons, advances to him fourscore or a hundred thousand Crowns which is repaid him in the Indies with great Interest. Every other Captain does also advance Money to the King proportionable to the bigness of the Vessel they command. There goes moreover with the Galleons a Patacha, which leaves them in the Gulph Delas Tequas she goes to the Isles of Margueritta to fish for Pearls, of which they pay to the King a fifth part, that is of all the Pearl, they take, and afterwards she comes to Cartagena.

Within these sew Years, there is discovered Seventy Leagues from Lima, some Mines which yield a vast Revenue, those of Peru, and all the others in the West-Indies pay the King the sifth part, as well of the Gold, as the Silver and Emeraulds. There is at Potosi greater plenty of Mines than any where else, the Silver they get there is brought to Port de Ariga, and from thence, it is sent to Callao. It is one of the Ports of Lima, whether the Galleons come to fetch it. The Kingdom of Peru yields every Year in Gold and Silver to the Value of eleven Milions of Crowns. From New Spain is brought five Millions of Crowns, besides Marchandizes which are commonly, Emeraulds, Gold, Silver, Chochenil, Tobacco, Wool of Vigogne, Campetha Wood and Hydes.

It was a long while before they would suffer in New Spain any Workmen that wrought in Silk or Wool; there are some now and this may do some hurt to the Trade of Stuffs which are sent from Europe, they are not allow'd to plant there any Olive Trees or Vines, that so the Oyl and Wine which is carried thither may sell the better. The King has the Power in the Indies as well as Spain, to sell the Bull of the Crusado, which is a Licence to eat Flesh every Saturday, and to enjoy the Benefit of Indulgences.

The Indian Idolaters are not subject to the Inquisition in the Indies; that it is established only against Hereticks and Jews.

No

No Strangers are suffered to go to the Indies, but if at any time some happen to go, there must be a special Permission obtained which is very rarely granted.

How is it possible for me, continued Don Augustine, to express to you the Beautifulness of the City of Mexico, the Churches, the Palaces, the Publick Places, the Riches, the Profusion. the Magnificence and the Pleasures, a City that is so happily scituated, that in all Seasons it enjoys a continual Spring, and where the Heats are not at all exceffive, where they feel not the Severity of Winter. The Country is no less charming and Flowers and the Fruits at all times equally loading the Trees. There you gather more than one Crop in a Year; the Lakes and Ponds are full of Fish, the Grounds are well stockt with Cattel, the Forests and Woods afford excellent Fowl and wild Beafts, the Earth feems to open her Bowels on purpose to give up the Gold she encloses, there are Mines or Rocks of precious Stones discovered, and Pearlare there taken. Oh 1 faid I, let us all go dwell in that Country. This Description Charms, but as 'tis a long Voyage it may be convenient, if you please, Madam, said I, to Donna Tereza in smiling, to get our Supper before we go; I immediately took her by the hand, and we came into a Parlour, where I had provided the best Musicians, which are bad enough, and which in my Opinion, have nothing to recommend them but their dearness. My Cook made us some Ragous after the French way, which Donna Therefa found so excellent, that she defired I would let her have the Receipt how to do them. Don Augustin intreated me alfo to let him have fome of my Larding-Pins, of which really one may look all over Spain, and not find fo much as one. We tarry'd very late together, for in this Season they set up till four or five a Clock in the Morning because of the heats, and that the best time is in the Night.

There are certain days in the year, that every body goes out to take the Air upon the Bridges which cross the River Mansanarez; but at present all Coaches are laid up, the Gravel and some little Brooks help to make it very cool and pleasant. The Horses endure a great deal in these Walks, for nothing can be more prejudicial to their Feet than the Flints upon which they continually tread. In certain places of this River they make a stand, and there remain till two or three a Clock in the Morning; there is very often a thousand Coaches: Some particular People bring Victuals to eat there, and others sing and play upon several Instruments; all this is very pleasant in a sine Night. There are some Persons which wash or bath themselves, but indeed 'tis after an ugly manner. The Danish Ambassador's Lady did it lately; her People go a little before her, and dig a great hole in the Gravel, which presently fills it self with Water, into which the Lady comes and thrusts her self; you may imagine how pleasant such a Bath is, and yet this is the only way that can be made use of in this River.

You will not be forry, perhaps, to know, that in making out ones Nobility here, it must be prov'd, that one is descended both by Father and Mother from Vijos Christianos, that is, from Ancient Christians. The blemish which they ought to fear is.

their being allay'd to any Jewish or Moorish Family.

As the People of Biscay and Navarre were defended from the Invasion of the Barbarians by the height and Ruggedness of their Mountains, so they esteem themselves all Cavalleros, even to the meanest Water-bearer; for in Spain, the Children sometimes take their Mothers Name, if the's of a better Family than the Father. It is certain, that there are few Families entire, and whose Name and Nobility has not been carry'd, by an only daughter and mixt with another Family: That of Velago is not of this number, for they reckon up ten Connestables of Castilo successively from Father to Son. Here's one thing very fingular, and that which is not allow'd of in any other Country; and that is, That Foundlings, or Children found by chance are reckon'd Noble, and bear the Title of Hidalgos, and enjoy all the Priviledges annext to the Nobility; but to this end, they must prove, that they were Foundlings, and were maintain'd and bred in the Hospital where such Children are kept.

There are in Spain some great Families which hold almost all their Estates by the Title of Mayorargo; and when it happens that all of the Name are dead, and that the next akin is a Male, though he be a natural Son, yet he shall inherit; and for want of such, the eldest Domestick shall take the Name and the Arms of his Master, and inherit his Estate: And this is one reason why the younger Brothers of others Houses, as Noble and Illustrious, do not scorn to be Servants to these, and their hopes are pretty well grounded; for it often happens that Families are extinst, because the Spanish Women have sewer Children than the Women of other Countries.

There lately happen'd a very great misfortune to a young Woman of Quality called Donna Clora; she could not preserve her Heart against the Charms of count de Castrillo, a Man of the Court, very witty and handsome; the Cavallero had the secret to please her without designing it; he was ignorant of the Inclinations she had for him, and so did not improve his Happiness. And although the Father of this amiable Creature was absent, yet she did not enjoy the more Liberty, because her Brother, whose Name was Don Henriques, to whose care her Father had recommended her; continually watcht over her Actions and Behaviour; the durit not speak to him the lov'd and this was a double Martyrdom, not to be able to make her Complaints, and to divide her Grief with him that caus'd it : But at last she resolved to write to him, and to find out some way that the Letter should come to his hands; but as this was a business of the highest consequence to her, so she was at a stand about the choice of a Confident; and here she stopt for some time, till at last she bethought her self of a Friend of hers who had always testified abundance of kindness for her, and so without further confideration, the writ a very moving Letter to the Count de Castrillo, and was going to her Friend to intreat him to get it deliver'd to this Cavallero, when the faw him pass close by her Chair; this fight of him encreas'd her defires to let him know her mind, and immediately taking this opportunity for her felf, threw the Letter she had in her hand to him, at the same time feigning, that this was a Letter which he had given to her as he went by ; Know my Lord, fays he, aloud with an angry look, That it is not to me you ought to address your self upon such a design as yours. Here take the Letter; which I will not fo much as open. The Count had too much Wit not to apprehend presently the favourable intention of this fair one. You need not complain, Madam, says he to her, that I have not made use of your Advice; he quickly withdrew to read a Letter which must needs give him abundance of Pleasure : by this means he was inform'd of Donna Clora's Intentions, and what he must do to see her. He omitted nothing, he became desparately in Love, and thought himself, as he had reason, one of the happiest Cavalleros of Spain. They impatiently expected the return of her Father, that they might propose the Marriage to him, which in all likelyhood must have been very acceptable to him.

But notwithstanding all the Precautions that these young Lovers took both certainly to fix and continue a Conversation, which was the Joy of their Life; yet the suspicious and watchful Henriques discover'd their Intreague: He believed her Criminal, and in the excess of his Rage, without signifying or making the least shew, he one Night went into the Chamber of the unfortunate Donna Clora, and as she was in a deep sleep, he stranged her in the most barbarous manner imaginable.

Nevertheless, though it was known, that he was the Author of so wicked an Action, yet he was not prosecuted, for he had too much Credit and Interest; and besides, this poor Gentle-woman had no kindred but what was his, and they were unwilling to encrease the Missortunes of their Family, which were already but too great.

After this wicked Fact, Henriques feign'd a great fit of Devotion; he appear'd no more in Publick, and had Mals said at his House, and saw very few People; for he was very apprehensive that Count Castrillo (who had not dissembl'd his Grief, but had let it visibly appear) would at last be revenged for his Mistress, for indeed he most carefully sought all Opportunities. At length, after having attempted all imaginable ways, he found out one which succeeded.

He disguis'd himself like an Aguador, that is, a Water-bearer. these fort of People load an Ass with several great Pitchers, and fo carry them about the City; they wear thick coarse Cloth, their Legs are naked, and their Shooes are either cut or flasht, or elfe they have Soals made fast with Strings. Our Lover thus difguis'd waited all day long leaning upon the fide of a Springwell, whosewaters he increas'd by his Tears; for this Well was just against the House where he had so often seen his dear and fair Clara, and there it was also, where the inhumane Henriques dwelt. As the Count kept his Eyes continually upon this House, he perceiv'd one of the Casements half open, and at the same time his Enemy to draw near it, he had a Looking-Glass in his Hand, in which he was looking himself. Immediately the cunning Aquator threw some Cherry-stones at him, in a jesting way, and some of them having hit his Face, Don Henriques affronted at the Infolence of a Man, which appear'd to him to be only a poor Aguador, and transported with the first motions of his Anger, came down alone to chaffize him: But he was hardly in the Street, when the Count discover'd himself, and drawing his Sword, which for his purpose he kept hid, cry'd out, Traitor that thou art, think of defending thy Life. The furprize and the fright had so amaz'd Don Henriques, that he was only able to ask quarter; but he could not obtain it from this enraged Lover, who came to revenge the Death of his Miftris upon him that had fo cruelly murder'd her. This Count would have found it very hard to have escap'd, upon his doing such an Action just at the door of a Man of note, and that had abundance of Servants; but in that very moment that all Don Henriques People were fallying out upon the Count, happily for him, the Duke Duzeda came by with three of his Friends, they immedi-immediately came out of their Coach, and referred him to feafonably, that he made his Escape, and we do not yet hear where he is; I am concern'd for him, because I know him, and that he is a very honest Man.

It is very common in this Country, to affaffinate one for feveral Causes, and Custom even authorizes the Fact, for every angry Difference; for example, if one give another a Box o'th Ear, or strikes him on the Face with his Hat, his Hankerchief, or his Glove, or has wronged him, in calling him Drunbard, or lets drop any words that reflects on the Virtue of his Wife, thefe things I say must be no otherwise reveng'd than by Astassination; but they give this Reason, that after such Affronts, it would not be just for a Man to venture his Life in fingle Combate upon equal terms, where the Offended might perish by the hand of the Agressor. They'll keep a revenge twenty Years together, if they cannot fooner meet with afit Occasion to execute it : And if they happen to die before they have got Satisfaction, they leave their Children Inheritors of their Refentments as well as of their Estates, and the best way for a Man that hath given any Affront to another, is for ever to for lake his Country. I was lately told of a confiderable Man, that after he had lived twenty Years in the Indies, to avoid an ill turn from another to whom he had given some Offence, and having understood that not only he but his Son was dead, believ'd himself secure. He returns to Madrid, after he had taken care to change his Name that he might not be known; but all this was not able to fave him, for the Grandfon of him that thought himself abus'd, though he was but twelve Years old; caus'd this Person to be murder'd quickly after his return.

The Men that committed these horrid Actions are commonly hir'd from Valentia; It is a City in Spain, whose People are wicked to excess; there's not any Crime which they will not deliberately commit for Money; they wear Stillettos, and Fire Arms which go off without any noise. There are two sorts of these Stillettos, one about the length of a short Ponyard, but not thicker than a thick needle, and made of excellent Steel, square and sharp edg'd. This Instrument wounds mortally for entring very deep, and making no bigger an Orifice than an needle; no Blood comes out, nay hardly can one perceive the place where it entred, and so being impossible to dress it, they almost constantly die. The other fort is longer, and no thicker than the little singer, but so hard and strong that I have seen one of them at one blow struck throw a thick Walnut-Tree Table. These fort of Arms are sorbidden to be carry'd in Spain, as

Bayonnets are in France; neither is it lawful to carry those Pocket Pistols which fire without noise; but yet notwithstanding the Prohibition, feveral Persons make use of them.

I have been told, that a Person of Quality thinking he had a just cause to destroyone of his Enemies, went to a Bandolero of Valentia, and gave him a Sum of Money to murder him, but afterwards he was reconciled to his Enemy; and being willing to use a good Conscience, he made it his first business to acquaint the Bandolero with what had past; that so he might have a care not to kill this Man. The Bandolero feeing his Service needless, offer'd to return the Money, but he that gave it, entreated him to keep it; Well, fays he I am a Man of Honour, I shall keep your money and I will kill your Man. The other earnestly begg'd him to do nothing, feeing they were now friends. Look you, fays he to him, all that I can do, is to give you your choice, whether it shall be you or him, for to gain your Money boneftly, there's a necessity I must kill one of you. And not withstanding all the Entreaties of this Person, he persisted in his design, and executed it. It had been an easie matter to have seized him, but there was too much danger in't; for those Bandoleros are so numerous and united, that if any one of them should be executed, the Death of him is certainly and quickly reveng'd. Their Wretches are never without a List of their wicked Actions they have committed, and count it an honour to them; and when any one would fet them on work, they shew that, and ask, whether they defire them quickly dispatched, or to give them a languishing Wound. These are the most pernicions People in the Universe. Indeed if I should tell you all the Tragical Stories which I hear every day, you would grant that this Country is the very Theatre of the most horrid Scenes in the World. Love frequently furnishes the matter, either for its Satisfaction or Revenge. There is nothing that a Spaniard will not undertake, nor nothing that is above either his Courage or Compassion.

Tis faid, that Jealousie is their prevailing Passion, yet they do not pretend it so much out of Love, as Resentment and Pride; for they cannot bear to see another preser'd before them and every thing which contributes to affront them, makes them desparate; let these things be how they will, one thing is certainly true, that it is a most surious and barbarous Nation in this Affair. The Women keep not company with Men; but yet they very well understand how to write and appoint Meeting when they have a mind; notwithstanding the danger is great both for themselves, the Lover and the Messenger; but in spite of all that, by their Wit and their Money, they make a shift to deceive the most cunning Argus.

It is unaccountable that Men who put every thing in practice to satisfie their Revengeful Minds, and who are guilty of such abominable Actions, should even be scrupulously Religious, at the same time they are going to stab their Enemy. And that they may not fail in their Enterprize, they must forsooth, perform their nine days task of Devotion for the Souls in Purgatory, and recommend themselves to the Relicks they carry about them, which they often kiss. I would not be thought to six this Character upon the whole Nation; it may be affirm'd that there's as good People as in any part of the World, and that they are endow'd with a mighty Greatness of Mind. I'll give you some Instances of this last, which perhaps though you'll look upon as Follies, for every thing has two handles.

The Connestable de Castille is for certain, one of the richest Lords of the Court in Lands; but as he has the same fault as others like himself, which is to be careless in looking after his Interest, so he is ill surnished with Money. The Pensions which the King allows him, as he is Doyen or Chief of the Council of State, connestable of Castille, and Grand Falconer, are so considerable, as to supply all his want, but he is so haughty, that he will not receive any thing upon that Account. He gives these Reasons, That when a Subjett has Estate enough to live upon, he ought not to be chargeable to his Prince, but ought to serve him, and esteem himself happy; that to be paid for what he does is mercenary and flavifb.

The Duke d'Arcas, alias d'Avero, hath likewise another obflinate humour; he pretends that the King of Portugal has usurp'd the Crown from his Family, and therefore when he speaks of him, he never calls him any thing, but Duke d'Bragance; in the mean while, this Man has forty thousand Crowns a year in Portugal, of which he does not enjoy a farthing; because he will not submit to kiss the King's hand, nor to do him homage.

The King of Portugal hath sent him word, that he will dispense with his coming himself, provided he will send in his sead one of his Sons, either the eldest or the youngest, which he will, and that he will then let him receive his Rents; and moreover, will pay him all the Arrears, which amount to an immense Sum. The Duke d Avero will not so much as hear it mention'd: He says, that seeing he has lost the Crown, it would be a shame for forty thousand Crowns a year, to submit so the Usurper, that the greater evil takes away the sense of the lesser; that the Glory the King would receive from his slomage, would exceed the profit he gets from his Revenue; and that he would have cause to reproach him, for having don an honour to him which was not his due.

The last I reserve for you, is the Prince Destillano; he has Places and Commissions to dispose of at the Contratraction in Seville, to the value of sourcore thousand Livers a year. He had rather lose them, than so much as set his hand to the ne cessary dispatches, saying, it is not agreeable to the Generolit of such a Cavallero as he is, to trouble himself to sign his Nam for so small a matter; for you must know that these sources thousand Livers are not in Article, it may be there is above thirty; and when his Secretary presents to him a dispatch of grant, of a Place, worth sour or sive thousand Livers, he will refuse to sign it, and alledges his Quality, always saying, the es una Mineria, that is, it is but a Trisse. The King however is not so nice in the matter, for he sills up the Places for him, an receives the prosit to himself.

You'll fay now, that the Spaniards are Fools with this the fantastick Grandeur; and perhaps you are in the right, but so my part, and I think I know 'em pretty well, I am not of the Opinion; yet nevertheless I'll own, that whatever different can be found in comparing the Spaniards and the French, it mube to our advantage; but it does not seem sit for me to me dle in determining the matter, for my Interest is too muc concern'd to let me judge impartially; but yet I am persuant that there are very few rational Persons, who would not make the same Judgment.

There are fewer Strangers that come to Madrid than to an City in the World, and they have reason; for unless they have fomebody to procure them Lodging in some private Hou they'll run the hazard of being very ill lodg'd, and the Spaniar of their Wives, of whom they are extream jealous. I do no know, that in all this City, there's any more than two Im whereof at one of them, they eat after the French mode; an when these are full (which they are very quickly, being ve little) one knows not what to do; add to this. That there's conveniency for paffing too and fro in the Town, Hackney, hyr'd Coaches are scarce enough, but one may have as m Chairs as one will; yet it is feldom that Men are carry'd them, unless they be very old or infirm. But after all, w should Strangers come to Madrid? That which is fineff a the most amiable, is always hid, I mean the Women, then no converfing with them; those Women that may be seen, fuch dangerous Creatures for a Man's Health, that it must be great Curiofity indeed, that a Man can resolve to satisfie at so much risque; yet in spight of all this, the only Pleasure, and the sole Enjoyment of the Spaniards, is to contract some league; even Youths of Quality that are rich, begin at the age of twelve or thirteen years to entertain a Concubine Miners, which they call Amancebade; for whom they neglect their Studies, and make away with whatever they can eatch up of their Father's House, but 'tis not long before those Greatures in them cause to repent of their Folly!

But that which is terribly is. That there are few Persons in his Country, either of one or tother Sex, and even of thole hole Quality diffinguishes them, that are free from that curd Disease; their Children either bring it into the World with hem from their Mother's Womb, or fuck it from the Nurle; Virgin may justly be suspected to have it, and they are hardly assistant and the state of the to the same Condition. But doubtless this Disease is not so ingerous in Spain as in other Countries, for they still preferve hir Hair very fine, and their Teeth very good : At Court, and nongst the Women of the highest Quality, they discourse of athey do of a Fever, or the Meagrim, and they all bear the flemper patiently, without fo much as troubling themselves eminute about it. As they know not but that the most verous Women, and the youngest Child may have it, so they wer let blood in the Arm, but always in the Foot; they'll let child three Weeks old blood in the Foot, and this is so conat a Custom amongst them, that unless it be some very able t igeon, they knows not how to let Blood in the Arm. I was in pos'd, and was forc'd to make use of the French Ambasia. i's valet de Chambre, to let me Blood in the Arm. By all It I have told you, it is easie to judge, that this is the Nuppresent which a Spaniard makes to his Wife, and that high they marry, they do not quit their Mistresses, be they her so dangerous. Every time these Mistresses are let blood, ir Gallants are oblig'd to give them a compleat new fuit of parel; and yet you must observe they wear ten or twelve Micoats at a time; fo that this causes no ordinary Expence. Marquess de Liche understanding that his Mistress was just blood, and so could not tarry till the Tailor made her a luit th he intended for her, he fent her one that was just ight home for the Marchione's his Lady, who is extream utiful. It is a common faying with him, That to be the happi-Man, be would only wish a Mistress as handsome as his Wife.

The great Lords which return very rich from their Governments (whether for the most part they go poor enough, and where they pillage and extort all they can, because they are but for five years time) do not lay out their Money when they come home, in the purchase of Lands; they keep it in their Chefts, and as long as it lafts, they live at a great rate, for they think it is below them to improve their Money. Following this Method, it would be very hard for the greatest Treasure not to be quickly exhaufted; but the future diffurbs them but little, for every one of them hopes either for some Vice-Royalty, or some other Post, which will effectually repair all their ill Husbandry, and restore them to a good Condition: And it must be own'd that the King of Spain is capable both to satisfie the Ambition of his Subjects, and to reward their Services: and indeed, many of his Subjects fill up the Places of divers Sovereign Princes, which were the most eminent Men of their

Age.

The difference is very remarkable between those Sovereigns heretofore, and the Spaniards at present; it is less as to their Birth, than as to their Merit; for the Families of the great Lords are very Illustrious, there's many of them that are descended from the Kings of Castille, Navarre, Arragon and Portugal; but yet this does not hinder several of them (for I make an exception) from contradicting the vertue of their Anceston but then let's fee, how these are educated: They do not study neither have they any able Mufters; as foon as they are deligned for the Sword, no further care is taken to teach them either Latin or History; but one would think they should at least be taught what belongs to their Art, such as the Mathematicks, to fence, and ride the Horse; but they do not so much as think o these Matters, Here are no Academies, nor Masters to tead fach things; the young Men pass that time which they should employ for their Instruction, in a wretched Laziness, either it walking about, or courting some Lady; and yet in spight of all this, they are perswaded, that there are not any People i the World which deferve publick Admiration more than the do. They believe Madrid to be the very Center of all Glor and Happiness, of all Arts and Sciences, and of all Delights an Pleasure; in dying, they only wish their Children the enjoy ment of Paradife; and afterwards that of Madrid; by this meal you fee they exalt this City above Paradife, with fo much fat faction do they live in't. And 'tis this which hinders them fro visiting other Courts, and there acquiring that Politeness while they have not amongst themselves, and to which they are pe fect Strangers. And 'tis this also which makes them so eager to return home to Madrid, let them be where they will, whether they be sent by the King, or let them be there in what Rank or Station they will; let them be never so much honour'd, and heap up never so much Wealth, yet the love to their Country, and the Prepossession for that, hath such a power over them, as to make them renounce every thing; and they had rather choose to lead a mean poor Life, (so it be not observ'd) without any Train, Grandeur or Distinction, provided it be but at Madrid.

It is very feldom that a Father lets his Son travel abroad but keeps him at home, and suffers him to take up what Customs he pleases; you may easily believe, that generally these are none of the best; for there's a certain Age, when Youth aims at nothing elfe, but to gratifie their Appetite, and enjoy Pleasures. One entices and draws another, and that which ought to be feverly reproved, is authoriz'd by the Example of those, on whom they depend. Add to this, That they make them marry as one may fay, as foon as they are out of the Cradle. At the Age of fixteen or seventeen years they turn into the World a young Man with a Wife that is but a Child, and this at once makes him less capable to know his Duty, and puts him upon being more debauch'd, because he is his own Master under to controul: By this means, he passes his Life in a Chimney-corner, like a Man in his decriped old Age; and because this gentle Sluggard is of an Illustrious Family, he must be chofen to govern a People that must suffer through his Ignorance; but that which is yet worse, is, That such a Man taking himself for fome great and knowing Person, acts only by his own head. without confulting or advising with any body, and so does every thing Awkwardly and abfurdly. The Wife it may be, is not better stor'd with Wit and Parts; her mighty greatness, with which the prides her felf, is the only thing that can make her be regarded; and thus Persons of the highest Capacity, must be subject to two Animals, which are made their Superiors.

his due. It must be own'd, that when Heaven hath been so kind to a Spaniard, as to give him a good Education, and let him travel and see the World, he makes a better improvement than any body. Nature has been kinder to them than they are to themselves; they are born with more Wit than others; they have a great quickness of Mind joyn'd with great Solidity; they speak and deliver their words with ease, they have a great Memory; their Style is near and concise, and they are quick of Apprehension. It is easie to teach them whatever they have a mind to; they are perfect Masters in Politicks, and when there's a Necessity for't, they are temperate and laborious. Without question, several great Qualities may be found amongst them, such as Generosity, Secresse, Friendship, Bravery, and in a word, all those Endowments of Mind, which go to make up a perfect, good, and vertuous Man. And here methinks, I have a fair opportunity to conclude this Letter, and to beget in you an esteem of these People. I should not be forry, if I could procure them this Happiness; for their Manners do not suit so ill with me, as with a great many others, who cry out against them, and condemn them, before they have either examined or known them. For my part, I must needs say, that there is here, both good and bad, as there is in all other parts of the World.

From Madrid this 27th of June, 11679.

LETTER XII.

TEr's a general rejoycing fince the arrival of the Marquess de los Balbaces, who brought certain News that the most Christian King had granted Mademoifel to the King of Spain. He so impatiently expected these Tydings, that there was hardly an hour pass'd, that he did not ask if the Courrier was not come; and as foon as he knew it, he immediately went to hear Te Deum at our Lady d' Atocha's Church. As the Ladies do not go thither, so they are content to dress themselves very fine, and place themselves in their Windows. I chose this, and I thought I should have been both choak'd and blind ed, it was so excessive dusty. I saw the King in his Coach of green Oyl-cloth; he had but a small attendance, for some twen ty Hablarders cloth'd in yellow with trust breeches like the Pa ges, made up his Guard, marching before and behind him The Courtiers Coaches indeed that accompany'd him, were fo numerous that they could hardly be told; the People ever where crowding, even to the tops of the Houses, cry'd ou Viva el Roy Deas le Bendiga, and several added, Viva el Rem nueftra Seinnora. There was not the least House or Street with out its spreads Tables; every body had their Garlick, Leeks and Ogions in their hands, infomuch that they perfum'd the Air with them, and they were even debauch'd with drinking their Majesty's Health in Water: For dear Cousin, though I have already mentioned it to you, yet methinks I may repeat it here, That there never was People to temperate as these, especially in Wine; and they have so strange an abhorrence for those that are guilty of Intemperance, that by their Law, a Man that can be proved but once to have been drunk, is refus'd for being a Witness in any Court of Justice where he is offer'd, and after a sharp reproof is sent away. And if it happen, that one calls another Boracho, that is Drunkard, this lojury is fure to be re-ALLE Charles Indicates.

That Night the King was at Antocha; we illuminated all our Houses with great Flamboys of white Wax which they call Hachas; they are longer than those that are us'd at Paris, to light the Coaches at night, but withal, they are a great deal dearer, not only because the Wax is brought at great Charges from other Parts of the World, but also because there is a prodigious quantity of it confumed in Spain. And when they make Illuminations, they are not contented to fet up four or fix Blamboys, but they must put two in every Balcony, and two at each Window up to the highest Story; there are some Houses which thus require four or five hundred. Every where there were Bonefires made, and we went to the Palace to fee a Masquerade of a hundred and fifty Lords, which they faid was to be there. I cannot imagine why they call this Divertion by that Name. for they were not at all maskt; commonly they choose the darkest Night. All the Courtiers are mounted upon their finest Horses, every Horse was covered with Silver Gauze and Houfings embroidr'd with Gold and Pearl. The Cavalleros were cloath'd in Black, with colour'd Taby Sleeves, embroider'd with Silk and Bugles; they wore little Hats button'd up with Diamonds, and in them a Plume of Feathers, they had rich Scarfes and many Jewels; but with all this, their Black Cloaks and their ugly Collars strangely disfigure them. They ride a Horseback like the Turks and Moors, that is, as they call it a Genita, their Stirrups are so short, that their knees are even with, and rest upon the Tops of the Horses shoulders. I cannot yet reconcile my Eyes to this Fashion; they say, that thus they can better raise and put themselves forth against any that assaults them. But to return to the Masquerade, they all met together at an appointed Place, which usually is at one of the Gates of the City. The Streets through which they were to go, were all firewed with sand, and on each fides there was a kind of Chaffing diffies fet upon Poles, which besides the white Wax Flambous gave a great Light, there were also placed several very clear Lanthorns in Windows, which made a very fine Show. Every Cavallero had a great many Footmen, which were cloathed in Cloath of Gold and Silver; they went by their Masters sides with Flamboys. The Mafters marcht four in a rank very foftly each holding a Flamboy also; they went all over the City attended with Trumpets, Timbrels, Bagpipes and Flutes, and when they came to the Palace which was illuminated, and the Court covered with Sand, they took feveral Turns, and run and pusht against one another with a Design to throw each other down with these tricks. Prince Alexander de Parma, who is of a prodigious bigness fell down, and the fall of him made as great a noise as the shouting of a moderate high-hill, they had much ado to carry him off, for he was grievously bruis'd with his Fall; there were several of them with their great Spectacles on, but particularly the Marquess De Astorgas, who does not only wear them for gravity fake, but for need, for he is old; but yet for all that, he is frolicksome, he will be Meyor Domo to the young Queen, and he is a Grandee of Spain. And now I speak of a Grandee of Spain. Don Fernand de Tolledo. told me t'other day a thing pleasant enough : His Father in Law, who is the Marquels De Palacios, lives at a horrid profule rate, for it feems he is one of those profest Gallants of the Ladies of the Pallace, and to arrive to that, one must both have a great deal of Wit, and thew abundance of Magnificence, I mean a certain peculiar fort of Wit; that's neat and refinid, he must have choise Phrases and Expressions, and some ways and modes not common, he must understand how to write both in Profe and Verse, and that too better than another. In a word, one must both talk and do in this Pallace Gallantry after quite another rate than is used in the City. But to return to the Marquess De Palacios. There was a publick Festival appointed by the King this Marquels wanted Money to apnear there, he is Lord of feveral Towns, it came into his head to go down post to them; assoon as he arriv'd, at the first, he gaus'd Papers to be fet up, That all those of that Town which defired to be made Grandees should immediately come to him. There was not either Justice, Burgels or Tradelman, which was not prefently fill'd with vehement Ambitious defires for the Grandega, his House was crowded with all forts of People, he agreed with them every one severally in private, and got as much as he could of them, and afterwards he made them them all be covered before him, and gave them Patents in Form just as the King does, when he makes any one a Grandee. His Invention succeeded too well in the first Town, not to practife it in the rest : He found amongst them the same Difposition to give him Money, that through his means they might be Grandees, with this trick, he got a confiderable Sum and away he comes, and makes a splendid shew at Court. Bu as a Man is never without Enemies, fo they were some Per-t fons that had a mind to make use of this pleasant Frolick to out him out of the King's Favour. His Majesty was told of it. and the Marquis justified himself well enough, in faying all those to whom he had granted permission to be covered before him, being born his Vassals, they ow'd more respect than to dare to take this liberty without his leave, and that therefore he had made them Grandees, as to himself. And after this the thing was only lookt upon as a merry jest.

This Marquess comes often to see us, and as he belonged to the late Court, so yesterday he told me, that a famous Affrologer being one day with the late King in the Terrass-walk of the Pallace, the King askt him the height of that Place, he gaz'd up into the Air, and nam'd a certain Height. The King privately order'd them to raise the Pavement of the Terrals about three or four fingers, and in the Night it was done. The next Morning he caus'd the Aftrologer to come to him, and being upon the Terrals with him, fays he to him, I spoke last night of the height you told me of this Walk, but there was some that maintained that you were mistaken; Sir says he, I dare say, I was not mistaken; But consider it well says the King, and afterwards we'll make him ashamed, which boasts himself to be a more knowing man than you. Immediately he began again to make his Observations, the King saw him change colour, and seem to be at a great los; but at last he drew night he King, and faid, what I told your Majesty Yesterday was true, but to day I find that either the Terrals is rais'd, or the Heavens are funk down a little lower. The King smil'd, and told him the trick he had put upon him.

That I may give you an Account of other matters, I must tell you that the King has in his Family three Persons which by way of Emineney are called, the great Officers, the Mayor Domo Mayor, the Sumiller of the Body, and the Master of the Horse. These three Places are thus distinguisht, the Mayor Domo commands in the Pallace, the Business of the Sumiller of the Body, is in the King's Chamber, and the Master of the Horse, orders all things in every Place, except the Pallace.

After these come the Gentlemen of the Kings Bed-chamber. they wear at their Girdle for a mark of their Dignity, a golden key. There are three forts of these Keys; the first, gives the Employment of the Gentleman of the Bed-chamber; the second, the Entrance with the Employment; and the third is called, Clava Capona, which only gives Entrance into the Antichamber. The Number of these Gentlemen is great, there are Forty of those for Service, which take it in turns every day, and for the most part they are Grandees of Spain. The Mayor Domo, that is to fay, the Steward in Ordinary, have the fame Accels as the Gentlemen of the Bed chamber. The Persons of highest Quality fill up these Places, for the most part they are the fecond Sons of the Grandees, they wait in turns every Week, and when the High-Steward is absent, they are invested with his Power, these also introduce Foreign Ministers when they have Audience, there are eight of them, fometimes more, but feldom fewer.

The King hath three Companies for his Guards, but they have not any thing that agrees with one another. The Marquels De Falces commands the Flemish or Burgundian Guard, it contilis of a hundred Halberdiers, and although here, they call them the Yeomen of the Guard; yet they may be call'd the Life. Guard; the German Guard confifts of the same Number, Don Pedro De Arragon is Captain of it, the Spanish Guard is also compos'd of a hundred Halberdiers, and are commanded by the Count Delos Arcos. He is likewife Captain of another Company of a hundred Spaniards, call'd the Guards of the Lancilla, and this never appears, but at great Ceremonies, and at the Funerals of Kings. The Affairs of the State are manag'd by a chief Minister which they call Privade, he hath under him a Secretary of State, whose Office is in the Pallace. All Business that come to the King and the Minister, ought to pass directly through his hands, and as he dispatches also what ever the King orders, so he is called Secretario del despacho Universal.

The Council of State, and divers other Councils examine all matters, and the King or the Chief Minister, afterwards determine them, there are a great many Counsellors: Here follow the Names of those which at present compose the Council of State, Viz. The Constable De Castile of the Family of the Valesaco's, is the President, the Duke D' Albe, the Duke De Medecina Celi, Don Pedro D' Arragon, the Admiral of Castile, the Marques De Astorgas, the Prince De Stillano, the Duke De Ossima, the Count De Chinchon, Don Vincent Gorzaga, Prince De Guastalla, Don Lewis Pontocarrero Cardinal Archbishop of

Tolledo, the Marquels De Liches, the Marquels De los Balbares, Don Diego Sarmituto, Don Melchios Navarra, the Marquels De Losvelers, the Marquels De Mansera, and the Duke De Albergeraue.

Besides this Council, which is the principal, there is that of the Inquisition of War, of the Orders of Arragon, of the Indies, of Italy, of Hazienda, of the Croifado, and of Flanders. there is also the Chamber of Castile, of the Alcades de Corta. of the Contraduria, De Aposento, Delas Bosques Reales, De Milliones, and De Competancias. But do not think, dear Kinfwoman, that the Salleries and Profits of those Places are small. For inflance, The Counsellors of the Council of the Indies. make from eighteen to twenty thousand Crowns a Year of their Places. And here it is pertinent to tell you, that 'tis thought no Places are fold in this Countrey at least it is not known at in all appearance they are bestow'd upon Merit or Birth, but vet understand, there are such considerable Presents made, that to get a Vice Royalty, they'll give Five thousand Pistols, and formetimes more. That which would be call'd Bying in another Countrey, at Madrid is term'd giving a Regalio, that is, making a Prefent, and one is equivalent to the other, with this difference, that a Place, or a Government which one buys is yours as long as you live, and fometimes paffes by Inheritance to your Children, either by natural Right, or the Concession of the Prince; but in Spain they enjoy a Place which coft them very dear, only three or five Years at most. It is casie to believe that those who advance so much, are very certain to reimburle themselves both Principal and Interest. From this Practice the People are horribly opprest, they have perpetually upon them, either a new Vice Roy, or Governour, which comes from draining himself, of all the ready-Money which he could either make of his own and sometimes of his Friends, to bribe the Court. Thus he comes hungry, and he has but a fhort time to enrich himself, and so the poor People are on all hands pillaged, without so much as being able to have their Complaints heard. But it is yet quite another thing in the Indies. where Gold is so plentiful, and they are so far from the Kine and his Ministers. It is certain they bring from thence immense Sums, as I think, I have already intimated to you, even the Religious as they call them, who are fent to preach there. return not without forty and fifty thousand Crowns, which they have heap'd up in four or five Years time; fo notwithstanding their Vow of Poverty, they find out the secret of growing rich; and during their Life they are suffered to enjoy the Fruit of their Million.

The Monasteries here, have yet another piece of Graft, which commonly succeds, when a Religious Person or Fryer happens to be the only Son. If his Father is rich, they beg him to leave his Estate to the Convent, where his Son has taken the Habit, upon condition that he shall manage and enjoy it whilst he lives, but after his Death that the Monastery shall inherit it, and put up Prayers and say Masses for the Father and the Son. By this means there are profess'd Fryars which have ten thousand Crowns a Year, at their disposal. This Affluence in a Country where reason has but little power over the Affections, does not always make them more holy; and if there are any that use it well, there are abundance which abuse it.

It is known, that every year there comes from the Indies, above five and thirty Millions of Crowns, but yet not a quarter part of this ever goes into the King of Spain's Coffers. These Treasures spread themselves over all Europe, the French, English, Dutch, and the Genoeses draw away the best shares of it. Methinks, this does not suit with the refined Policy of the Spaniards, to waste their own Subjects in digging Gold out of the Mines, to let other Nations, with whom they are often at War, reap the Prosit; but the natural Laziness which hinders them from working, and having no Manusa-stures of their own, obliges them to have recourse to those who can surnish their Country with the Merchandizes they want.

As Strangers dare not venture to go there, because it is upon no less penalty than hanging, so they contrive to send their effects in the Names of the Spanish Marchants, with whom they meet with all the Fidelity imaginable; and if the King would, he could not hinder Strangers from receiving what is properly theirs; for the Spaniards upon this occasion, had rather loofe their Lives, than any wrong should come to another. There's one thing remarkable, and that is, when the Flora comes to an Anchor at Cadiz, there are Men who make publick profession to affist in cheating the King of his Customs upon Silver and other Merchandizes. It is as much their Trade and livelihood, as for a Banker to deal in Money. They call them Metadors; and as much Knaves as they are towards the King, yet one must do them the right to say, they are not so to the private men which agree with them for a certain reward, securely to lodge their Silver in such a place of the City as they shall defire. And this practice is so certain and safe, that one never hears of any that have violated their Truft : It were easie to punish these men for the Frands they are guilty of against the King, but there would be inconveniencies to the prejudice of Trade, perhaps far greater, than the Punishments would bring Advantage; fo that the Government and Magistrates take no notice of what passes. There might also be an easie remedy found out to hinder the King from losing all upon this occasion; and that is, to abase the Duties a little, which indeed are very high, and so what is given to these Metadors, and somewhat more, might be paid to the Contratadion, for naturally the Merchants do not love cheating, and are continually afraid of paying at once, what they have been faving for half a score Voyages; but 'tis the humour of the Spaniards, To have all or nothing, and very often they have nothing. As to Madrid, it is impossible to find there any greater Robbers and Cheats than the Magistrates and Officers themfelves; these are the Men, that with Impunity appropriate to themselves the Kings Customs, and who cheat him after such a rate, that 'tis no wonder if he so often wants Money : but' they are not satisfied with cheating their Sovereign, they must also abuse and pillage the People; and although the Laws of this Nation are not only very just, but equitable, yet no Body feems to be fenfible of them: Those very Persons into whose Hands they are put, and who are let on purpole to execute them, are the first that break and corrupt them.

If you'll but give Money to an Alcalde, or to an Alguazil, you may have the most innocent Persons in the World arrested or seized, and then thrown into some nasty dark hole of a Prison, and there perish with hunger, without any proceeding or coming to a Tryal, and without any Order or Decree; and when the poor wretch is let out of Prison, he must not so much as think of doing himself right against this wicked Officer of Justice. This sort of People are generally much favour'd every where, but here they are beyond all measure, and righteous Judges in this Country are more scarce than in any Country

Thieves, Murderers, Poysoners, and the greatest Criminals imaginable, remain safe and quiet at Madrid, provided they are not rich, for if they be, they are sure to be disturbed for the sake of that.

They do not judge Criminal Matters above twice or thrice a year; it is with the greatest difficulty that they bring themselves to cause any Criminal to dye, who is, say they, a man like them, their Country-man, and the King's Subject; they send most either to the Mines, or to the Gallies, and when a-

any Wretch is condemned to be hang'd, he is carry'd upon an Ass, with his Face to the Tail; he is cloathed in black, and a Scaffold is erected for him, that he may make a Speech to the People, who are all upon their Knees, and in Tears, beatting themselves upon their Baeasts: After he has spent what time he will in his Harangue, he is dispatch'd with a great deal of Gravity; and as these Examples of Justice are very rare, so they make a mighty impression upon the Spectators.

Notwithstanding the vast Riches, and the excessive haughtiness and Presumption of the great Lords, yet they obey the least Order of the King, with that exactness, and respect which cannot be sufficiently prais'd. Upon the first Command, they depart, they return, go to Prison, or into Banishment, without murmuring. It is not possible to find a more perfect Submission and Obedience, nor a more sincere Love, than that of the Spaniards for their King. This Name is Sacred with them, and to bring them to whatevever one has a mind, it is sufficient to say, The King Wills it; its under his Name, that the poor People of both the Castiles are so horribly oppress with Taxes; the other Kingdoms or Provinces are not so loaded, but boast themselves for the most part, that they are a free People, and pay what they have a mind to.

I have already hinted to you, dear Cousin, that in every thing they exactly follow the Politicks of Charles V. without considering that the difference of times makes a mighty alteration in the Events of things, although they may seem to be alike, and in the same Circumstances; and that what without the imputation of rashness might have been undertaken 120 years ago under a flourishing reign, would be impudent to practise now under a Reign that is far less so: but a Vanity that is natural to them, hinders them from seeing; that Providence sometimes permits Empires, as well as particular Families to have their Revolutions and Periods. The Spaniards believe themselves to be just the same People, and in the same Circumstances they ever were; but though I never knew their Ancestors, yet I dare say they deceive themselves.

But not to make any farther Reflexions, which perhaps are too ferious and high for me, I will tell you, that here's a general rejoycing at Madrid for the arrival of the Flota from the Indies. As 'tis not their humour here to treasure up Wealth, so this prodigious quantity of Silver, which comes all at a lump, is spread over all the World. One would think that these immense Sums cost nothing, and that it is Money which chance sent them. Hereupon the great Lords summon their Creditors, and pay them with a profuseness, which vet without lying, has something in't that is both noble and very generous; for there are but few Countries where Liberality is so natural, as 'tis in this; and I must also add, that they are patient even to admiration. They have been known to endure most long and toilsome Sieges, in which besides the Fatigues of War, they had nothing to support them but Bread made of rotten Corn, and flinking Water for their Drink; and yet there are no Men in the World more nice about good Water. I fay notwithstanding all this, and that they have been expos'd to the Severities of the Weather, were half naked and had hard Lodging, yet in spight of all these things, they have been found more brave and couragious, than when they en-joy'd Plenty and Prosperity. It is true, that that Temperance which is so natural to them, is a mighty help to them to endure hunger when they are forc'd to it; they eat very little, and scar cely will they drink any Wine. The Custom they have of eating all alone, contributes fomething to make them to frugal; for indeed, neither their Wives, nor their Children, ever eat with them. The Mafter has his Table to himfelf, and the Mistress with her Children sit on the Floor upon a Carpet after the Turkish and Moorish way. They seldom or never invite their Friends to feast together, so that they are not guilty of any excess. Upon this account, it is their faying, That they only eat to live, whereas there are People, which only live to eat. Nevertheless there are some rational People, which find this affection too great; and as they admit of little familiarity in Conversation, so they perpetually live at a distance, and as twere in Ceremony with one another, without enjoying that freedom which makes that true Union, and produces that defirable openness of Heart.

This great Retirement gives them up to a thousand Illusions, which they call Philosophy; it makes them fingular, dull, fantastick, melancholy and Jealous; whereas if they govern'd themselves otherwise, there's nothing they would not be capable of, fince they have a wonderful vigour of Mind, an excellent Memory, good Sense, a solid Judgment, and great Patience; than which, there needs no more to make a Man wise, to grow in Perfection, to be agreeable in Conversation, and to distinguish himself from the most polite Nation. But they are so far from being what naturally they might be, though at never so little pains, that they affect a certain Indolency which they call greatness of Mind; they neglect their most important business, and the advancement of their Fortunes. Provision for the sure rure, gives them not the least disturbance; the only matter they are not indifferent in, is Jealous; they improve that to the utmost, the bare suspicion is enough to make them stab their Wife or their Mistress. Their Passion of Love is always furious, and yet the Women please themselves in it; they say, they would not for all the mischief that may befal them, have them less sensible of their unfaithfulness; that their desperate Temper is a certain proof of a true Passion, and that they themselves are not more moderate when they are in Love, They leave nothing unattempted to be reveng'd of those they love, if they for lake them without cause; so that these fort of amorous Engagements have commonly a fatal end. For instance, not long fince, a Woman of Quality, who had cause to complain of her Gallant, contrived to get him into a House where the commanded, and after the had fufficiently reproach'd him, against which he did but weakly defend himself, for he was guilty; the prefented to him a Ponyard, and a Cup of poyfon'd Chocolate, leaving him only the liberty which fort of Death he would choose: He did not waste one minute to move her pitty, he very well faw, that in this Place she was the strongest, so that he tamely drank off the Chocolate without leaving a drop. After he had drunk it, fays'he to her, it had been better if you had put a little more Sugar in't, for the Poyfon made it very bitter; remember to do fo the next time you prepare another. He was immediately feized with Convulfions; it was very violent poyfon, and kill'd him in an hour time; and for all this Lady still lov'd him passionately, yet the had the barbarity not to flir from him till he was dead.

The Venetian Ambassador, who is a very well accomplished Man, being lately at home, they brought him word, that? Lady covered with a Mantle defir'd to speak with him, and that the hid her felf to close, they could not possibly fee what the was: fhe had with her two Gentlemen Ushers, and a confiderable Attendance. He invited her to his Chamber of Audience, and she defired he would cause every body to go out. When the was alone with him, the unveil'd her felf, and appear'd to him extream handsom. I am of an Illustrious Family, says the to him, my Name is Donna Blanca de Gulman; I bave despisit all the Laws of Decency, in Favour of that Passion I have for you I came to declare to you, my Lord, and to tell you, that I mult needs remain here this Night. From such an impudent Speech the Ambassador could not in the least doubt that this was some Jilt that had borrow'd a great Name, to draw him into some Snare, but yet with abundance of kindness, told her, that till now he had never thought himself unhappy in the Service of the Republick, that he could will he were not an Ambaffador, that to he might embrace the Favour the offered him ; but that being in fuch a Station, there was little likelyhood that he could give Entertainment to a Person of her Eminent Quality. that this might bring him into great trouble, and therefore beg'd her that she would withdraw. Immediately she was like a Fury, and after the had revil'd and reproach'd him, the drew out a Stilletto, and run upon him to have stab'd him. He cafily prevented her, and having call'd one of his Gentlemen, bid him give five or fix Piffols to this Woman. She fo little deferved this Generofity, and it so appear'd her, that she really told him, she was one of those Creatures he took her for, and that the reason why she had been so desperate, was, that the Gentlemen Ushers, who waited for her below, were her Gallants, and would have broke her bones if the had made no advantage of the Plot they had laid; that besides, she was to pay for the Equipage she came in, which was hir'd purposely for this defign, and that she had much rather have dy'd, than to have endur'd all those Abuses. The Ambassador was so taken with her pleasant Confession, that he caused ten Pistols more to be given her; for, fays he to her, fince so many honest Folks must share with you, your part will be too small. She succeeded fo well here, that she went directly to the French Embassadors; but the was not to courteoully receiv'd there: For upon the first Apprehension of her Design, she and her Attendance escap'd very narrowly of being entertain'd with the Strapado. He gave her not a Sous, happy was fhe that got out as fhe came in, for he had an aversion for all these Creatures.

This Morning we tarried a while in the Placa Major, for an Answer of a Message my Kinswoman had fent to a Gentleman that dwelt there. In this Place Fish is fold, and there was a Woman which had some little bits of Salmon to fell, which she faid was fresh; she made a horrid noise in caying it, and in calling Customers to buy it, at last comes a Shooemaker, which I knew for fuch, because she call'd him Sinior Capatero; he askt her for a Pound of her Salmon (and by the way, you must obferve, that every thing here is bought by the pound, even Wood and Charcoal) fays she to him, You do not enquire after the price, because you think 'tis cheap, but do not deceive your felf, affure you, I must have a Crown for every pound. The Shoomaker vext that the questioned his thoughts and ability, with an angry tone said to her, had it been very cheap I would have had but one pound, but since 'tis dear, I'll have three, and immediately mediately he gives her three Crowns, and then thrusting down his little Hat (for you must know that the Tradesmen wear them as narrow as the People of Quality wear them broad, and turning up his Mustachios by way of Rodamentade, he rais'd the point of his formidable Sword almost to the top of his shoulder, and haughtily lookt at us, having well observed that we took notice of him and overheard his Discourse and were Strangers; but the pleasantness of the thing lies here, perhaps these three Crowns was all that ever this vain-glorious Fool had in the World, that this was his whole Weeks pront, and that to morrow, himself, his Wise and poor Children, would have a more severe Fast, than with Bread and Water; but such is the vain humour of these people here; nay there are some of them which will take the legs of a Capon, and will let them hang down under their Cloaks, that they may look as if they really had a Capon, whilst they have nothing but the Legs and Feet.

You cannot fee a Joyner, a Sadler, or other fort of Shopkeeper, without his Velvet and Sattin Suit like the Kings, with his long Rapier and Dagger, and his Guattar hung up in his Shop. They work as little as ever they can, for I have more than once told you, that they are naturally lazy. Indeed nothing but over-ruling Necessity drives them to do any thing at all, and then they work upon Sundays and other Festivals, without any scruple, as well as upon any other Days; and afterwards they carry their Goods abroad. If tis a Shoomaker and he has two Prentices, he takes them both with him, and each of them carry a Shooe, nay if he has three, they must all go along with him, and 'tis with much ado, that he'll floop to try the Shooes he made; when he has done, he goes and fits him down in the Sun (which is call'd the Spaniard's Fire) with a Company of fuch idle Fellows as himself, and there with a sovereign Authority they determine matters of State, and Settle the Interest of Princes; very often they fall out about them, some one of them that takes himself to be a more able Politician than the rest, will have them yield to his Judgment, but another as conceited as himself will not submit, and so they fall together by the Ears without Mercy. I was two days ago to fee the Danish Embalfador's Lady, and there was brought in thither a poor Wretch which was just then wounded in the Street; he was a Costermonger, and it feems had maintain'd that the Grand Senior would not be reckon'd a cunning Politician if he did not cause his Brother to be ftrangl'd; another to whom that young Prince. was not so displeasing, stood up in his defence, and thereupon these two fell a fighting; but after all, to give them their duc, all these People talk of Government and Politicks with a great deal of Judgement, and give good Reasons for what they say:

Here is in this City feveral Houses which are a fort of Academies, where People meets some to Play, and others for Converfation. They play there with great honesty, and let them lose what Sum they will upon Honour, they never fail to pay it in twenty four hours. If there should be any failure, their Honeur and Reputation is for ever loft. No reason whatsoever will be admitted against the necessity of paying in that time. They play there very high and very fairly, without noise or shewing the least vexation or concern: If they win, it is the Cufrom to give the Barato; this I think is also us'd in Italy, that is to fay, you give Money to those that are present, to some more to others less, and this whether you know them or no. He to whom you present the Barato must never refuse it, let him be a hundred times richer and better Quality than the Donour, nav one may demand it of a Gamester that is winning and he'll not deny to give it. There are People that have no other Subfiftance than this; but yet this is no good Gustom, for though a Man does win, yet sometimes he hardly carries any thing of his gains away with him, and if he degins to play again, he often lofes his own.

Further, if a Man is found to have cheated, he has as good betimes to forfake all Company; for no honest Person will have any thing to do with him, and if he is taken in the tact, he may think himself happy if he comes off with some Cuchillades, that is, some Cuts, but not Thrusts with a Sword.

As to the Conversation in these Academies, there's of it that is very ingenious, and very knowing Persons that frequent them; for in a word they are here just as in other Places, and there are some that write very fine things. What they call Novels feem to me to be of a Stile, and to have an Air that charms; they never advance any thing but what's probable, and the Subjects they take is fo well manag'd, and their Narration fo concife and plain, neither mean nor lofty, that one must needs grant they have a Genius, which furpasses all others, in these fort of pieces. I will endeavour to get fome of this kind, and will translate, and fend them to you, that so you may judge of them your felf. As I have not capacity enough to speak of things which treat of more sublime matters, so shall I say nothing of them till I have been inform'd by those that are competent Judges, and then I shall only pretend to be their Eccho. But after all I must needs say, that I think them extravagant in their Elogies, and that in them they keep not near to probability, their Imagination, which is very lively and active, sometimes runs too fast. I was t'other day reading in a Book, where speaking of Phillip the VI. the Author said, that his Virtues and great Qualities were so many, that there was not Paper enough in the World to write them down; that a common Pen was not worthy to describe such divine things, and therefore they deserv'd to be writ by the Rays of the Sun upon the surface of the Heavens. You'll grant me that this is really losing a Mans self in the Clouds, and that with endeavouring to exalt his Hero, our poor Author sell and breaks his own Neck. Their Books are very ill printed, their Paper is not white, and they are very ill bound, being cover'd with Parchment or Sheep-skin Leather,

I must not forget to tell you one thing, and 'tis very material, and that is the Policy of the Spaniards, which perswades them rather to be at the charge of a hundred falle Informations, than to neglect the Opportunity of receiving one true Advice : neither the distance of the Country from whence they come, nor their Agents, are suspected by them, they will know every thing and liberally recompense those that serve them, nay they hardly tarry till the Service is accept'd, before they will reward them. You cannot believe how much advantage this Maxim has gain'd them, they have been sometimes taken for Fools, but that has not discouraged them, and in the end they always had what they intended. It is likewise true, that though they have but very flender ground to beg a favour of the King, yet provided they are not dishartened with Repulses, but pursue their first Delign with Perseverance, sooner or later they obtain what they wish for. The Ministers of State think it not suitable to the Grandeur of fo mighty a Monarch to refuse a small matter; and tho there's but little Justice in pretending to a favour which one has not deserved by some Service, yet if it is sued for without intermission, it is always obtain'd. I fee Examples of it every day.

I have not yet told you, dear Coufin, that upon my Arrival here all the Ladies did me the Honour to visit me first. It is the Custom here to prevent Strangers, when once they know they are of Quality and their good Conduct, concerning both which they are very nice. When I return d them their Visit, every one made me a Present; sometimes in one House I received a Dozen, for even the Children of sour Years old will treat you. I was presented with great Baskets of guilt Silver, adorn'd with Coral curiously wrought in Flowers; these are made at Naples and Millan: I had also amber Boxes set with Gold, ennamell'd and full of Pastrils; divers presented me with Gloves and with Silk-Stockings and Garters in abundance but these Gloves are singular, in that they are as short as the Mens, for the Women wear their Sleeves down to their Wrifts the Fingers are so long that they look as if they were nothing else, and are ridiculous: The Stockings are made of Pole, that is raw Silk; they are made to short and to little in the Foot that I have seen several Babies that they would not fit; the Garters are of a broad Ribbond, made very light and thin, like those our Peasants give at their Weddings; they are trim'd at each end with some English Thread Lace. They presented me also with several Cups of that Mineral Earth, and a thousand other things of this kind. If ever I go from hence, and make another Journey hither, it will be my turn to present a But alass! any thing pleases them, Needles, Pins, a little Ribbond, but above all, any thing made of their false Stones ravishes them with Joy; they that have so many that are right and so excellent, yet wear a prodigious quantity of these false ones, which in reality are nothing neither, but bitts of Glass sett, and just like those our Chimney-sweepers sell to our Provincials, who never faw more than their Curate and their Flock. The Ladies of the greatest Quality are loaded with these false Stones, which they buy at dear rates; and when I askt them why they were so fond of these counterfeit Diamonds, they told me it was because they could have of them as big as they defir'd. And indeed they have of them in their Pendants, as big as an Egg, and all these come to them either from France or Italy; for as I have told you, few things are made at Madrid, Idleness reigns too much there.

There's no good Painters in this City, the greatest part of those that draw, are not of this Country; they are either Flemmings, Italians or French, which come and settle here; but yet they do not grow rich, for Money does not come and move in the circle of Trade. For my part, I must needs say, I never saw less stiring. My Kinswoman receives pretty considerable Sums all in Quartes; it is Copper Money, and as nasty as our Doubles; but as bad as 'tis, yet it comes out of the Royal Treasures; it is deliver'd by Weight (for how is't possible to count such sorry stuff?) and Men bring it upon their backs in great matted Baskets; when these sort of Payments come, the whole House is employ'd for eight days together in taking an Account of these Quartes in three or four thousand Crowns, there's not a hundred Pistols, either in Gold or Silver.

They have here great numbers of Slaves, which are bought and fold at great rates, these are Moors and Turks; there are some of them worth sour or sive hundred Crowns, heretosore they had power of Life and Death over them, a Patron might have killed his Slave as he might have kill'd a Dog; but it was thought that these Barbarities did not agree with the Maxims of the Christian Religion, and now that Practice is forbid; but yet they beat them till they cripple them, without ever being call'd to account for't. It's true, there are but few Masters that are thus severe; and if a Man happen to love his female Slave. and the grants his defires the becomes immediately free. As to the other Domesticks it would be somewhat dangerous to ule them ill; they pretend for the most part, to be of as good Families as the Mafters they ferve; and if they should be abus'd they would be in a capacity to revenge themselves either by Treacherously Murdering, or Poyloning of them; there are many Examples of this, they fay, that a Man ought not to infull over them, because they are poor, that though they are reduced to ferve, yet they have not renounced their Honours and that they should forfeit it, if they should take blows from any body whatever.

The Beggars are even proud, and when they ask an Alms, it is in an imperious and domineering way; if one refuses them, it must be done civilly, in saying to them, Cavallero, Perdone, used no tanga moneda; that is, Pardon me Cavallero, I have no Money. If you give them a rough Denial, they'll begin to argue with you, and undertake to prove to you, that that you do not deserve that Estate God has blest you with, and will never let you alone; but if one speaks courteously to them, they feem well enough content and defift.

The Spaniards are naturally gentle and kind; they marry their Slaves, and if it be with another Slave, the Children they have are not free, but like their Fathers, are subject to the Patron; but if these Children marry, their Issue shall not be Slaves. And so it is, if a Woman Slave marry a Free-man, their Chidren follow the Condition of the Father. One is mighty well ferv'd by these unhappy Wretches; they are far more diligent, laborious and humble than other Servants; there are few of them that will change their Religion. I have one that is not above nine years old; the is as black as lett, and would be reckon'd in her own Country a wonderful Beauty, for her Note is quite flat, her Lips prodigioully thick, her Eyes of a white and red colour, and her Teeth admirable in Europe as well as in Africa. She understands not a word of any other Language than her own; her Name is Zayde, we have got her baptized, this young Christian has been so us'd to throw off her white Mantle, and to be quiet naked when the was expos'd to fale, that I have had much ado to hinder her from doing fo now and and t'other day, when we had a great deal of Company. I fent for her; and truly Mrs. Zayde was pleas'd to appear before them all with her little black Body as naked as fhe was born. I am resolved to have her whipt, to make her know that this sort of fashion does not please me, for there is no other way to make her understand. Those that fold her to me, told me she was a Girl of Quality, and the poor Child will come often and fall down on her Knees before me, hold her hands together, cry, and point towards her Country; I would willingly fend her thither, if the could there be a Christian; but this impossibility obliges me to keep her. I would fain undetstand her, for I believe she is witty, all her Actions shew it; she dances after her fashion, and 'tis so pleasantly, that she makes us very merry. I' make her wear white Patches, with which she is mightily taken. She is dreft as they are at Moroco, that is, with a fliort Gown almost without any plights, great Shift-sleeves of fine Cloth. strip'd with different colours, like those of our Bobemians or Gyplies; a pair of Stays which are only made of a flip of Crimfon Velvet with a gold ground, and are made fast at the sides with filver Buckles and Buttons, and a Mantle of very fine white wollen fluff, very large and long, in which she wraps her self, and with one corner of it covers her Head. This dress is handsome enough; her short Hair, which looks like Wool, is cut in several places, on each side like a Half-moon, on the Crown a Circle, and before a Heart; the cost me twenty Piffols, my Daughter hath made her Governess of her Marmofett; it is the little Monkey which the Arch-bishop of Burgos presented to her. I do assure you, that Zayde and the Marmofett are well met, and understand one another very well.

But to come to other things, here's arriv'd a Man which has been fetch'd from the farthest parts of Galicia, he is such a Saint, that he has done many Miracles, as 'tis pretended. The Marchioness de los Velez, heretosore Governess of the King, was like to dye, and she sent to have him come in all haste, but they were so long upon the Journey, that she was well again before he came. It was known what day he would arrive, and while she was then expetting him, Don Fernand de Tolleda, who is her Nephew, and had not seen her since his return from Flanders, because of her having been sick; knowing that she was then much better, happen'd to go to her House much about the the time Saint of Galicia was to be there. The Marchiones's People seeing him, and not knowing him at all, (for he had been absent several years) without considering that there were sew Men of his Age and Looks so happy as to work Miracles, concluded, at first fight, that he was the Saint a immediately they threw open the great door, and rung the Bell for the figmal, as the Marchioness had ordered them; all the Duennas and the maids came to receive him with every one a Wax-Candle in her hand; several of them fell upon their Knees, and would not let him stir till he had given them his bleffing. He thought they made a fool of him, to give him fuch a reception; he knew not whether he was bewitched, or whether he dreamt; and do what he could, he could not perswade himself that all this was real; it was to no purpose to talk to them, they minded him not at all, the noise and the crowd was so great; they brought their Beads to touch him, and those that were far of him, threw them at his Head, with a hundred Medals fasten'd to them. The most zealous began to cut his Cloak and his Cloaths, and now his fear began to be very great, left through a defire to multiply his Relicks, they did not cut him to pieces. The Marchioness de Las Veloz, who was carried between four in a great Elbow-Chair, came to meet the Holy Man : and truly when she perceived the mistake, and saw it was her Nephew, fhe fell a laughing to loud and to long, that the far exceeded the ftrength every body thought she had. When he came from her House, he came to see us, all torn, and just as the devout People had left him

I should tell you, that all is mighty private and retir'd in this Court; but here's the way and manner how some particular Persons live: In the Morning as soon as they are up, they drink Water cool'd with Ice, and presently after Chocolate: when Dinner-time is come, the Mafter fits down to Table, his Wife and Children, as I have already observ'd eat upon the Floor near the Table; this is not done out of respect, as they tell me, but the Woman cannot fit upon a Chair she is not accustomed to it; and there are several ancient Spanish Women which never fat upon one in their whole Life : they make a light meal, for they eat little flesh; the best of their food are Pigeons, Pheafants, and their Olio's which are excellent; but the greatest Lord has not brought to his Table above two Pigeons, and some very bad Ragou, full of Garlick and Pepper and after that some Fennel and a little Fruit ; when this little Dinner is over, every one in the House undress themselves, and lye down upon their Beds, upon which they lay Spanish Lea ther-Skins for coolness; at this time you shall not find a fou in the Streets; the Shops are flut, all Trade ceas'd, and it looks as if every body were dead. At two a Clock in the Winter, and at four in the Summer, they begin to dreft themselves again, gain, then eat Sweet meats, drink either some Chocolate, or waters cooled in Ice, and afterwards every body goes where they think sit; and indeed they tarry out till eleven or twelve a Clock at Night, I speak of People that live regularly. Then the Husband and Wife go to Bed, a great Table-Cloth is spread all over the Bed, and each fastens it under their Chin; the He and She Dwarfs serve up Supper, which is as frugal as the Dinner, for it is either a Peasant Hen made into a Ragou, or some Pastry business, which burns the Mouth, it is so excessively pepper d. The Lady drinks her belly full of Water, and the Gentleman very sparingly of the Wine, and when Supper is

The unmarry'd, or those who observe but few rules with their Wives, after they have been taking the Air in the Prado, where in Summer they go half naked in their Coaches; I mean when 'tis dark they get a light Supper, mount their Horses, and take a Foot-man behind them, they do this that they may not lose him : for going in the darkest Night through so many Streets very quick, how should a Foot-man be able to turn and wind. and follow his Mafter? But they are also asraid of being assaulted behind, the Footman having no other care than to look about him, is as it were the Sentinel, and ready to defend his There may be some which will do this, but most of them in such cases run away, for they are not flout. This nesturnal Ramble is upon the Ladies account, they then visit them, and to gain an Empire, they would not neglect that opportunity. They talk to them through the Lattice of their Windows, fometimes they go into their Gardens, and when they can into their Chambers. Their Paffion is so violent, that they'll look the greatest danger in the face; they'll go to the very place where the Hushand fleeps, and I have been told that they'll fee one another years together without daring to speak one word, for fear of being heard. They are ignorant in France what 'tis to love at the rate these People are said to love. And not to mention the cares, the earnest desires, the nicety, and the devoting of themselves up even to death, (for the Husband and the Relations give no quarter) that which I admire is their Fidelity and Secrefie. It is never known, that a Cavallero boafts of having receiv'd Favours from a Lady; they speak of their Mistresses with so much respect and value, as if they were their Soveraigns. And on the other hand, these Ladies never defire to oblige any other than their Gallants, they are entirely taken up with him; and although they cannot fee him in the day-time, yet they have opportunity to employ several hours about

Thout him, either in writing to, or speaking of him with some she Friend who is privy to the Intreague; or else in waiting all the day long, and looking through their Lattices to see him go by. In a word, upon all that I have been told about these Matters. I can easily believe, that Love had its Birth in Spain.

Whilst the Cavalleros are with their Mistresses their Footmen look after their Horses at some distance from the House; but there are very often unpleasant Mischances happen to them, for there being no necessary places in their Houses, all night long they throw that out of their Windows, which decency hinders me from naming to you; so that the amorous Spaniard which goes filently along the Street, is many times in a nafly condition from head to foot; and though at his coming out he was curionly perfum'd, yet he is forc'd to return as fast as he can to change his Cloths. This is one of the greatest Inconvemencies in this City, and which renders it so stinking and filthy, that in the Morning, one can hardly pass along the Streets. fay in the Morning, for the Air is here so subtile and hot, that all this naffiness is consumed before Noon. When a Horse, or any other Animal dies, they throw him into the Street where he happens to be though it were before the Pallace-Gate, and the next day you'll find him reduc'd to duft. They are perswaded that if they did not throw out their Filth and Carrion in this manner into their Streets, Madrid would not be long without the Plague, and it never is there.

But besides those ways I have now mention'd, that Gallants have to see their Mistresses, they have yet others; for the Ladies visit one another frequently, and there is nothing more easie for them than to wear a Vail, and by the back door go into a Chair, and be carry'd where they will. And this is the more practicable, because all the Women agree to keep one another Secrets inviolably, let there be what Differences there will amongst them, and let them never be so angry one against another, yet they never open their lips to make the least Discovery; their Discretion cannot be sufficiently prais'd: It is true indeed, the consequences would be more fatal if they did otherwise, since they make nothing here of murthering upon a bare Suspicion.

After this manner, the Ladies make their Visits to one another, you must not go to see your Friend when you have a mind, you must tarry till you are defired to come, and the Lady that has a mind to be visited, writes a Letter in the Morning, and invites you, you are carry'd in a Chair which is extream large every way, and that they may be the lighter, they are made only of a thin stuff hung upon a wooden frame, these fuffs, are always mixt with Gold and Silver, and are very rich; they have in them three great Glasses, and the top is made of a very thin Leather, lin'd as the reft, and it opens upwards that to one may go in and out more conveniently; to every Chair there's four Bearers, which relieves one another and a Footman carries the Hat of the foremost; for let it be what Weather it will, he must not be cover'd before his Mistress. The Lady is let as fast in her Chair, as a Diamond stone in a Ring; she either wears no Mantle or Vail then, or if the does, it has a black English Lace set on it, half an Ell deep very fine and dear; this is becoming enough: The has also a Coach with four Mules in those long Traces I have formerly mentioned, which follows foftly after the Chair, that is commonly fill'd with old Gentlemen-Ushers, and five or fix Pages, for every body has these, my Banker's Wife has two. The Ladies never take any of their Women with them; and though feveral of them are going the fame place, yet they each of them take a Chair to themselves. and do not go together in any one of their Coaches. I happen'd t'other day, to be in a ftop there was in a Street, and there came by me fifty Chairs, and as many Coaches one after another, they came out of the Dutchess De Frias, and went to the Dutchess De Uzeda's House, I'll tell you why they went thither. when I have first told you that when the Lady is come to her House whom she goes to visit, the Chairmen carry her as far as the Anti-chamber, the Stairs are made purposely very wide and low, for the greater ease, assoon as she is set down, she sends away all her People and her Coach, and appoints them what hour to come and fetch her home, which is usually between ten and eleven a Clock, for their Visits are long enough to tire the greatest Patience.

There never comes any Men where they are met, a jealous Husband would have little to do to feek his Wife among them; he would be laught at, and they would not vouchfafe to give him any other Satisfaction, than telling him, That she is where he is not. The good Women are cunning enough, and they make use of this liberty; for you must know that every House has its back doors, by which they can steal out, and never be seen. Besides this, every one has a Brother at her Sisters, a Son at her Mothers, or a Nephew at her Aunts, and this is another pretence they make use of to see their Lover. Love in this Country is very ingenious, nothing is neglected to gratise their Passion, and the Mistress meets with Fidelity; there are Intrigues that ast one's Life, and yet there has not been an hours time loss to

ecomplish t hem, all Opportunities are improv'd, and there needs no more after feeing and liking one another.

I was fome days ago at the Marchioness D' Aleannigas, she's one of the greatest and most vertuous Ladies of the Court ; difcourfing of these things, the very freely said to us, I must needs confess, that if a Cavallero should be conveniently alone with me half an hour, and did not ask me all that a Man could ask, I should refent it so briskly that I could stab him if I could. And would you grant him all the Favours he might ask you, interrupted the Marchioness De Liche, who is young and handsome? That does not follow, replied my Lady De Alcannizas, on the contrary, I have reason to believe, that I should grant him nothing at all; but then I could not reproach him with any thing, whereas if he made no attempt upon me, I should conclude he despiled me, There are few, I believe, but what are of the same Opinion in this matter.

There's one thing I find very odd, and not to look well, me thinks in a Catholick Kingdom, and that is, the tollerating of Men, that keep Mistresses so openly, without the least disguise it is very true that they are forbid by the Laws, but they value not the Laws, and only obey their own Inclinations, and yet no body offers to call them to account, or to reprove them in the leaft, These Mistresses are called Amancebades, though a Man is married, yet he must have one of these Creatures, and often the ma tural Children are brought up with the legitimate in the fight of the poor Wife, who patiently bears all this without fo much as speaking a word. It is very seldom one hears of any Differences between Husband and Wife, and yet feldomer, that they feparate as in France, Ofan infinite number of Perfons that I know here, have only feen the Princess Duella Rocea, that does not live with her Husband, but in a Convent, the Courts of Justice are not much troubled here with domestick Quarrels.

It feems extraordinary to me that a Lady who loves, and is belov'd by a Cavallero, is not jealous of his Amancebada; the looks upon her as a second Wise, and believes she cannot stand in competition with her, so that a Man has his Wife, his Amancebade, and his Mistress, this last is generally a Person of Quality; tis she that is visited in the Night, and for whom they venture their Lives

It happens sometimes that a Lady cover'd with her great plain Mantle or Vail, and not shewing any more of her Face than half an Eye, and being ordinarily dreft, because she would not be known, and having no mind to take a Chair, walks a foot to the place of Rendezvous; either her being little us'd to walk, or ve ry often, her manner and way diftinguishes her:a Cavallero follows, and begins to talk to her, uneafie to have such a Compani on which it is hard to get rid of, she addresses her self to the first she meets, and without farther discovery of her self, I conjure you, says she to him, to hinder this importunate Man to sollow me any longer, his curiofity may injure my affairs; this Request amounts to a command with a brave Spaniard, he asks him against whom the Lady complains, why he will press upon her against her mind, and if he meets with an obstinate Person, the Sword must be drawn, and sometimes they kill each other, without knowing for whom they have so exposed themselves. In the mean while, the Lady makes the best of her way, leaves them sighting together, and goes where she's expected; but the jest is, that very often this proves either to be the Husband or the Brother that afferts her Cause, and by defending her from the Pursuit of the inquisitive, gives her an Opportunity to enjoy the embraces of her Gallant.

Some time ago, a young Lady who dearly lov'd her Husband. being informed that he did not live fo regularly as he should, difguis'd her felf, put on her Vail, and standing in a Street he us'd often to pass through, she spy'd him and gave him an Opportunity to speak to her. After he had accosted her, she began to thou him; and tis commonly in this familiar way that the Women in this Country make known their Inclinations. He made a Proposal to her, which she accepted, but upon condition that he should not be defirous either to see her or know who she was he promised he would not, and so led her to a Friend of his at their parting he affur'd her, that he thought himself the happiest of Men, and that Fortune had never been so kind to him before. and then gave her a very fine Ring, and begged her to keep it for his fake. I'll keep and love it dearly, and will meet thee here again when thou wilt, fays the to him, for I had as good have thy lewels as another. When she had ended these words, she opened her Vail, and the Husband seeing 'twas his Wife, was in the greatest confusion imaginable at his Adventure; but he considered, that fince she had so well contriv'd the matter as to get out of her House to watch him, she might also find a way to play him some other trick less pleasant; and therefore to be secure of her, he appointed two Duennas constantly to look after her, and they never after left her.

It happens also sometimes, that when a Man's House is not near the Place, where by chance he meets his Mistress, he goes without Ceremony into the next he comes at, whether he is acquainted there or no, he civilly intreats the Master to let him have a Room to himself, because he has now an Opportunity to discourse with a Lady, which if he loses, he shall not have the like in a long time; this is enough to make the Master grant an Accommodation to the Gallant and his Mistress, and sometimes, I assure you, it is the very Wife of the Fool that goes away so kindly; in a word, they will venture strangely for an Opportunity of seeing each other, though but for a quarter of an hour.

I remember a French Lady, discoursing of a certain Man to one of her Friends, said, Shew me an amorous Man, and I'll shew you one ruin'd. This Maxim is verist'd here, more than in any place in the World; a Lover or a Gallant has nothing that he can call his own. It is no matter whether she either sees, or has a real occasion for a thing, 'tis sufficient if she does but barely desire it, they are never deny'd any thing, and the manner of giving it, enhaunses their Liberality. I find them nothing near so amicable as our Frenchmen, but 'tis said they know how to love at a greater rate. Besides their Behaviour is a thousand times more respectful, nay this extends so far, that when a Man, let him be of what Quality he will, presents any thing or gives a Letter to a Lady, he kneels upon one knee, and he does the same, when he receives any thing from her hand.

I faid I would tell you, why fo many Ladies went to the Dutchess of D' Uzeda's, she is very amiable, and Daughter to the Duke D' Offone, her Husband has had a Quarrel with the Prince De Stillano, about a Lady which they both love; they drew their Swords, and 'tis like to be an ill bufiness. The King has caused them to be arrested, that is, they are not made Prisoners, but he has confin'd them to their Houses; unless they privately go abroad in the Night to pursue their usual amorous Pleasures, And that which is strange, the poor Wife must not set her foot out of door as long as her Husband is under these Confinements, though it is almost constantly for some piece of Infidelity he is guilty of towards her, And it is the same also, if they be banisht, or fent to remain upon some of their own Estates in the Country, which frequently happens. In all the time of their Absence, their Wives keep house without so much as once going abroad. I have been told, that the Dutchess D'Ossone, was a Prisoner after this manner for above two Years; this is the Custom, but it makes ones Life very dull and tedious.

But 'tis not only the Spanish Ladies, who are so tir'd and uncase, here, the French find but little diversion: We are in a few days to go to Arranjues and Tolledo to kiss the Queen Mothers hand; I'll write you, dear Cousin, the particulars of that small Journey, and I wish with all my Soul I were in a condition to give you more effential marks of my Affection.

DY my last Letter, I told you, Dear Coufin, that we were to kis the Oueen Mother's Hand : I have had this Honour. but before I conduct you thither, give me leave to tell you of fomething elfe. I would not go from Madrid till I had feen the Entry of the Marquis De Villars, he made it on Horseback which is the Custom here, and if a Man be handsome, it is very advantagious for him t when the Venetian Embafiador made his, it was happy for him that he was not in his Coach: he had one that was worth twelve thousand Crowns, which in going from his House was overturn'd, and as it was in Winter. the Maree (which is that nafty black dirt that flands in great puddles in the Streets, and through which a Horse goes up to his Girts) fo spoil'd the Velvet with a Gold ground, and the rich Embroidery it was let off with, that it could never lerve again. I thought it strange that for such usual Sights as as these Entries are, the Ladies should all be in their Balconies, in their rich Apparel, and with the same earnestness as if it was to see the greatest King upon earth; but they have so little liberty, that they are glad to embrace all occasions to shew themselves; and as their Lovers and Gallants hardly ever speak to them, so they take care to place their Coaches as near their Miftreffes Balcomy as they can, that so they may the more easily discourse with them by their Eyes and their Fingers; this is a Practice that is very useful to them for the understanding one anothers Minds, and they do it more readily than with their Voice, this filent Language feems to me very difficult unlefs one were long us'd to it; but they are early acquainted with it, about two days fince, I saw a Girl of about fix years old, and a Boy of the same Age, which understood by this way to tell one another a thousand pretty things. Don Frederick de Cardonna, who obferv'd them as well as I, but understood them far better, explained to me every thing they faid; and if he did not add to the Discourse of these two Children, one must need confess, that in this Country, they are born for Love and Courtship.

The Marchioness De Palacio, the Mother of Don Fernand de Tolleda, is one of my Kinswoman's best Friends; the has a fine House calld Igarica, upon the Banks of Xanama, and though this this Lady is now very old, yet she never was there, notwithstanding it is but eight leagues from Madrid. It is not lookt upon in this Country to be according to Grandeur to go visit their Lands, except they lie in some Principality or some City. and then they call them by the Name of their State. I chie this Lady for her Carelefnels, and my Kinfwoman engag'd her to make one in the Company of her Daughter Donna Mariguita who is a little Woman, pale, fat and fair , thefe three Qualities are equally rare here, and the's admir'd by every body that les her; the young Marchioness De la Rosa, would also be of our Company, her Husband, with Don Fernand de Tolleda, Don Sanche, Sarmiento, and Esteve de Cariaval, went on Horseback Don Frederick de Cardonna, would have not fail'd of being there too, had not the Archbishop of Burgos writ him to come to him in all hafte : when he told it me, I defir'd him to go fee the fair Marchionels De los Rios alas Hueleas. I gave him a Letter for her, in which I taxt her with her filence, I and defir'd to know particularly how all things went. We let forward in two Coaches the fixth of August, at ten a Clock at Night, in the neft Weather that could be; the Heats were fo excellive that unless one would venture their Lives, it was impossible to travel in the day-time, but the Nights are cool, and the Coache are in the Summer all open; the fides of the Coach were turn ed up quite round, with fine large Holland Curtains, trimid with fine English Bone-lace, and ty'd with knots of colourd Ribbon, and as they often change them, they look very nest We went fo swift, that I was almost dead with fear least some thing about our Coach should break; for it is certain, that we might have been all kill'd a hundred times over, before the Coachman would have known any thing of the matter, I fand they run for to make amends for their flow going in Madrid for even the Foot-pace of the Mules is too quick there, because of the ill pavement, the holes, the dirt in Winter, and the duft in Summer, with which the Streets are extreamly troubled. The Marchioness De Palacios wore a little Hat, trim'd with Feather, according to the mode of the Spanish Ladies when they go into the Country; and the Marchioness De la Rosa lookt very pretty in her fhort clofe-coat, strait sleeves, and her other Ornament, upon fight of which, we cried out, that we thought her My Bizzarra, and Muy de Gala, that is, very gallant and very fplen did. from

It was very odd methinks that these Ladies should oblige a in three feveral Places upon the Road to alight out of ou Coach, and hear the Marchioness de la Rosa's two Gentlemen

play npon the Guittar, whom it feems they brought on purpole, and it was pretty comical to fee these Blades gallop with heir Guittars hanging behind their Backs. This ordinary confort of Musick was nevertheless ravishing to them, and they were extreamly charm'd, with the pleasantness of the Country in o fine a Night. Indeed, I never faw Women fo infinitely fatisfy'd. We arrived at Arranjues about five a Clock in the Morning, and I was amaz'd at its wonderful Situation; half a League on this side the Tagus we pass'd over a wodden Bridge, which is made to thut up; and after that we came into some Walks of Elme and Lyme Trees, which were so high, green and hady, that the heat of the Sun is never felt. It is an extraordinary thing to find fo near Madrid, Trees fo perfect in their kind, for the Soyl is very barren, and they will not grow there; out yet near Arranjues, one cannot perceive this defect I speak of, for all along the Walks, and hear the Trees, there are litle Pits and Trenches made, into which the Water of Tagus uns and moistens the roots of the Trees. These Avenues are folong, that when one is in the middle, one cannot fee to the nd of em. Several Alleys come into these, and every way make the perfect figure of a Star. People walk on the Banks of the Tagus and Xumara, which are two famous Rivers that environ the Island in which Arranjues stands, and which supplies it with Water, and extreamly contributes to its beautifulress. To speak truly, I never faw a more delightful place; I must confess the Gardens are too close, and several of their Aleys too narrow, but yet it ravishes one to walk there; and at our coming into them, I fancy'd my felf in some enchanted Palace. The Morning was cool, every where the Birds made weet Melody, and the Waters a pleasant murmuring noise, the Trees and Hedges were loaden with excellent Fruit, and the Parteries were cover'd with most odoriserent Flowers, and enjoy'd all this in most pleasant Company. We had an Order from Don John to be lodg'd in the Castle, so that the Alcade received us with great Civility, and was very careful to shew us every thing that was the most remarkable. The Fountains are in that number, and there are so very many of them, that it is impossible to pass through an Alley, to go into an Arbor, or pon a Patere or Terrals without taking notice of five or fix with brasen Statues, and marble Basins: The Spouts throw up heir Water to a vaft height, they are not fed from Springs, but from the Tagus. Amongst others, I'll give you an account of the Fountain of Diana; It stands upon an afcent, from whence is feen at a great distance; the Goddess is in the midst, environ d

viron'd with Bucks, Does, and Dogs, and every one of ther spouts out Water. A little lower is a circle of Myrrh, cut i several fashions, and little cupids peeping out half way, and through the Water against those Animals which stand about the Fountain. The Mountain of Parnassus raises up its head in the midst of a great Pond, with Apollo, the Muses, Pagassius Horse, and a fall of Water which represents the River of Hell con. Out of a Rock there issues out a thousand several Spout of Water, some lanching out, others winding in and out like Serpent upon the Surface of the Pond; some gliding genth and others, either falling like Flowers in the Air, or elfe like The Fountain of Ganymedes is also very pretty, this bear tiful Child fitting upon Jupiter's Eagle, seems frighted within flight; the Bird fits on the top of a Pillar with its Wing spread; he throws out the Water by his Beak and his Tallon the Fountain of Mars is near this: That of the Harpyes is fin they are placed upon very high Marble Pillars; at the four or ners they throw out Water every way, they feem to have mind to drown a little Youth who fits in the middle of the Fountain, picking a Thorn out of his Foot. But the most ple fant of all is, the Fountain of Love; this little God seems to it with his Body all full of Darts, from every one of which com out a Spout of Water. The three Graces fit at the Feet of the God of Love; but that which is most extraordinary, is the Wate which falls from four high Trees like Fountains, whose noise very delightful and furprizing, it not being natural for Water to come out of Trees.

I should be afraid to tire you, did I undertake to tell yout vast number of Cataracts, Falls, and Fountains of Water which I have feen here, I will only in general affure you, that it is Place worthy of the curiofity and attention of every body. eight a Clock the Sun began to be too hot, and some went to the House, which comes far short of that Beauty it show have, justly to answer all the other things; and when the Kin goes there, those that attend him are so ill accommodated wit Lodging, that either he must be contented to go there in a haste, and keep his Court a little, or else go as far as Tolledo If we had not taken care before hand for Provisions, even to a Bread, I am confident we had met with none, unless the Aleas ay to would have given us some of his. And by the way I'll inform I to you the difference there's between the Alease and Alease, the sall so you may not confound them; the first signifies the Gove hid and of a Castle or Place, and the other a Serjeant. Although it.

the most curious Pictures are at the Escurial, yet I found some excellent ones in the King's Apartment at Arranjues; it is surnish according to the Season we are now in, that is to say, the walls are all white, have only a Matt that is very fine and thin the bout three foot deep with some Looking-Glasses and Pictures.

In this Building there are divers little Courts, which takes from the grace of it. We eat our Breakfast all together, and they out perswade me to eat some of a Fruit they call Pimento, which to sas long as one's finger, but as hot as Pepper, the least bit of the which puts ones Mouth in a Flame, they let it lie steering in like vinegar and Salt, to get out the Virtue: I his Fruit is brought ato Spain growing upon a Plant; and I never faw any of it in ther Countrys where I have been. We had an Olio, fome lagous made of of cold Partridges with Oyl, Canary Wine, fat fullet, and Pigeons which are excellent here, and also several orts of Fruit, which was extraordinary fair. When this Repast, hich was worth a Dinner, was ended, we went to Bed, and ent not a walking till about seven a Clock in the Evening. he Charms of this Place were as new to me as if I had not feen hem in the Morning, but particularly, I still admir'd the Sitution, which indeed ravishes, on what side soever one turns the lyes. The King is there, with half a dozen of his Guards, in reat fafety, because there's no getting at him but over Bridges. hich are all drawn up, and the Xamara, which in this Place, wells the Waters of Tagas, fortifies Aranjues. After we had all with till ten a Clock at Night, we came back into a great Hall, wed with Marble, and supported with Pillars of the same It. as all enlightned with divers brancht Candlesticks, and Don steve de Carvajal had privately got thither several Musicians, hich were a pleasant fort of a surprize to us, at least the Spa-Ladies and my Kinfwoman were mightily delighted with titlem. For my part, I thought they fung too much in the broat, and Divisions and Shakes were so long, that they were dious; not but that their Voices are good, but their manner finging is not good, and generally the greatest part in Spain, onot fing as they do in France and Italy. When Supper was one, we went to the great Canal, where there's a small Galone, we went to the great Canai, which we went aboard her, and tarry'd till man Clock in the Morning, and then we let forward on our n t leas ay to Tolleda.

I took notice when we came out of Arranjues, that the Ground the sall Heath and Ling, and yet the Air was perfum'd with ild and mother Tyme, with which these Plains were all copus rd. They told me there were a great many Rabits, Stags,

Does, and Fallow Deer, but it was not then their time to appear. Our Conversation was for sometime general, and tor two Leagues together from Arranjues, I did not speak one word to Don Fernand, thô he sat just close by me; But being willing to imploy the time, in thoroughly informing my self about all the Particulars of the cruel Inquisition, which he had promis'd to acquaint me with, I desir'd him to let me know

The Inquisition, says he, has not been known in Europe, but since the beginning of the Thirteenth Century. Before that time, the Bishops and Civil Magistrates, enquired after Hereticks, and either condemn'd them to Banishment, or to the Forseiture of their Goods and Estates, or else, to some other Penalties, which never almost extended to Death: But the vast number of Heresies which appear'd towards the end of the Twelsth Age, caus'd that Tribunal to be Establish'd: The Post sent several Religious Persons to the Catholick Princes and Bishops, to exhort them, to take an extraordinary care, in the Extirpation of Heresies, and to bring obstinate Hereticks to punishments: and thus things continued till the Year 1250

In the Year 1251. Innocent IV. Authoriz'd the Dominical Fryars, with the affiffance of the Bishops, to take Cognizance of these fort of Crimes. Clement the IV. confirm'd these Tribunals in the Year 1265. Afterward, there were several Counterested in Italy, and in the Kingdoms which were dependent of the Crown of Arragon, till such time, that the Inquisite was establish'd in the Kingdoms of Castille, in the Reign of Fadinand and Isabel, and after that in Portugal, by King Johnth

III. in the Year 1557.

To that time the Inquisitors had a limited Power, and it we often contested by the Bishops, to whom the Cognizance of Heretical Crimes belong'd. According to the Canons, it we contrary to the Rules of the Church, for Priests to sentence an Criminals to Death, much more for those Crimes, which the Civil Laws often pnnish'd, with far less severe Penalties: But ancient Right yielding to new Power, the Dominican Fryand the Popes Bulls have been for these two Ages, in Possession this extraordinary Jurisdiction; from which the Bishops have been excluded, the Inquisitors now only wanted the Authori of the Prince, to enable them to execute their Sentences. Before Isabella of Castille came to the Crown, the Dominican, so the Torquemada, her Confessor, and afterward Cardinal, man her promise him to persecute all Insidels, and Hereticks, as so as it should be in her Power to do so. She prevail'd over Redinal dinand her Husband to obtain, in the Year 1482. Balls from Pope Sixtus the IV. to conflitute an Inquifitor General, over the Kingdoms of Arragon and Valentia, for these two Kingdoms were his Fee held in Capite : and it is to be noted, that Ferdinand disposed of the Places in his Estates, and Isabel of these that were in hers: but the Queen got this Place for Torquemada. Afterwards the Pope extended his Jurisdiction over all the States and Countries of the Catholick Kings, and then Ferdinand and Isabel establisht a Supream Council of the Inquisition, of which they made him President: It is compos'd of an Inquisitor-Genetal, (who is nominated by the King of Spain, and confirm'd by the Pope) or five Counsellors, whereof one is to be a Dominican, by a Priviledge granted to this Order, in the Year 1616. by Philip the III. Of a Procurator, two Secretaries of the King's Chamber, two Secretaries of the Council, an Alguazil Mayor, a Receiver, two Reporters, and two Qualificators, and Confulters. The Number of the Familiars and small Officers is very great, because all that belong to the Inquisition being not subject to or tryable by any other Jurisdiction, shelter themselves from the ordinary Courts of Justice.

The Supream Council hath a full and fole Authority over the other Inquisitions, which cannot perform any Auto or Execution, without leave from the Great and General Inquisitor: The particular Inquisitors are those of Sevile, Tolleda, Grenada, Cordua, Cuenca, Vailladolid, Marcia, Derena, Logronno, St. James, Saragoffa, Valentia, Barcelona, Majorque, Sardaigna, Palermo, Canaries, Mexico, Cartagena, and Lima.

Every one of these Inquisitions is compos'd of three Inquisitors. three Secretaries, one Alguazil Mayor, and of three Receivers

Qualificators and Confulters.

All Persons that take any of these Employments upon them are oblig'd to make out their Proofs De causa Limpia, that is, that their Family is not stain'd with any thing of Judailm, or Herefie, and that they are Catholicks from the beginning.

The Proceedings of this Tribunal are very unufual. A man is Arrested and lies in Prison, without knowing the Crime he is accused of, or the Witnesses which depose against him: He cannot come out thence, unless he will own the Fault, of which often he is not guilty, and which the defire of Liberty forces him to confess, for they do not put one to death for the first time; but then the Family is markt for infamy, and this first Judgment makes the Persons uncapable of any Employment.

There's no confronting of Witnefles, nor any means for a Man to defend himself, because this Tribunal above all things affects affect an inviolable Secrefie. It proceeds against all Heritichs, but chiefly against Judaizing Christians, and secret Mahomitans, of whom the Expulsion of Jews and Moors by Ferdinand and Isabel, has fill'd all Spain.

The severity of this Court was so excessive, that the Inquifiter Torquemada try'd above a hundred thousand Persons, of which six thousand were condemned to be Burnt in the compass of Fourteen Years.

It is pretended that the fight of so many Criminals condemn'd to so terrible a Death, without any regard either to their Sex or Quality, confirms and keeps the People in the Romish Religion, and that 'tis the Inquisitor alone, that has hindred the wickedest Heresies from spreading themselves in Spain, even in that time when all Europe besides was intected with them. For this reason, the Kings have given such Arbitrary Authority to this-Tribunal, which is call'd the Tribunal of the Holy Office.

The general Acts of the Inquisition, which by the greatest part of Europe, are lookt upon, only as a bare Execution of Criminals, amongst the Spaniards, are esteem'd a Religious Ceremony, by which his Catholick Majesty gives publick proofs of his Zeal for Religion. And therefore, are call'd by 'em Autos de Fe, Asts of Faith; commonly they are perform'd either at the Accession of the Kings to the Crown, or at their coming to Age, that so they may be the more Authentick: The last was in the Year 1632. and there is one now making ready for the King's Marriage. As there has not been one of a long time, so there are great preparations making to render this as Solemn and as Magnisicent as 'tis possible for those sorts of Ceremonies to be. One of the Counsellors of the Inquisition has already drawn a Project of it, which he has shew'd me: Here's the Contents of it.

In the great Place at Madrid, there shall be a Theater erected fifty Foot long; It shall be rais'd as high as the Balcony defign'd for the King, and no higher.

On the right-side of the King's Balcony, quite cross the Theater, there shall be rais'd an Amphitheater, of twenty sive or thirty Steps, design'd for the Council of the Inquisition, and the other Councils of Spain, on the uppermost of which shall be placed the Chairs under a Canopy, for the General Inquisitor a great deal higher then the King's Balcony. On the left of the Theater and the King's Balcony, there shall be another Amphitheater as big as the first, upon which the Criminals shall be placed.

In

In the middle of the great Theater, there shall be rais'd another very little one, on which shall be made two Cages, where the Criminals shall be kept while their Sentence is reading.

There shall be likewise placed upon the great Theater, three Chairs for the Readers of the Judgment, and for the Preacher, before whom there shall be an Altar erected.

The Places for their Catholick Majesties shall be so ordered, that the Queen shall be on the lest hand of the King, and on the right of the Queen-Mother. All the Queen's Ladies of Honour, shall take up the rest of the length every way of the same Balcony; there shall be other Balconies prepared for the Ambassadors, Lords and Ladies of the Court, and Scassols for the People.

The Ceremony shall begin by a Procession from St. Maries Church. A hundred Charcoal-men arm'd with Pikes and Muskets, shall march before, because they provide the Wood, which is to burn those that are condemned to the Fire. Next them shall follow the Dominicans with a white Cross carry'd before them; the Duke de Medina Celi shall carry the Standard of the Inquisition, according to a Priviledge that's Hereditary to his Family: This Standard is of red Damask, on one side of it, is represented a naked Sword, in a Crown of Lawrel, and on the other the Arms of Spain.

After that, shall be carry'da green Cross, wrapt about with black Crape: and after it shall march several Grandees and other Persons of Quality of the Inquisition, cover'd with Cloaks, that have black and white Crosses upon them, embroidered with Gold-Thred. The march shall be brought up by fifty Halberdiers or Guards to the Inquisition, cloathed in black and white, and commanded by the Marquis De Pouar, Hereditary Protector of the Inquisition of the Kingdom of Tolleda.

After the Procession has in this order past by the Pallais, it shall come to the great Place; the Standart and the green Cross shall be fixt upon the Altar, and the Dominicans only, shall remain upon the Theater, and spend part of the Night in Singing Psalms, and as soon as day breaks, they shall celebrate several Masses upon the Altar.

The King, the Queen and the Queen-Mother, and all the Ladies must be in their Balconies about seven a Clock in the Morning; at eight, the Procession shall begin to march, as it did the day before, by the company of Charcoal-men, who shall place themselves on the left hand of the King's Balcony, the right shall be for his Guards. Afterwards, several Men shall bear certain Past-board Effiges as big as Life; some of them representing those that'dy'd in Prison, whose Bones shall also be carry'd in Coffers with Flames painted round them, and the rest shall represent those who have escap'd and who have been condemn'd for contumacy: These Figures shall be placed at one end of the Theater. After that, their Sentence shall be read, and they shall be executed. But I should tell ye, added he, That the Supream Council of the Inquisition is more absolute than all the others: It is believ'd that the King himself has not Power to release those which shall be accus'd before it, because this Tribunal acknowledges the Pope only to be aboveit, and that there has been a time, when upon some occasions the Ring's Power, was found too weak to contend with that of the Inquisition. Don Diego Sarmiento is Inquisitor General; he is a mighty honest and good Man; and is about threescore Years of age : The King nominates the President of the Inquisition, and his Holiness confirms him; But as for the Inquisitors, the President proposes them to the King, and after he has approv'd of them, he then puts them in their Places.

This Tribunal takes Cognizance of every thing concerning the Faith, and it is absolutely invested both with the Pope's and the King's Authority, there's no appealing from its Judgment; and the two and twenty Tribunals of the Inquisition, which are in all the Estates of Spain, and which depend upon this at Madrid, every Month render an Account to it, of their Finances, and Revenues, and every Year of their Causes and Criminals: But those of the Indies and the other distant Places, only give an Account at the end of every Year. Places of these inferior Tribunals, they are fill'd by the General Inquifitors, with the Approbation of the Counsellors. It would be pretty difficult to be able precisely to reckon up the number of the Officers, which belong to the Inquisition; for in Spain alone, there's above two and twenty thousand Familiars of the Holy Office. They are call'd by this Name, because they are as 'twere Spies, scattered up and down every where, which are continually giving true or false Information to the Inquisition, upon which those are seized and taken up, which they accuse.

Whilst with the greatest Attention I was listening to Don Fernand, the Marchioness De Palacios interrupted us, to let us know that we were come near Tolleda, and that certain old Ruines of an ancient Castle which we saw upon our lest hand, were those of an enchanted Palace. I seem'd to Don Fernand to doubt of what she affirm'd, upon which he said, you may think think what you please; but certain it is, that there's for it a very ancient Tradition in this Country; and moreover, they pretend that there is a Cave shut up, and a Prophesic which threaten'd Spain with the greatest Miseries, when ever this Cave was open'd: Every body terrify'd with this threat, had no mind to draw upon themselves the sad Effects, so that this place did for several Ages remain very close. But Don Rodigue, the King, less credulous, or more curious, caus'd it to be open'd, upon which there were heard most terrible Noises : eevery body thought that the very Elements themselves were going into confusion, there was so violent a Tempest : This did not hinder him from going into it, where by light of feveral Flamboys, he faw the Figures of divers Men, whose Cloaths and Arms were very strange: There was one held a Copper Blade in his hand, and upon it was writ in Arabick, that the Time drew near, for the Diffolation of Spain, and that the Persons, whose Statues were there, would ere long come. I never was in any place, faid I fmiling, where they rely'd To much on fabulous Tales, as they do in Spain: Says rather, replied he, that there never was any Woman so incredulous as you; and in telling you this Story, I did not think I should after your Judgment; But as much as one can be affured of a thing by the Testimony of Men, this Story is credible.

It was now light enough, very plainly to observe all the Charms of the Country. We past the Tagus over a very great and fine Bridge, of which I had heard, and a little after discover'd Tolleda all surrounded with Hills and Rocks, which command it; There are very neat Houses built amongst those Hills, defign'd for the pleasure of Solitude : The Arch billion of Tolleda has one there, whether he goes often : The City flands upon the Rock, the unevenness of which in divers places contributes to make it high and low; the streets are narrow, ill pav'd and troublesome, which is the reason, that all the People of Quality go there, either in Chairs or Litters: And as, we were in a Coach, we took up our Quarters in the Placa Mayor, because that is only the part to which one can pass with a Coach; as foon as we were arriv'd, we alight at the Hospital of Foira, which stands in the Suburbs, whose Building confists of three Sides, within which is a great fquare Court, and the Church makes up the fourth fide, and there we heard Mals : This Hospital was built by an Arch-bishop of Tolleda, whose Monument and Statue in Marble are in the midft of the body of the Church: The Walls of the City were rebuilt by the Moors; on the Sides stands a great many little Towers, which heretoberetofore ferv'd to defend it : And it would be a ftrong Place. being almost encompast with the Tagus, and having extream deep Ditches, did not the adjacent Hills command it, from whence it were case to batter it down. It was not eight a Clock when we got thither; and we would fpend the rest of the Morning in seeing the Church, which as 'tis said, is the finest in Europe: The Spaniards call it Holy, whether 'tis upon the Account of the Relicks which are there, or for some other reason which they did not tell me, I know not: If it was as long and as high as 'tis broad, it would be much better. It is beautify'd with divers Chappels as big as Churches; they all Thine with Gold and Paintings; the chief of which are those of the Virgin, St. James, St. Martin, Cardinal Sandonal and the Connestable De Luna. In the Quire, I saw a Niche, or hollow place, from whence 'tis pretended there iffued out for feveral days together, a Spring of Water with which the Soldiers and Citizens quencht their thirst in the time they maintain'd the Sieges against the Moors, when they were half dead with thirst. For without digreffing from my subject, I must tell you, that in the City there is not so much as a Well or a Spring, and that they fetch all their Water from the Tagus, which is so very troublesome, that one would wonder how Tolleda comes to be fo full of People as 'tis. Near the entrance into the Church, there's a Marble Pillar, which they Reverence, because the Holy Virgin appear'd upon't to St. Alphonfus. It is enclose'd with an fron Gate, and through a little Window they kifs it, and upon it is writ. Adorabimus in loco ubi fleterunt pedes ejus. Between every Canons Seat there is a Marble Pillar, and the Sculpture of the Church is fine and curioufly wrought. I was amaz'd when I faw the Treasury. There must be thirty Men to carry the Tabernacle upon Corpus Christi day. It is made of Silver guilt, and there is exquifitely wrought upon't feveral Spires of Steeples, with abundance of Angels and Cherubins . within this, there's also another of Massy-gold, and such a vast quantity of precious Stones that their value is inestimable; the Chalacies, the Patins and the Pyxes are no less beautiful: Indeed, every thing thines there, with great Diamonds and Oriental Pearls; the Sun, where the Holy Sacrament is kept, the Crowns and Robes of the Virgin are the most splendid things, that I ever faw in my days. But indeed this Archbishoprick is fo very rich, that it is but just every thing should be answerable to it. I have told you, dear Coufin, that the Archbishop of Burgos inform'd me, that the Bishoprick of Tolleda had three hundred and Fifty thousand Crowns a Year. I must now add that that the Revenue of the Church it felf, is a Hundred thousand Crowns. Forty Canons, which have every one a thousand Crowns; the Grand Arch-deacon, Forty thousand, three Arch-deacons, the first of which has fifteen thousand, the second twelve thousand, and the third ten thousand, and the Dean ten thousand Crowns a Year.

There is besides, an infinite number of Chaplains, Clarks of the Chappel, and other Persons, to whom daily allowances are given.

There is the Chaplain Mayor of the Chapel de los Rios, who enjoys twelve thousand Crowns a year, and fix others that are under him, have a thousand Crowns per Annum.

After we had spent a great deal of time in considering the fine things with which this Court was fill'd, we refolv'd to return to our Inn, where we had left our Coach; and just when we were going away, there came to us an Almoner and a Gentleman that belong'd to Cardinal Porto Carrero, who fent them to complement us, and to affure us that by no means we must lodge any where else than at the Arch bishops Palace. They chiefly address'd themselves to the Marchioness de Palacios who was near a kin to him, and who earnestly desir'd us to go thither : We excus'd our selves upon our being in such Disorder, not having flept that Night, and being in an undress . She order'd her Son to go to the Cardinal, and to beg him to accept our excuses. Don Fernand return'd in a moment, attended with abundance of Pages, some of which brought Umbrellos of Gold and Silver Brocado. He told us that his Eminence mightily defired we would go to his House, and that he had shew'd so much concern at our refusal, that indeed he had promis'd to bring us; and thereupon he commanded them to bring Umbrellos to defend us from the Sun, and that they had water'd the place which we were to crofs from the Church to the Palace. And immediately we fpy'd two Mules drawing a little Cart, in which there was a Tub full of Water; and we were told that as oft as the Cardinal was to come to the Church, it was the Custom to water the way.

The Arch-bishops Palace is very ancient and large; most richly furnish'd, and every way suitable to the Person that possesses it. We were conducted into a very sine Apartment, where immediately they brought us Chocolate, and afterwards, all sorts of Fruits, Wine, Water and other Liquors cool'd with Ice. We were so sleepy, that after we had eat a little, we begg'd the Marchionness de Palacios to see the Cardinal, and to excuse us to him, if we defer'd giving our selves that honour, for that we were not able any longer to live without fleen. And indeed, the young Marchionels de la Roje, my Kinfwoman and my felf, chole to go to bed, and in the Evening, we dreft our felves to fee the Queen-Mather. The Marchionels de Palacios, who had always been extreamly devoted to her. went to the Alcacar, which is the Name of the Caffle, and made her a vifit whilft we flept ; fo that she told her, she would give us Audience at eight a Glock in the Evening, we that was the first time I was dreft according to the Spanish Mode. I do not think there's a more troublesome dress; ones Shoulders must be so squeez'd, that it hurts one; there's no lifting up ones Arm, hardly can you get it into the Sleeve. I had on a Fardingal of a dreadful bigness, (for one must wear that in the Queen's Presence I know not what to do with my felf with this strange invention; there's no fitting down in it, and I believe if I flould wear it all my Life, I should never be reconcille to it. My Head was dreft after the Melene fashion, that is, the Hair all foread over the Neck, and ty'd at the end with Tome Non-pareil Ribbon, this is a great deal hotter than a Patine; so that being now in the Month of August, and in Spain, you may eaftly guess how I pass away my time. But this being a Ceremonial Dress of the Head, there was nothing to be omitted upon fuch an occasion; besides. I wore their Patins which are fitter to break ones Neck, than to walk with. When we were all in a Condition to appear, for my Kinswoman and my Daughter where both also dreft after the Spanish fashion, we were led into a Chamber of State, where the Cardinal came to fee us; his Name is Don Luis Porto Carrero, he may be about two and forty years old, he's very civil, is of a fiveet complaifant Temper, and hath well learnt the polite Breeding of the Court of Rome: He flay'd an hour with us, and afterwards there was ferv'd up to us a very plentiful Meal; but every thing was so full of Amber, that I dever tafted any Sawces so rich, and less pleasant. "I fancy'd my felf at this Table, like Tantalus, in the midft of Victuals, and yet starv'd with hunger, because I could not eat; for either all the Meat was perfum'd, or elfe full of Saffron, Garlick, Onion, Pepper and Spices: but with fearching about, I found fome Jellies and white Meats, which were admirable, and with which I fav'd my felf harmlefs. There were also brought to Table a Ham of Bacon, which came from the Frontiers of Portugal, and which is better than either those they boast so much of at Bayonn, or those of Ments: but it was spread all over with certain little Comfits, which in France we call Non-pariel, the Sugar of which melted in the Fat ;

Fat!; it was drawn full of Limon-peel, which abated much of its goodness. The Fruit was the best and the pleasantest thing one can see, for whole Trees, with their Fruit were leed over with Sugar after the Italian way; you'll easily believe the Trees were not very big. There were Orange Trees thus order d, with little artificial Birds fastned in them. There were likewise Cherry Trees, Rasberry and Goseberry Bushes, and others set in little Cases of Silver.

We did not fit long at Table, because the hour for seeing the Oucen was near; we were carry'd thither in Chairs, though it is a pretty diffrance, and very much up Hill; for the Alcacar is built upon a Rock of a Prodigious height, and the Prospect is admirable. Before the Gate there is a very wide Place, afterwards one comes into a Court an hundred and fixty foot long, and an hundred and thirty broad, adorn'd with two rows of Piazza's, ten rows of the Pillars which made the length, were all of one entire Stone : and the breadth had eight rows of Pillars, and this made a fine show. But that which pleases much better, is the Stair-case at the bottom of the Court, which is are bundred and thirty foot wide, like the Court. After one has gone up some steps it parts in two, and to speak the Truth, I believe tis one of the fairest in Europe. We went through a great Gallery, and vast Apartments, but met in them so few People, that it did not look as if one could have met with the Queen-mother of Spain there; the was in a great Hall, whose Windows were all open, and which had a Prospect to the Valleys, and the River. The Hangings, Cushions, Carpets and Canopy were all of gray Cloth; the Queen was standing and leaning upon a Balcony, having in her hand a great pair of Beads. When the faw us, the turn'd towards us, and received us with a Countenance merry enough. We had the Honour to kifs her Hand, which is little, lean and white : She is very pale, her Complexion pure, her Face a little long and flat, her Looks are agreeable, and her Stature is of a middle fize; the was dreft as all the Widows in Spain are, that is, like a Nun, without fo much as one Hair appearing; and there are many, (though the's not of that number) that cause all their Hair to be cut off when they lofe their Husbands, for a greater expression of their Grief. I observ'd that her Gown was tuck'd up quite round, that so it might be let down as it wears out; yet I do not believe the practices this, but fuch is the fathion of the Country. She ask'd me how long I had been come from France, and I gave her an account; the enquir'd if they discours'd then of a Marriage between her Son and Mademoifelle & Orleance, and

I told her no; then she said she would show me her Picture which was drawn from that the King her Son had, and she bid one of her Ladies, who was an old Duenna, and very ugly, bring it. It was drawn in water Colours, in the bigness of ones hand, in a Box cover'd with black Sattin, and lin'd with green Velvet. Do you find, says she, that it is like her? I assured her that there were not any of her Features; for indeed it seem'd to squint, the Face was awry, and nothing could less resemble a Princess so perfect as Madamosselle. She ask'd me whether she was more or less handsome than this Picture. I told her, that she was handsomer beyond comparison. The fur'd her that there were not any of her Features; for indeed it feem'd to fquint, the Face was awry, and nothing could less resemble a Princess so perfect as Madamoifelle. She ask'd me whether the was more or less handfome than this Picture. I told her, that the was handfomer beyond comparison. The King my Son then, reply'd fhe, will be pleafantly cheated, for he believes this Picture is just like her, and no body can be better fatisfied than he is with her. For my part, her Eyes that look asken were troublesome to me ; but to comfort my self, I considered that the had a great there of Wit, and divers other good Qualities. Do not you remember, fays the, to the Marchionness de Palacios, to have feen my Picture in the late King's Chamber ? Tes Madam, an-Iwer'd the Marchioness, and very well remember also, that as soon as we law your Majesty, we all wondred extreamly, why the Painter would do you so much wrong, that's what I would have said to you, reply'd the, for when I arriv'd here, and cast my Eyes upon that Picture which they faid was made for me, I in vaintry'd to believe it, but I could not do't. A little she Dwarf, but thick as a Tun, and no taller than a good big Mushroom, cloth'd all in Gold and Silver Brocade, with long Hair hanging down to her Feet, came in, and kneeling before the Queen, ask'd her if the would please to have Supper; upon which we offered to withdraw, but the told us, we might follow her, and the went into a Parlour all of Marble, the fat down to Table all alone, and we all stood round her. Her Maids of Honour, with the Camera Mayor, who look'd very fad, came to wait on her. I faw fome of them, which methinks were very handsome; they talkt to the Marchioness de Palacios, and told her, that they were horribly tyr'd with that fort of Life, and that they liv'd at Tolleda, as if they were in a Defart. These were call'u Damas de Pa-

Quality, and neither wear Cloak nor Sword.

There were several Dishes brought before the Queen, the first were Melons cool'd with Ice, and some Sallets and Milk, of which she eat plentifully before she touch'd any of the Flesh, which look'd ill enough. She does not want a Stomach, and she drank a little Wine pure, saying that was to digest her Fruit:

lecio, and they wear Patins; but for the little Menines, they wear Shooes-quite flat; the Menines are Children of the highest

When the call'd for Drink, the first Menine brought her Cup cover'd npon a Salvar, and kneeling gave it to the Camarera. who also kneel'd when the Queen took it from her hands ; and on the other fide, a Lady of the Palace prefented upon Knee a Napkin to the Queen to wipe her Mouth with : She gave fome dry'd Sweet-meats to Donna Mariguita de Palacios, and to my Daughter, in faving to them, they must not eat much of such things, because they spoild the Teeth of young Girls. She ask'd me di ers times, how the Most Christian Queen did, and how the diverted her felf? She faid, that the had lately fent her fome Boxes of Amber Pastils, some Gloves, and some Chocolate: She was above an hour and half at Table, speaking little. but seem'd merry enough. We defired to know her Commands for Madrid, whereupon the express'd a great deal of Kindness and Civility, and after that we took our leave of her. It cannot be deny'd, that this Queen has abundance of Understanding, as well as Courage and Vertue, to take as the does, to tedious a Banishment.

I must not forget to tell you, that the first Menine brings the Queen Patins and puts them on; this is so great an Honour in this Country, that they would not change it for the best place belonging to the Crown. When the Ladies of the Palace marry, and with the Queens consent, she adds to their Potions fifty thousand Crowns, and commonly some Government or Vice-Royalty is given to their Husbands.

When we came back to the Cardinals House we found a Theater prepar'd in a mighty great Room, and abundance of Ladies on one side, and Cavalleros on the other, and that which seem'd pretty odd to me, was a Damask Curtain which was drawn all the length of the Room to the very Theater, and so hindred the Men and the Women from seeing one another: They only stay'd for us, to begin the Comedy of Pyramus and Thisbe; this was a new Play, but the worst that I have yet seen in Spain. Afterward the Comedians danced very well, and the Diversion lasted till after two a Clock in the Morning.

There was given a stately Supper in a great Hall, where there were divers Tables; and when the Cardinal had placed us, he went back to the Cavalleros, who had the same things on their side as we had: There was an excellent Italian Confort of Musick, for his Eminence had brought with him Musicians from Rome, to whom he gave large Pensions. It was six a Clock in the Morning before we could retire to our Apartment; and as there were divers things for us yet to see; instead of going to bed; we went to the Placa Mayor, which they call Secodebet; the Houses which environ it are of Brick, and all uniform, with Balconies: It is of a round Figure, and has Piazzas about it, under which People walk; and this is a fine Place. We went back to the Castle to view it better and more leifurely: the Building is after the Gothick fashion, and very ancient: but there's fomething in't that looks fo great, that I do not wonder that charles V. had rather have liv'd there, than in any other City under his Obedience. It contains in a square four great Apartments with their feveral Wings and Pavilions there's room enough conveniently to lodge the whole Court of a great King. We were shew'd a Machine that was very strange before it was broken; it was to draw up the Water from the Taens, and to make it rise to the top of the Alcasar the House where it flood is yet whole, though it be several Ages fince it There's above five hundred fleps from it to the River fide: when the Water was come into the Receiver, it ran by certain Channels into all parts of the City where there were Fountains: This was a mighty Conveniency, for now they are forced to draw the Water thirty fathom deep.

We went and heard Mass in the Church de los Reyes : It is fair and large, and all full of Oranges and Pomegranet Trees. Taffamin and Mirtles that are very high; and they are let in Cales. and are form'd into walls up to the very high Altar, whose Ornaments are extraordinary rich, fo that looking through all thele green Boughs, and the Flowers of different Colours, upon the Thining Gold, Silver, Embroidery, and great lighted Candles which adorn the Altar, it feems as if the Rays of the Sun play'd before your Eyes. There are also some Cages painted and gilt, and fill'd with Nightingales, Canary Birds and others, which make a charming noise. I should be very glad that in France they would imitate them in adorning our Churches. The Walls of this Church is all over cover'd on the outfide with the Chains and Irons of the Captives which have been redeem'd out of Barbary. In this part of the Town I observed that most of the Houses had upon their Doors a square piece of Earthern Ware, upon which was fet the Angelical Salutation in these words, Maria fue concebida fin peca lo original. I was told that thefe Honses belong'd to the Arch-bishop, and that none but those that work in Silk dwell in them, of which there are very many at Tolleda. The two stone Bridges cross the River are very high, broad and long: If they would but take a little pains with the Tagus; Boats might come up to the City, this would be a confiderable Conveniency; but they are naturally too lazy, to confider that the Profit and Advantage of a work is to be preferd before before the trouble of undertaking it. We also saw the Hospital of Los Linnos, that is of Foundlings, and the City-House which is near the Cathedral; and at last our Curiosity being satisfy'd. we came back to the Archiepiscopal Palace, and we went to Bed and laid till Night, when again we had another Feaff as splendid as the former: His Eminence eat with us, and when we had return'd him all due thanks, we fet forward towards the Castle of Ignarica: The Marquis de Palacios, with all his Family, was there waiting for us; fo that we were fo obligingly received that nothing can be added to the good Chear and to the Pleasure, with which we were entertain'd for six days, either in Fishing upon the River Xarama, or in Hunting, in Walking, or in common Conversation: Every one was Emulous to appear good humour'd; and one may fay, that when the Spamiards go to far as to lay afide their Gravity, and know and love you, they contribute hugely to ease and recreate the Mind. They become fociable, obliging, earnest to please you, and the best Company in the World. This is what I have found in this little Tourney I have made, of which I should not have given you for particular an Account; but yet I am perswaded, Dear Cousin. you defire it fo, and that you fet some value upon my Complaifance.

LETTER. XIV.

The Ceremony of Swearing to the Treaty of Peace concluded at Nimmiguen, between the Crowns of France and Spain, was perform'd here the last of August. I had a great desire to have seen what past then; but as Women are not to be present there, so the Connestible De Castille promis'd to get us into the King's Chamber, as soon as he should be gone into the great Hall, Madam Gueux the Danish Ambassador's Lady, and Madam De Chais, the Envoy of Holland's Lady, were there also. We went up at a private Pair of Stairs, where one of the Constable's Gentlemen waited to receive us, and we tarry'd for ome time in a very fine Closet full of Spanish Books, well bound and very diverting: There amongst others, I found the History of Don Quixot, the famous Knight of the Manca, in which the plainness and the subtilty of the Expression, the weight and strength of Proverbs, and that which the Spaniards call El pico, that is the smartness and nicety of a Language, appear'd quite otherwise, then the Translations which we have in French. I was so pleas'd in reading it, that I hardly thought of seeing the Ceremony: It began as foon as the Marquis De Villars came, and through a Lattice-window which was open'd, we faw what past. The King placed himself at the end of the great Guilt Hall, which is one of the most Mately in the Palace: The Alcove was spread with a wonderful fine Carpet; the Throne and the Canopy were embroider'd with Pearls, Diamonds, Rubies, Emeraulds and other precious Stones. Cardinal Portocarrero fat in a great Chair below the Alcove, on the right hand of the Throne; the Constable of Castille sat upon a Stool; the French Ambassador was seated on the left hand of the Throne upon a Bench covered with Velvet, and the Grandees were placed near the Cardinal; when every body was feated according to their Quality, the King came in, and when he was in his Throne, the Cardinal, the Ambaffador, and the Grandees let down and cover'd themselves. A Secretary read aloud, the Power which the most Christian King had fent to his Ambassador. After that, a little Table was brought and let before the King, with a Crucifix and a Book of the Evangelists, and whilst he held his hand upon it the Cardinal read the Oath, by which he swore to keep the Peace with France: There are some other little Ceremonies, but I did not mind them well enough to be able to give you an Account of em. A little after the King return'd to his Lodgings, but we were gone out of them before: We stay'd in the same Clofet where we stopt at first : It was so near his Chamber, that we heard him fay, that he was never fo hot, and that he would put off his Collar : And indeed, the Sun does shine very hot in this Country. At my first coming hither, I was afflicted with a frange Meagrim, and could not imagine the cause of it; but my Kinfwoman told me 'twas because I wore too much upon my Head, and that if I did not take care I might loofe my fight fo; I immediately threw off my Bonnets and my Cornets, and fince that time I have never had any pain in my Head. For my part, I cannot believe that there is in any part of the World more ferene Air than there's here: It is fo pure, that you cannot perceive so much as one Cloud; and it is affirm'd to me, that even the Weather here in Winter, is like the finest Weather in any other Country: That which is most dangerous here is a certain Wind De Galiegue, which blows off the Mountains of Gallicia:

Gallicia: It is not violent, but 'tis fo piercing, that it reaches the very Bones, and sometimes causes a Lameness in a Leg or an Arm, and often in half the Body, which lasts for ones life : It is more frequent in Summer than in Winter. Strangers take it for the Western Briezes, and are ravisht when they feel it, but experience convinces them of its Malignity. Seasons in Stain are much more convenient and pleasant than either in France, England, Holland, or Germany; For not to feckon that purity of Air, which cannot be imagin'd fo fine as 'tis from the Month of September to the Month of Jane, 'tis not lo cold, but one can make a shift without fire; and this is the reason, why there's no Chimneys in any of their Apartments, and that they make use of only Chafindishes. But 'tis a great Happinels that Wood being fo scarce as 'tis in this Country. they have no occasion for't; It never freezes thicker than the thickness of two Crowns, and there falls little Snow. But the adjacent Mountains furnish Madrid with it all the Year round. The Months of June, July and August, are indeed excessive hot,

I was lately in a Company where all the Ladies were fadly frighted: One of 'em said, that she had received a Letter from Barcelona, which advis'd, that a Bell there, which was only rung upon some publick Calamity, or upon some occasion of the highest Consequence, had all alone rung several times : This Lady-came from Barcelona, and the affured me, that whenever any idisfortune and Misery is to befal Spain, or that any of the Houle of Austria is to die, this Bell rings; that for a quarter of an hour together, the Clapper of the Bell moves with a strange quickness, and strikes in turning round: I would not believe it, neither do I yet: But all the Company confirm'd what the faid: If it is a Lyc, there were above twenty that confpir'd with her in it. They began to think upon what, and on whom this unhappiness which by this fign is forefold was to fall; and as they are very Superstitious, the beautiful Marchioness De Liche, encreast their fears, by telling them, that Don John was very fick.

In their deep Morning, they are attir'd like Fools, but chiefly on the first days; for the Foot-men as well as the Masters have long Cloaks trailing, and instead of Hats, they wear a high Past-board Cap cover'd with Crape; their Horses are all in black Trappings, and Houssings which cover their Heads and all their Bodies: Nothing looks uglier; their Coaches are so ill cover'd, that the Cloth which covers the Roof, hangs almost down to the Boots: No body that sees this doleful Equipage but would think, that some Corps is a carrying to be bury'd; the

People

People of Quality wear their Cloaks of black Bays, very thin and rotten, the least thing tears it in pieces: And that Mourning is most graceful, that is most ragged and taterr'd. I have seen some Cavelleros which tore their Cloaths on purpose; and I assure you, that through some of their Cloaths, you may see their Skin as ugly as tis to look on: For though their Children when they are young, are as white as Alabaster, and so pretty, that you wou'd take them for Angels, yet it must be granted, that as they grow bigger, they alter very strangely, the heat of the Sun roast them, the Air tans them, and it 'tis easie to know a Spaniard from any other Nation: Their Features are nevertheless regular, but still there wants methinks our Air and Meen as well as our Skin and Complexion.

All the Scholars wear long Robes, with a little Border of Linnen about their Necks instead of a Collar; they are habited very like the Jesuits; there's of 'em above thirty Years old :

they are known to be Students by their Habits.

I fancy this City to look like a great Coup, in which they feed Poltry: For really, from the Level of the Street to the fourth Story, one can fee nothing but Lattices whose holes are very small; and their very Balconies have 'em': There's always to be seen some of the poor confined Women standing behind them, to look upon Passengers, and when they dare, they open them, and with great delight shew themselves; there's not a Night passes without four or five hundred Consorts of Musick, in several parts of the Town; it's true they are at a moderate rate, and it is sufficient if a Gallant has only his Guittar or his Harp, and sometimes both joyn'd with a Voice hoarse enough to awake the most drowsie body, and affords them the pleasure of a Queen: If either they do not understand what is most excellent, or cannot obtain it, they are content with what they can get: I never saw any Virginals or Theorba's here.

In every Street, and at every corner House, there's an Image or Statue or our Lady dres'd after the Fashion of the Country; with a Pair of Beads in her Hands, and either a great Wax Candle or a Lamp burning before her: I have seen three or sour in my Kinswoman's Stable, with others pieces of Devotion; for you must know, that every Groom will have his Oratory as well as his Master, though perhaps neither one nor tother often pray there. When one Lady goes to visit another, if it be in the Night, sour Pages comes to receive her with great Famboys of white Wax, and in the same manner condust he out again, and while she's going into her Chair, they commonly theel upon one Knee: This is something more splendid, than

Here are Houses on purpose for Women of lewd Lives, like the Madelonnettes at Paris: They use them very severely, and there is not a day passes that they are not whipt several times; in a certain time they are releas'd, but come out worse than they went in, what they suffered making them not a bit the better. They live almost altogether in a particular part of the Town, where vertuous Women never go, but if by chance any one does go that way, they run and purfue after her, as if the was their Enemy; and if it happens that they are the strongest, the is fure to be cruelly us'd; and for the Cavalleros they run the Risque of being torn in pieces as oft as they pass that way; that is to fay, who shall have 'em: One takes him by the Arm, another by the Legs, and a third by the Head, and if he grows angry, they altogether fall upon him and rob him, and even Arip him of his Cloaths. My Kinfwoman has a Page who was ignorant of the Tricks of the wretched Wenches, and went innocently through their Quarters, but they stript him as naked as common Thieves in a Wood could have done; and yet a Man must be content with this Treatment, for to whom shall he go for Restitution? The Bell of Barcelona hath been but too true in its Progno-Aicks, for Don John was the first of this Month brought down so very low with his fickness, that the Physicians despair'd of him, and he was advis'd to prepare himself for Death: He receiv'd the News with fo much Tranquility and Refignation, as very much confirm'd the Belief that feveral Persons that before entertain'd. that he had taken some private disgust, which made him rather wish to die than live: The King came every moment into his Chamber, and spent several hours at his Bed-side, not with standing his earnest Prayers that he would not so expose himself to a Feaver: He received the Bleffed Viaticum, made his Will, and writ a Letter to a Lady whose name I could not learn: He commanded Don Antonio Ortis his chief Secretary to carry it with a little Box lockt, which I faw; it was made of China Wood, and light enough to make one think there was in't nothing but Letters and perhaps some Jewels; while he was so dangeroully sick, a Courrier arriv'd with the News of the King's Marriage with Mademoiselle; the Joy of which did not only fill the Palace, but all the City shew'd Expressions of it, for there were over the whole Town Artificial Fire-works and Illuminations for three Days together: The King could not contain himself, but run into Don Fohn's Chamber, and although he was very droufy and heavy to seep, and wanted rest, yet he awak'd him to tell him that that the Queen would quickly be here, and intreated him to think of nothing but being well again, that he might affift at her reception. Ah! Syre, answered the Prince to him! I shall never have that Satisfaction, I should be content to die, if I had had the Honour to have feen her once : The King fell a weeping, and told him. That feeing him in that Condition, was the only thing that diflurb'd his Happiness. There was to have been a Bull-Feaft, but the Prince's fickness has caus'd it to be put off, and the King would not have fuffer'd any Fire-works in the Palace Court, had not Don John, notwithstanding he had a violent pain in his Head begg'd him to permit them. In fine, the 17th of this Month he dyed, extreamly regretted by fome, and as little by others. This is the fate both of Princes and Favourites, as well as of Persons that move in an ordinary Sphere; and as his Credit was already declining, and the Courtiers now thought of nothing elfe but the Queen-Mother's Return, and the Arrival of the new Queen, folit is a mighty ffrange, thing to observe with what indifference the Sickness and Death of Don John was taken; they did not fo much as talk on him the very next day; It feem'd as if he had never been in the World. Alas, Dear Coufin, does not this deserve a little to be reflected on? He govern'd all the Kingdoms of the King of Spain, his very name struck Terror, he caus'd the Queen-Mother to be banisht; he drove away Father Nitard, and Valenuela, who were both Favourites, he had for the most part a greater Court than the King: And yet four and twenty hours after he was dead, I believe I saw in different places fifty Persons of the highest Quality, which did not so much as speak one word of this poor Prince, notwithstanding divers of them had very great Obligations to him : And yet after all, he had very great personal Qualifications and Virtues : He was of a middle Stature, and a well shap'd body, his Features were regular, his Eyes black and lively, he had black Hair, a great deal of it, and very long: He was well bred, of a great Wit and Judgment, very generous, brave and benificent, and had a Capacity for the highest Affairs. He was not ignorant of any thing that was suitable to his Birth, nor of any of the Arts and Sciences. He both spoke and writ very well five several Languages, and understood more: He was perfectly well read in History; he could both make and play upon any Instrument as well as the best Master. He understood how to turn several things; he could forge Arms, and he much delighted in the Mathematicks; but being called to the management of the Government, he was oblig'd to take his thoughts off of all these Exercises. The face of things changed in a moment, his Eyes were scarce closed, before before the King (mov'd only by his own kind and eafie Nature for the Queeen his Mother) run to Tolleda to see her, and to intreat her to return, she consented to it with all the Joy she had to fee the King. They wept not a little, while they embrac'd each other, and we faw them come back together. All the Perfons of Quality went to meet their Majesties, and the People shew'd abundance of Joy. I should enlarge a great deal more upon this return, did I not intend to be very particular in the Memoirs I am writing.

Don John laid three days in his Bed of State, and in the fame Cloaths which he had made to go meet the young Queen; after that he was carried to the Escurial: The Funeral had nothing of Greatness; the Officers of his House, with a very few Friends accompany'd him : He was laid in the little Vault near the Pantheon, which is referved folely for the Princes and Princesses of the Royal Blood; for there are none bury'd in the Pantheon, you must know, but Kings, and those Queens that have had Children; those that have had none, are bury'd in that particular Vault. In a few days we are to go to the Escurial, which will be when the King goes there; but he is so taken up with his young Queen, that he can think of nothing but going towards the Frontiers to meet her. In every place where I come, they are continually ringing it aloud in my Ears, that she'llquickly be Queen of two and twenty Kingdoms. In all likelyhood there's eleven of them in the Indies; for I only know those of the old and new Castille, Arragon, Valentia, Navarre, Murcia, Grenada, Andalousia, Gallicia, Leon, and the Isles Majorques. In thele Places there are fome parts of them admirable, upon which it feems as if Heaven had a mind to spread abroad its most benign Influences. There are others again to barren, that there is neither Corn, Herbs, Vines, Fruit, Meadows, nor Springs; and of these one may say, there's more than of the others. But generally speaking, the Air there is good and wholsome. In certain parts the Heats are excessive, and in others the Cold and the Winds are insupportable, although 'tis in the same Season. There are a great many Rivers, but that which is pretty fingular, is, that the biggest of them is not Navigable; particularly those of Tagus, Guadiana, Minchio, Duero, Guadalguiver, and that of Ebre; for either because of the Rocks, the falls of Water, the Gulphes, or the Turnings, Veffels cannot pass upon them, and this is one of the greatest Difficulties of Trade, and which most of all hinders those things from coming to Cities which there's need of; for if there was an easie Communication between them, those Places and Towns that want a great many Wares The Ladies Travels into Spain.

and Good, might be supplyed from those that abound, and so every body might be surpsished with necessary things at a reasonable price; whereas the Charges by Land carriage being so high, one must want divers Conveniencies, unless you are in a Condition to pay three times more for a thing than tis worth.

Amongst the several Cities which belong to the King of Spain, these are esteem'd, either for Beaury or Riches, viz. Madrid, Sevelle, Grenada, Valentia, Sarragoufa, Tolleda, Vailladolid, Cordoua, Salamancha, Cadiz, Naples, Milan, Messina, Palermo, Cagliari, Bruxelles, Antwerp, Gand, and Mons. There are a great many others which nevertheless are very considerable; and leveral of the Towns are as big as Cities; but there are not in them those multitudes of People, which are both the Riches and Strength of a King. And there are divers Reasons to be given why there is this defect. First, When King Ferdinand drove away the Moors out of Spain, and established the Inquisition, what through the Punishments they inflicted upon some Jews, and the banishing of others, there dy'd and went out of the Kingdom in a little while, above nine hundred thousand Persons; befides, the Indies draw away abundance; the Unfortunate go there to enrich themselves, and when they have done so, they remain to enjoy the fruit of their Labour, and the Pleasures of the Country. Again Soldiers are rais'd in Spain, and sent away to Garison other Cities under the obedience of the King; thele Soldiers marry and fettle in the Places where they happen to be, and never return to those from whence they came. Add to this, that the Spanish Woman bear but few Children; if they have three 'tis reckon'd abundance and Strangers do not come to inhabit there, as in other parts of the World, because they are not lov'd there, and the Spaniards are naturally recatados, that is finguiar, and referv'd to themselves, and will not be communicative and open with other Nations, which they either envy or fcorn: And thus having examin'd into all those means which help to

There grows but little Corn in Castilte, it is brought from Sicily, France and Flanders; and indeed, how should it grow, unless the Earth would produce it of it self, as the Land of Promise did? The Spaniards are too idle to take pains to Till and improve it; for being the meanest Peasant is perswaded that he is Hidalgo, that is to say, a Gentleman, that in every little Family there's an Apocryphal History, compos'd within an hundred Years, which he leaves to his Children and Nephews of a Village as an Inheritance, in which sabilous History they are all depopulate the Country under his Catholick Majesty, one may rather wonder that there are so many People remaining.

maile to descend from ancient Chivalry, whose Ancestors and done wonderful things; reciting that their Great Grandfather Don Pedro, and Don John, performed such and such cervices to the Crown. I say, they having taking up these vain concert of themselves, no wonder it they will neither derogate from the Gravidad, nor Decendentia. At this rate do they talk, and they will more willingly endure Hunger, and all Severities of Life than work (say they) like Mercinaries, which belongs only to Slaves. And thus Pride seconded by Sloth, hunder the most part of them to sow their Land, unless some strangers come and help them to till their Ground, which by a second methon and guidance of Providence always happens, Strangers that are more laborious and worldly minded, being moved thither by the gain they find; so that you shall have a forry Peasant sitting in his Chair reading of a mouldy Romance, whilst these Strangers are working for him, in order to carry away his Money.

There's no Oats to be seen, Hay is scarce, their Horses and Mules eat Barley in the Straw chopt small. The Hills and Mountains in these Kingdoms I speak of are of such a prodigious height and length, that I do not believe there's the like in any other part of the World, one meets with some of an hondred Leagues in length, which joyn one to another in a continu'd Chain, and which without Hyperpole, are higher than the Clouds, they are called Sierras, amongst which are reckon'd the Mountains of Pyrenea, Granada, Astura, Alcantara, Morena, Tolleda, Doua, Molina and Albanera. These Hills render the way so very difficult, that no Waggons can pass, which debiges them to carry all upon Mules, who are so sure scotted, that in two hundred Leagues continual traveiling amongst Rocks, and great Flint Stones, they will not so much as once stumble.

I have been shew'd some of the Patents the King Grants, I never read so many Titles, I'll set them down here a the calls himself King of Spain, Castelle, Leon, Navarre, Aragon, Grenada, Tolleda, Valentia, Gallicia, Sevile, Marcial Jaen Hierusalem, Naples, Sicily, Majorque, Minorque and Sardagnia, the East and West Indies; the Isles and Terra Firma of the great Ocean, Arch Duke of Austria, Duke of Burgundia, Brabant, Luxemburgh, Guelderland, Milan, Count of Hasburgh Flanders, Tirol and Barcelona, Lord of Biscay and Molina, Marquess of the Holy Empire, Lord of Friezland, Utrecht, Malines, Overissel and Groningen; and Grand Scienior of Asia and Africa. I have been told, that Francis I. laught at these, when he received a Letter from Charles V. Shuft with fuch arrogant Titles, and in his Answer gave himself no other

Title than Citizen of Paris, and Lord of Gentilis.

They do not trouble their Heads to fludy much here, that little they do know bears them out, for with the help of their Wit and Grave looks, they feldom betray their ignorance by being at a loss about any matters; when they speak, they always feem to know more than they do; and when they are filent, you would think 'em wife enough to refolve the most knotty Questions. Nevertheless there are some famous Univerfities in Spain, amongst which they reckon, Saragossa, Barcelona, Salamanca, Alcala, Santiago, Grenada, Seville, Coimbra, Terragona, Evora, Lisbon, Madrid, Murcia, Majorque, Tolleda, Lerida, Valantia and Occa: There are but few famous Preachers; here and there you'll meet with some that are Pathetical: But indeed, let these Sermons be good or bad, the Spaniards that hear 'em will perpetually beat their breasts with an Extraordinary fervour, and even diffurb the Preacher with the grievous Cry which their troubled Consciences make them utter. I am willing to believe that there are a few that have some compunction, but in my Conscience, I doubt far less than they make shew of: They never leave off their Swords, either when they go to Confession or the Sacrament; they say, they wear 'em to defend Religion; and in the Morning before they put them on, they kis 'em and make the fign of the Cross with them; they pay an excessive Devotion to the Blessed Virgin, and put an extraordinary confidence in her; there's hardly any Man that does not wear a Scapular or some embroider'd Image that hath toucht some of those that are held to be miraculous; and thô otherwise they do not lead lives very regular, yet they will not forbear praying to ber with a truft, that 'tis the that must protect and save 'em from the greatest Evils; they are very charitable, not only upon the account of the Merits by Alms Deeds, but also by a natural Inclination they have to give, and a real pain they endure if either through Poverty, or for any other reason they are forc'd to refuse any thing that is askt them; they have also another good Quality, which is never to forfake their Friend in Sickness, their care and their concern is far greater in such a time, when doubtless the Presence as well as the Affistance of a Friend is most wanted: So that Persons that do not see one another four times in a Year, yet are constant in their visits three or four times every day; when one is under any affliction, and that they can become useful to each other: But as soon as they are well, they resume the same way of living they us'd before they were fick.

Don Frederick de Caraonna, of whom I now talk to ye, Dear Coulin, as if he and you were well acquainted, is return de He hath brought me a Letter from the fair Marchionels De los Rios, who without doubt, is still one of the prettiest Women in the World, and who is not weary of her retirement. I also by him heard from the Arch-bishop of Burgos, whose Merits are uncommon; and he added, that he came back in the company of a Spanish Gentleman, who had told him some very wonderful things; amongst others, that every Spaniard who is born on Good-Friday, whenever they go by or through any Church-yard, in which there has been any body burry'd that was murder'd. or if they pass through any place where a Murder has been committed, altho the Man who was kill'd has been taken away, yet for all that he appears to 'em all bloody, and in the fame manner and condition he happen'd to be in when he was murder'd, and this too, whether they knew one another or no: This certainly is a very unpleasant thing to those it happens; but in requital they can cure the Plague with breathing upon the Party, and do not receive the Infection, althothey be with those that have the Plague upon them: Many People, said he, wondred that Philip the IV. held his head fo high, and flair'd up with his eyes, the reason was, he was born on Good Friday. and when he was very young he had several Apparitions of these Persons that had been murder'd; so that with the fright of 'em, he had got a cuftom (very feldom) to hold down his head : But, faid I to Don Frederick, did he talk ferioully, and as if these things were allowed of every body without any doubt. And just as I was faying, that it would be worth while to enquire of some creditable Person about these Matters; Don Ferdinand de Tolleda came into my Chamber, and so he askt him, and he affur'd me that he had frequently heard folks talk thus of these Matters, but yet he would not answer for the Truth. It is also said, continu'd he, that there are a certain People which can kill a mad Dog with breathing upon him, and that they have a Power to remain in the Fire without being burnt; and yet I could never fee any of 'em that car'd to trust themselves there: But they give this reason, that tho they could fafely do it, yet there would be fomething of Vanity in it by fuch peculiar Favours from Heaven to distinguish themselves from other Men; and for my part, said I laughing, I am of Opinion these Men have more Prudence than Humility: They are afraid(as'tis but reasonable) of the biting of the Dog, and the Heat of the Furnace. I am altogether of your mind, Madam, replyed Don Frederick, I can give little Faith to things above nature.

I do not pretend to make you believe it, fays Don Ferhand, tho I must tell ye, I do not find any thing in this Matter more extraordinary than in a thousand Prodigies which we every day see. Do ye think, for instance, that you ought less to wonder at that Lake which is near Guadalajora in Andaloufea, which foretells approaching Tempests, by most horrid bellowing and roaring, that is heard above twenty thousand Paces distance? and what do ye say of that other Lake which is found upon the very top of the Mountains Clavio, in the Comre of Roussilon near to Perpignan? It is extream deep, there's in't Fishes, both for bigness and shape that are monstrous; when a Stone is thrown into it, there are Vapours feen to come out with a mighty noise, and to ascend into the Air. and there convert into the Clouds, which produce most terrible Storms, accompany'd with Thunder, Lightning and Air, Is it not likewise true, continued he, in addressing himself to Don Frederick, that near the Castle of Gracimanos, in a Cavern, which is called Judea, not far from the Bridge Talayredas, there's a Spring whose Water freezes as it drops, and grows so hard, that it becomes a perfect Stone, which cannot easily be broken, and with which in that Country they build fine Houses? You have a good Stock of Examples, said Don Frederick, but if you will, I'll furnish ye with some others for your purpose. Do ye remember the Mountain of Monraye in Arragon: If the sheep feed upon't before the sun rise they die, but if they are fick, and feed there after the Sun is up they are cure'd. I must not forget neither the Spring in the Isle of Car diz, which is dry when 'tis high Water, and runs when the Tide ebbs: You shall not be the only Person, said I, in interrupting him, that shall second Don Fernand in these forts of Relations, I must tell him, that in the same Isle of Cadiz, there's a certain Plant which wither upon the first appearance of the Sun, and grows green again as foon as Night comes. Ab!pretty Plant, cries Don Fernand in Laughing. Well, I have enough how to be revenged for all the sport you have made at my Stories for this Hour together; I declare open War against you about this Plant, and if you do not fend for one hither, I know what Ill believe: The facetious Humor of this Cavallero made us very pleasantly pals the Evening, but we were interrupted by my Kinfwoman, who return'd out of the City, where she had spent some part of the day at her Lawyers, who was at the point of Death; he is very old, and a very knowing Man in his Profession : She told us, that all his Children stood round his Bed, and that the only thing which he recommended to 'em, was always to preferve a good good stock of Gravity; and after he had bleft them, fays he to em, what greater good can I now wish you, my dear Children. than to lead your whole Lives at Madrid, and never to quit this Earthly Paradice, but for the Heavenly : This may frew continu'd she, the strange Prepossession the Spaniards have for Madrid, and the Happiness they enjoy in that Court : For my part said I, in interrupting her, I am perswaded there's abundance of Vanity in that fondness that they express for their own Nation, for certainly they have too much Sense not to know. that there are many other Countries far more agreeable. not true, faid I, in addressing my self to Don Fernand, thô you will not fay as I fay, that you have the fame thoughts? what my thoughts are, faid he in finiling, is no rule for other folks; I must tell ye, that fince my return, I am upbraided by every body with being no longer a Spaniard : But certain it is that People being so bewitcht with the Delights and Charms of Madrid, and not having power to forlake it in any feafon of the Year, no body has thoughts of Building prettyHoules in the Country whither they might fometimes retire; fo that all adjacent parts about the City, which should be fill'd with delicious Gardens and splendidSeatslook like so many little Deserts, and this is the reason also, why the City in Summer as well as in Winter, is equally crowded with People: Hereupon my Kinfwoman faid, she would have me to the Escurial, and that it was agreed on by the Marchioness of Palacios and La Rosa, to go two days hence; the Lady your Mother, added the in speaking to Don Fernand defigns you to make one, and I indeed to fecure Don Frederick, for another, they both declar'd that with abundance of Joy, they would go this little Journey; and indeed, the next day we went to kifs Queen-Mothers hand, and to know her commands for the Efcurial: For you must know, 'tis the Custom, when one is to go out of Madrid, first to pay their respects to the Queen. But we had not seen her since her return, the looks merrier than the did at Tolleda, and told us, the did not think of coming back so soon to Madrid, and that now it feem'd as if she had never been out of it. There was brought before her a Gyant-Woman that came from the Indies : As foon as she saw her, she caus'd her to be taken away, she was so affrighted at her. Her Ladies would make this Coloffus dance, who held in each hand two She Dwarfs that play'd upon the Castinets and the Biscay Drum, all this was ugly in the highest degree. My Kinswoman observed in the Queen Mothers Apartment, things which had been Don John's, amongst others an admirable Pendulum Clock, all set with Diamonds, he made her in part, part, his Heir, in all likelyhood 'twas to testifie his regret for having troubled and vexed her.

The Journey to the Escurial was perform'd with all imaginable Satisfaction, the desire of entertaining you with it, hindred me from sending you the Letter I begun before I went thither; the same Ladies that went to Arranjus and Tolleda, were very glad to embrace the Occasion of taking the Air a little in so since a Season; and we went first to the Prado, which is a Royal House, the Building like the rest in Spain is handsome enough, that is, it consists of a square of sour several Apartments separted by Galleries of Communication, which are supported with Pillars; the Furniture of it, is not indeed stately, but there are good Pictures, amongst others, those of the Kings of Spain, in odd sorts of Dresses.

We were shew'd a little Closet, which the late King used to call his beloved, because in it he was wont sometimes to entertain himself with his Missresses; this Prince who was seeming ly fo cold and grave, that he was hardly ever feen to laugh, was really the most amorous and the pleasantest of Men. There is a Garden well enough kept, and a Park of a confiderable extent, whether the King frequently goes to hunt; we were afterwards at a Convent of the Capuchins, which stands on the top of a Hill; this is a Place of great Devotion, because of a Crucifix which it feems was taken from the true Crofs, and which often works Miracles: After we had faid our Prayers there, we descended on the other side of the Hill, to a certain Hermitage where there was a Recluse, that would neither see us, nor speak to us, but he threw a Ticket to us through his Grate, in which we found it writ, that he would recommend us to God. We were all extream weary, for we were forced to walk afoot up the Hill, and it was very hot Weather; we perceived in the bottom of the Hill a very little Cottage by the fide of a Brook, which runs amongft Willow Trees; we fleered our Course that way, and when we were yet a great way off, we could see a Man and a Woman very well dreft, rife up nimbly from the foot of a Tree where they were fet, and run into that Cottage, and shut the Door as hastily as if they had taken us for thieves; but doubtless it was fear of being known, which madethem avoid us; we went to the Place they had left; being fet on the Grafs, we fell to eating some Fruit we brought with us; we were so nigh this little House, that they could easily see through their Windows what we were doing; there came out a very pretty Courtry Lass, and with a Sea-Rush Basket addrest her self to us, and kneeling, begg'd some of the Fruit of our Collation for a Bigbelly'd belly'd Woman that would die if we refused her. Immediately we fent her some of the fairest, and quickly after the same young Girl came again with a gold Snuff-box, and told us the Senora of the Cafita, that is the Lady of the little House, intreated us to accept of some Snuff for an Acknowledgement of the Favour we had done her. It is the Fashion here to present Snuff when they have a mind to express their Friendship; we flay'd folong by the Water-fide, that we resolved to go no further than the Carcuela, which is another of the King's Houfes, but not fo handsome as the Pardo, and so neglected, that there's nothing worth commending, but the Waters; we were ill enough lodged there, though we laid in the very fame Beds his Majesty did; and we were very lucky in taking along with us all Necessaries for Supper. After that we went into the Gardens, which are in bad Order, the Fountains run day and Night, the Water there is so good and in such plenty, that for as little almost as one would defire, it might be made as pleafant a Dwelling as any is in the World. But tis not the Cultom in this Country, from the King to private Persons, to keep feveral Country Houses in good repair, they let them go to min. for want of fome very small Reparations. Our Beds were to ill. that we were not loath to leave them early the next Morning to go to the Escurial. We went by Monareco, where the Woods begin, and a little further is the Park which belongs to the Convent of the Eleurial; For in effect it is one which Philip the It. built among the Mountains, that so he might the more easily get the Stone which he needed, of which there is such a prodigious Quantity: that without feeing it, one cannot conceive it, and certainly it is one of the vafteft Buildings we have in Europe : We went up to it through a very long Walk of Elm Trees which are planted in four Rows, the greatGate is flately adorn'd with divers Marble Pillars rais'd one upon another, till they reach up to the Statue of St. Lawrence which stands on the top; the Kings Arms are cut upon a certain Stone which is call'd the Thunder-Stone, and is brought from Arabia, the cutting of which cost threescore thousand Crowns. It easie to believe, that having been at so considerable a Charge for a thing so little uleful, they would not spair any Cost for others which might be necessary and contribute to the Beauty of the Place. It is a great Square Pile of Building; but beyond the square there. runs out a Length, which contains the Buildings of the Entrance, and are contriv'd to present the Form of the Gridiron on which St. Lawrence (who is the Patron of the Monastry) fuffer'd Matyrdom. It is built according to the Darick Order, and very plain; the Square, is divided in the middle and one of those Divisions which looks upon the Order, opens it felf both ways into four other leffer Squares, which are four Cloyflers built also according to the Derick Order, and who sees one of them, fees all the rest; the Building has nothing in it, either as to its Defign or Architecture, that is extraordinary; that which is to be admired, is the vaftness of it, being Three hundred and eighty Paces in the Square; for befides those four Glovflers I have mentioned, the other Division of the Square, Subdivided into two, makes two other Piles of Building, one of which is, the King's Quarters, and the other is the Colledge for there are in it abundance of Pensioners, whom the King maintains to Rudy : The Friarsthat live in it are Hieronomites this Order is unknown in France, and it is abolisht in Italy, because a certain Hieronimite Fryar attempted at Milan the Life of St. Charles Borromeo : But he did not hurt him, though he shot at him, and the Bullets pierced his Pontifical Habit; but nevertheless this Order is here in great Esteem ; there are three hundred Monks in the Convent of the Ekurial: they live much after the fame way of the Carthulians, they freak little, and pray much, and Women never come into their Church, but befides they ought to fludy and preach.

But there's another thing yet, which makes this Building considerable, and that is, the nature of the Stone of which it is built. It was taken out of the neighburing Quarries; it is of a grayish colour; the sharpest Air and severest Weather makes no impression on't, it does not soil or grow dirty, but constantly preferves that colour, it had when it was taken up. Philip II. was two and twenty years in building it, he enjoyed it this teen, and then dy'd in't. This Structure cost him fix Millions of Gold. Philip IV. added the Pantheon to it, that is to lay Sepulchre, like the Fantheon at Rome, contrivid under the great Altar of the Church, all of Marble, Jasper and Porphiry, in which there are fix and twenty most stately Tombs inchased in the Walls; and one goes down into it by a pair of Stairs all of Jasper Jul fancy'd my self descending into some of those enchanted places which our Romances and Books of Chevalry talk of The Tabernacle, the Architecture of the Altar, the fleps by which one ascends to it, the Pyx or Box in which the Hoff is kept, and made all of one fingle Agat, are fo many Wonders The Riches that are there in precious Stones and Gold, is incredible. One fingle Cupboard of Relicks (for there are four in the four Chapels of the Church) infinitely exceeds the Treat fure of St. Mark's at Venice. The Ornaments of the Church or of Matyroom מכל

are imbroider'd with Pearls and Precious Stones; and so are the Chalices and Vessels of precious Stones. The Candlesticks and the Lamps are of pure Gold. There are forty little Chapels. and as many Altars, upon which are put every day forty leveral Cloaths and Attires. The forepart of the great Altar is compos'd of four Ranks of Jasper Pillars, and one goes up to the Altar by seventeen Steps of Porphiry Stone. The Tabernacle is beautifyed with feveral Pillars of Agat, and divers curious Figures of Metal and Chrystal. One can see nothing about the Tabernacle but Gold, Azur Stone, and other Stones to transparent, that through them the Sacrament (which is kept in an Agat Veffel) is eafily perceived. This Tabernacle is effeem'd at a Million of Crowns. There are eight pair of Organs, the Chairs or Seats in the Quire are made of rare Wood, which comes from the Indies, curiously wrought after the Pattern of those of Sta Dominick at Bologne. The Cloysters of the Monastery are extream fine; in the middle there's a Flower Garden, and a Chapel which opens four ways, whose Roof is supported with Porphiry Pillars, between which there are Niches, in which are placed the four Evangelists with an Angel, and the several Creatures made of white Marble bigger than Nature, who throw out Torrents of Water into Marble Basins. 'The Chapel is arch'd with curious Architecture, and paved with black and white Marble. There are divers Pictures, of an ineffimable value, and in the Chapter-Room, which is very large, there is belides most excellent Pictures, two Brais-Reliefs all of Agat, two foot and a half long, which cannot be valued. As to the Church, it has nothing extraordinary in its Structure; it is bigger than that of the Jeluits in St. Anthony's Street at Paris, but of the fame form, except that like their House, it is of the Dorick Order. Bramanto the famous Italian Architect, drew the Model and Defign of it. The King and Queen's Appartments are not flately. but Philip II. intended this only for a House of Prayer and Retirement, the Church and the Library were the things he took most care to adorn. Titian the famous Painter, and divers others belides, have exhaufted all their Art and Skill in curioully painting the Galleries of the Library, which indeed are admirable not only for the excellent Painting but for a hundred thoufand Volumes that are there, without reckoning the Original Manuscripts of several Fathers and Doctors of the Church which are delicately bound and guilt. You'll easily guess at the bignes of the Eleurial, when I have told you that there are in it, leventeen Cloysters, two and twenty Courts, eleven thousand Wine dows, above eight hundred Pillars, and an infinite number of Parlour.

Parlours, Halls and Chambers. A little after the Death of Philip II, there was taken from the Fryars of the Escurial, a certain Estate in Lands (cassed Campillo) which the late King had given the n; and was worth eighteen thousand Crowns per Annum, and this was done by virtue of a Clause in his Will, by which he revok'd all the immense Donations, which in his Life time he had given.

The Duke of Bragance being at Court in King Philip the Second's time, he had a mind they should go with him to the Escurial, that he might see that stately Pile of Building. And as he that had the care of shewing it to him, told him, It was built in performance of a Yow which Phillip II. made at the Battel of St. Quintin, the Duke replyed, He that made so great a Vow, must needs have a great Terror upon him. And now in mentioning this King, I remember to have heard, that Charles V. recommended to him the preservation of the three Keys of Spain. These were, the Streights-mouth, Flushing in Zealand, and Cadiz. The Turks and Moors have the first, the Dutch the second, and the English had the last, but the King of Spain soon recover'd it from them.

The Escurial is built upon a descent of some Bocks in a descent and barren Place, and environ'd with Hills; the Village stands below it, and has but a few Houses in't; it's in a manner always cold Weather there. The extent of the Gardens and the Park is a Prodigious thing to see, in which one meets with Woods, Plains, and a vast House in the midst, in which the Keepers lodge; it abounds with all sorts of Deer and Fowl.

After having feen a Place which so highly deserves our admiration, we all left it; and as we had vifited the Royal Houses of Pardo and Carcuela, we returned over the Mountains, which is a nearer way, but very troublesome. We came by Colmenar, and coasting along the little River of Guadarama, we past through Rozas and Aravaca, and arriv'd at Madrid, where we learnt that the Queen's Houshold were just going away to meet her upon the Frontier. We immediately went to the Pallace to bid adieu to the Dutchess de Terra Nova, and the other Ladies. The King had made them all be mounted, that he might fee after what manner they would be on the day of her Entry ; for this Reason all the Gardens, and Doors every way were kept close shut and guarded, and no Man was to enter there. The young Court Ladies lookt well enough, but good God! what figures were the Dutchels de Terra Nova, and Donna Maria de Alarcon, who were the Governants of the Queen's Maids; they rid every one upon a Mule shod with Silver, and all friz'd with with a large housing of black Velvet, like that the Physicians in Paris rid with upon their Horses. These Ladies, dreft like Widdows (which I have already describ'd to you) very old and ugly, with morose and imperious Looks, wore broad Hats, ty'd with firings under their Chins: and twenty Gentlemen which walk a foot by their fides, held them up left they fhould They would never have fuffered these Men to have touch'd them in that manner, had not they fear'd breaking their For you must know, dear Cousin, that though every Lady has two Gentlemen Ushers, and that they go with them where ever they go, yet they never give them their Hand. They walk by their fides, and prefent to them their Elbows wrapt in their Cloaks, which makes their Arms look monftrous thick. The Ladies do not come near them; but that which is yet more strange, if the Queen in walking should happen to fall, unless her Ladies were near her to help her up, though there were an hundred Gentlemen there, the must be pleas'd, either to rife by her felf, or lie all day upon the Ground, for none dare take her up.

We spent part of the Asternoon in looking at these Ladies; the Equipage they had was indeed very rich, but very poorly and dully contriv'd. The Dutchess of Terra Nova had alone, six Litters of Velvet of various colours, and all embroider'd, and forty Mules, whose houstings were as costly as ever I saw any. You will not hear from me again, dear Consin, before the Queen is come hither. While the King is gone to meet her, and the whole Court is absent, my Kinswoman will go into Andalousia, about some business she has there. I might send you a short Relation of our little Journey, if I could be assured it would please you. I most heartily embrace you.

From Madrid this 30th of September, 1679:

LETTER, XV.

THE whole Court is return'd, and in my Memoirs you'll find, dear Coufin, the particulars of the Queen's Journey. The Ring and the were both together in one Coach, and the Curtain being all open, I saw her at her arrival here: She was dreft after the Spanish way, and I did not think that she lookt less handsome in this than in her French Garbe; but the King was dreft a-la-Schomberg, which is the Spanish habit for the Country, and 'tis almost like the French. I have heard it told, how strangely the Queen was surprised the first time she had the Honour to see him; he had on a close body'd Coat of grey Barragon, very short and wide, Velvet Breeches, Stockings of Pelo, that is, raw Silk, which they work fo very loofe, that their Skin appears through them; this Silk is as small as a Hair; and though they be very ftrait, yet the King pulls them on at once, and so he'll tear sometimes twenty pair one after another. He had also a very fine Cravat, which the Queen fent him, but it was ty'd a little too loofe: His Hair was put behind his Ears, and he wore a grey All the Journey, which was very long, they fat close to each other in a large Coach, and feldom could understand one another but by some certain figns, for the King cannot speak a word of French, and the Queen could speak but very little Spanish. Upon their arrival at Madrid, they went to fing Te Deum at our Lady d' Atocha, attended by all the Persons of Quality and a multitude of the People, that made the Air refound with Acclamations of Joy. Afterwards their Majesties went to Buen Retiro, because the Apartments in the Palace were not yet ready, and that the Queen was not to remain there till she had made her Entry. This time must needs have been very tedious to her, for fhe faw no body but the Camerera Mayor and her She's forc'd to lead a Life so much against her Inclinations, that the has need of all that Diferetion and Sweetness of Temper the's profes'd of to be able to endure it, She has not fo much as the Liberty to fee the French Ambaffador to be fhort, 'tis a perpetual Torment. All the Spanish Ladies love her dearly, and amongst themselves pitty her.

I was sometime ago at the Countess Villambrosa's, and in a great deal of Company. The Marchioness de la Fuente came in there, and as they are extream superstitious in this Country, so she told them, like one affrighted, that being with the Queen, who looking her self in a great Glass, and laying her hand gently upon't, it crackt from top to bottom; and that the Queen beheld it without being the least mov'd, but even laught at the Consternation that all the Ladies about here were in, telling them, it betray'd a weakness of Mind to take such notice of things and Accidents as might proceed from natural Causes. They discours'd and argued a great while upon this matter, and with deep sighs said, that their Queen would not live long.

She also told us, that the Queen was much more diffusby at the incivility of the Camerera Mayor, who feeing fome of her Hairs out of place on her Forehead, fpit on her fingers to lay them smooth; upon which the Queen stay'd her Arm, telling her in a Majectick way, that the best Essence there, was not too good, and that taking her Hankerchief, the was a great while a cleaning that part of her Hair which this piece of Antiquity had so handsomely wet. It is no uncommon thing here, to wet ones head all over, the better to fmooth and make the Hair thine, the first time my Head was drest after the Spanish Mode. one of my Relation's Women undertook this curious piece of work, the was no lefs than three hours tugging and pulling my Head, and finding that my Hair, which is naturally curling, would not comply, without faying a word to me, the dipt a great Spunge twice in a Bason of Water, and baptize me so handsomely, that I was laid up with a Cold for a Month

But to return to the Queen, it would draw pitty from one to fee how this Camerera treats her ? I am well affur'd, that the neither fuffers her to have so much as a fingle Hair curl'd, nor to come near her Chamber Windows, nor to speak to any body; and yet the King loves the Queen with all his Heart, and for the most part eats with her, and that without Ceremony ; to that very often when the Maids of Honour are laying the Cloth, the Kine and Queen will divert themselves in helping thems one will lay the Cloth, and t'other a Napkin: The Queen has her Meat dreft after the French way, and the King his after the Spanilb. He has a Woman Cook to drefs all his Victuals, but the Queen endeavours to bring him to like the tagous that are made for her, but he cannot abide them. But we you must not imagine that their Majesties are surrounded with their Courtiers when they are at Dinner, at the most, there's only some Ladies of the Pallace, a few Menins, but a great many Male and Female Dwarfs. TENER OF BOUT

The Queen made her Entry the 13th of January; after all the Passages and Avenues of the great Road which leads to Buen Retiro were floot, and all Coaches forbid to come that way. there was a Triumphal Arch built, and the Queen painted upon't. It was also cover'd wirh divers Garlands, and had several Emblems and other things painted; it was let in the way by which the Queen must pass to go into Madrid; on each side there was a fort of a Gallery which had places contriv'd in them to shew the Arms of the leveral Kingdoms under the Spanish Dominion, joyning one to another by certain Pillars which supported some gilt Statues, every one of which represented Crowns and Inscriptions scriptions which had relation to those Kingdoms.

This Gallery reach'd to the Triumphal Gate on the great Road, which was very rich and adorn'd with several Statues; where likewise there were four beautiful and young Maids dreft like Nymphs waiting for the Queen, and holding in their hands Baskets of Flowers, ready to strow them on the Ground as she past; hardly was one out of this Gate or Arch, but a second appear'd, and so for a great way one after another was seen. These were adorn'd with the King's Council, that of the Inquisition, the Council of the Indies, of Arragon, of State, of Italy, of Flanders, and other Places, under fo many guilt Statues; that of luftice was higher rais'd then all the rest. A little further was represented the Golden Age, accompany'd with the Law, Rewards, Protection and Punishments. The Temple of Faith was exhibited in a Picture, Honour and Fidelity open'd the Gate, and Foy came forth to receive the new Queen. There was besides, a Picture which shew'd the Reception Solomen gave the Queen of Sheba, and another where Deborah was giving of Laws to her People. There where also the Statues of Ceres, Aftrea, Union, Vertue, Life, Safety, Time, the Earth, Tranquility, Peace, Greatness, rest Themis, and Liberality, Amongst all the Paintings I took notice of, that where Aneas is descending into Hell ; Cerberus chain'd by the Sybile, the Elyfian Fields, where Anchifes shew'd his Son who should succeed him in his Posterity. The rest were fill'd with an infinite number of Hierogliphicks. The Queen flopt at the third Arch, which was over against a very fine Parterre in her way; in it were falls of Water, Grottas, Fountains and white Marble Statues. Nothing could be more pleasaut than the Garden: It belong'd to the Fryars of St. Francis of Paulo, who built it. the fourth Gate was in the middle of the Place call'd Del Sol; it was not less glorious than the others by the Gold, Pictures, Statues and Motto's about it.

The Streets where the Furriers dwelt was all full of seeming Animals, though their Skins was so artificially stuft, that any Body would have taken them for living Tygers, Lions, Bears, and Panthers. The fifth Gate, which was that of Guadalajura had its peculiar Ornaments, and after that, the Queen past into the Goldsmiths Street, the side of which, was set sull of Angels of pure Silver, there were seen also divers Bucklers of Gold, upon which were contrived the King and Queen's Names with their Arms, in Pearls, Rubies, Diamonds, Emrauds, and other Stones so sine and rich, that the skilful said, there was to the value of above twelve Millions. In the Placa Mayor there was an Amphitheater set sull of Statues, and adorn'd with Paintings. The last Gate was near that, in the middle of the first Front of the Queen Mothers Palace, was seen Apollo, all the Muses, the Picture of the King and Queen on Horseback, and divers other things which I did not mind so much to give you an Account of them. The Pallace Court was surrounded with young Men and Maids, which represented all the Rivers both great and small of Spain, they were Crowned with Reeds and Water lillies, with Pots overturn'd, and the rest of their Attire suitable. They complimented the Queen in Latin and Spanish, there were also erected in this Court, two Castles of artificial Fireworks. All the Pallace was hung with the richest Tapistry that belong'd to the Crown, and there are but sew places in the World where there is siner seen, two Chariots full of Musecians went before their Majesties.

The Magistrates of the City came out of their publick House in their Robes, which were made of Brocado embroider'd with Gold; they wore little Hats buttoned up with Plumes of Feathers, and were mounted upon very fine Horses, they came to present the Keys of the City to the Queen, and to receive her under a Canopy. The King and the Queen Mother went in a Coach all open, that the People might see them, as far as the Countess of Ognates House, where the Queen came to them.

Six Trumpeters in black and red Suites in company of the City Kettle Drums mounted upon fine Horses, whose Housings were of black Velvet, marched before the Alcade of the Court, the Knights of the three Military Orders, namely, St. James, Calatrava, and Alcantara followed after in Cloaks all embroider'd with Gold, and their Hats covered with Plumes of Feathers; after them went the Tutulados De Castille, and the Officers of the Kings Houshold, they wore white Robes, and most of them were Grandees of Spain, their Hats were trimed with Diamonds and Pearls, and their Magnificence appear'd every way; they had most admirable Horses, every one had had abundance of Liveries, and their Footmens Suits were of Gold and Silver Brocado mixt with colour'd Silk, which lookt very well.

The Queen rid upon a curious Horse of Andalousia, which the Marquis De Villa Mayna, her first Gentleman Usher, led by the Reins, her Cloaths were so richly embroider'd, that one could see no Stuff, she wore a Hat trim'd with a Plume of Feathers, and the Pearl call'd the Peregrina, which is as big as a small Pear, and of an inestimable Value, her Hair hung loose upon her Shoulders, and upon her Forehead, her neck was a little bare, and she wore a small Fardingal, she had upon her Finger

Finger the large Diamond of the King's, which is pretended to be the fairest in Europe. But the Queens pretty Looks and her Charms shin'd much brighter than all the Sparkling Jewels with which the was adorned; behind her and without the Canopy. went the Dutches De Terranova dreft in Duenna together with Donna Laura Maria D' Alarcon Governante of the Queens Maids; they rid each of them upon a Mule. Immediately af-ter them the Queens Maids to the number of eight, all covered with Diamonds and Embroidery, appeared upon very fine Horses, every one having two of the Court walking by their fide; the Queens Coaches went after them, and the Guards of the Lantilla brought up the Rear. She stopt before the Countels of Ognate's House, to falute the King and the Queen Norher; The alighted at St. Maries, where Cardinal Portocarero Archbishop of Tolleda, waited for her, and immediately Te Deum began, as foon as it was ended, the mounted her Horse again. and rid to the Pallace, where the was received by the King and Queen Mother, the King help't her off her Horse, and the Queen Mother taking her by the Hand, led her to her Apartment, where all the Ladies were waiting for her, and fell on their Knees in all Humility to kiss her Hand. While I am upon this Head of the Pallace, I should tell you, Dear Cousin, that I have heard there are certain Laws or Rules establisht in the Pallace, which have been observed there for above these hundred Years without the least Devotion, they are call'd the Orders or Ceremonials of the Pallace; they run thus, that the Queen of Spain shall go to Bed at Ten a Clock in Summer, and nine in Winter. At the Queens first being here, she did not consider the appointed Hour, it seemed to her Reasonable that the Rule of going to Bed, should be when one was sleepy; but it frequently happens, that as the was eating her Supper, some of her Women, without faying a Word to her, would begin to undress her Head, and others pull off her Shoes under the Table, and so hurry her to Bed with that hafte, as made her very much wonder.

The King of Spain sleeps in one Apartment, and the Queen in another, but this loves his Queen too well to lie from her. It is thus noted in the Orders, that when the King comes out of his own Chamber in the Night to go into the Queens. He must wear his Shoes like Slippers, (for here they make none of these last,) his black Cloak upon his Shoulders instead of a Night-Gown (of which no body makes use at Madrid) his Broquel, or Bucklar (of which I have spoken in some of my Letters) fastned under his Arm, and his Bottle sastned by a String String to the other: But you must not think this Bottle holds drink to quench thirst, it is for a quite contrary purpose, which you must guess. With all this Accourrement, the King has besides a long Rapier in one Hand, and a dark Lant hore in tother; and on this manner he is obliged to go all all me into the Oueens Chamber.

There is another Order in the Ceremonial, which is, that after the King has taken a Millrejs, and happens to forfake her, the must be a Nun, as I have already told you. I have heart that the late King being in Love with a Lady of the Pallace, he knockt one Night softly at her Chamber Door, as she imagin'd it was he, so she would not open it, and only said to him through the Door, Baya, Baya, con Dios no quiero set Monja; that is to say, Go, go, God be with you, I have no mind to be a Nun.

It is also set down, that the King every time he receive a Favour from his Mistress must give her sour Pistols, you perceive he will not ruin his Estate thus, and that the Expence he is at for his pleasure is very moderate. To this purpose it is publickly known, that Philip the IV. the Father of the present King, having heard of the Beauty of a samous Courteran, went to see her at her House; but being a religious Observer of the Orders, he gave her but sour Pistols, she was very angry as so disproportionate a Recompense to her Merit, but distembling her Displeasure, she dress her self like a Cavallero and went to see the King, and after she had made her self known, and had had a most particular Audience of him, she pulled out a Purse of sour hundred Pistols, and laid it upon the Table: It is thus, said she, I pay my Mistress; so pretending that this time the King was her Mistress, seeing she came in Man's Clothes to find him out.

By these Ceremonials, the fixt Time of the King's going to any of his Houses of pleasure is known, whether it be to the Escarial, to Aranjues, or to Buen Retiro, so that without staying for his Orders, all his Equipage is sent away, and early in the Morning they go to awake him that he may rise and put on those Cloaths that are set down in the Orders according to the Season, and after that he steps into his great Coach, and so very contentedly goes, where several Ages past it has been agreed on.

When the appointed time comes to return, though the King is never fo well pleas'd where he is, yet he must go away that he may not alter the Custom.

It is also known, when he is to go to Confession, and to perform his Devotions, at that time the Confession comes, and presents himself.

Every Courtier, and even the Embassadors are oblig'd when they go into the King's Chamber to put on certain little Lawn Cuffs, which they wear quite flat upon their sleeves, there are Shops in the Guard-room, where the Lords hire them, and return them when they come out. In like manner all the Ladies are to wear Patins when they go into the Queens presence, I think I have already told you, that these are a kind of Sandals, into which the Shoe is fastned, and which raises them up very high, if they should appear before the Queen without these Sandals, the would take it very ill.

The Oucens of Spain have none but Widdows and Maids about them; the Pallace is so full of them, that one can see nothing elfe through the Latices and in the Balconies. And here's one thing feems to me very fingular, which is, that a Man although he be Married is allow'd to declare himself the Lover of Gallant of a Lady of the Pallace, and for her fake to commit all the Follies and to to fpend all the Money he can, without being in the least blam'd for it. One shall see these Gallants in the Court, and all the Ladies in the Windows, where 'tis their daily Employment to discourse with, and entertain one another by their Fingers : For you must know that their Hands speak a Language that is perfectly intelligible; and as it might be guest at if it was always alike; and that the same Signs always meant the same things, so they agree with their Mistresses upon certain private Signs and Actions, which no body elfe under-This kind of Love is publick, a Man must be of a peculiar fort of Wit and Humour dexteroully to manage these Intrigues and to be accepted by the Ladies, for they are wonderful delicate and nice, they do not talk like other People. In the Pallace there reigns a cartain Genious and Strain of Wit, quite different from that in the City, and so peculiar, that one must learn it as they do an Art or a Trade. When the Queen goes abroad, all, or however the greatest part of the Ladies go with her; then the Gallants, who are constantly upon the Watch, go a foot by their Coach fides, that they may enjoy their Conversation. It is really good Sport to see how these poor Lovers dirty themselves, for the Streets are horrid masty; but then, the more dirty the more gallant. When the Queen returns home late, there are carried before the Coaches where her Ladies are, forty or fifty Flamboys of white Wax; and this fometimes makes a very glorious Illumination; for there are several Coaches, and in every one divers Ladies, so that frequently, one may fee above a thousand Flamboys, besides those the Queen has, When

When the Ladies of the Pallace are let Blood, the Chyrurgeon takes a mighty care of the Ligature, Fillet, or any Cloth or Hankerchief upon which any of the Blood of the fair one is has fallen; for he never fails to make a rich Present of it to the Cavellero that loves her, and this is lookt upon to be a worthy Occasion for a Man to ruine himself to all intents; there have been some so extravagantly soolish, as to give the Chyrurgeon the greatest part of their Plate; you must not fancy this is only a Spoon, a Fork, or a Knise, which may be the Stock of a great many we know; No, no, I assure you, this extends to the value of Three or sour thousand Crowns; and this is a Custom so rooted amongst them, that a Man had rather feed upon nothing but Radishes and Leeks all the Year long, than not to perform what he is obliged to do upon these fort of Occasions.

Few of the Ladies of the Palace leave it without being very advantagiously married; there are also the Queens Menines, who are so very Young when they come to her, that she has some not above six or seven Years old; these are Children of the highest Quality. I have seen some of them more beautiful than the God of Love himself was ever painted.

On some solemn Days, when the Ladies of the Pallace go abroad, or when the Queen gives Audience, every Lady has the Priviledge to place by her sides two Cavelleros who put on their Hats before their Majesties, although they be not Grandees of Spain; they are called Embevecidos, that is, Drunk with Love, and so transported with their Passion, and the Pleasure of being near their Mistresses, that they are uncapable of minding any thing else, they are permitted to be cover d for the same Reason that mad Men are, who understand not their Obligation to Decency and good Manners; but yet to enjoy this Liberty, they must have leave from their Ladies, otherwise they dare not presume

There is no other Diversion at Court than Plays; but during the Carnaval, they empty Eggs by a little hole in the Shell, and fill them full of Sweet scented Water, and then stop them up again with Wax, and when the King is at a Play he throws these at every body, and every one in imitation of his Majesty throw them likewise at one another; this perfum'd Rain makes the Air very sweet, but withal wets People pretty handsomely, and this is one of their greatest Pastime's, there's hardly any body at this season but what carries a hundred of the Egg-shells, that are either fill'd with Orange-flower, or some other sweet scented Water, and as they go along in their Coaches throw them in Folks Faces: At this time the People also please themselves after their fashion; for example, they'll

li varb

they'll break off the neck of a Bottle, and tye the part that is within the Wicker, to the Tail of a Dog, and fometimes you

Quall fee above two thousand run after him.

The King's Dwarf is the prettieft that ever I faw, his Name i.s Levifillo, he was born in Flanders, he is extream little, and exactly well proportion'd, he has a handsome Face, an admirable Complexion, and not only wittier than one can imagine, but withal very wife and knowing. When he goes to take the Air, there's a Groom to wait on him, who rides upon one Horfe, and carries another before him, which is fo very small, that it may properly be term'd a Dwarf Horse, and is as handsome for his kind as his Mafter is for his. This Horfe is brought to the Place where Louifillo is to mount him, for he would be almost typed if he was to walk so far; and it is really a great pleasure to see the Dexterity of this little Animal and his Mafter, when he orders him like a manag'd Horse. I do assure you that when he is upon his Back, they do not both make above three quarters of an Ell in height. He faid very ferioully tother day. that he would fight the Bull at the first Bull-Feast, for the fake of his Mistress Donna Elvire. This is a little Girl about seven or eight years of Age, but wonderful beautiful. The Oucen commanded him to be her Gallant. It is a great Happinels for this Child that the is fallen into the Queen's hands. I'll tell

The Fathers of Mercy went to redeem a certain number of Slaves which they brought to Madrid a and according to their Cultom of coming through the City in Procession, the Queen chanced to cast her Eyes upon a Captive Woman which led two Little Girls by the hand a they feem'd to be Sifters, but there was ithis difference between them, that one was extream handlome, and the other as ugly. The Queen made her come to her, and ask'd her if the was the Mother of those two Children; the answered, that she was Mother only to the ugly one. And how came you by the other, faid the Queen? Madam, reply'd the Woman, we were in a Vessel in which there was a great Lady big with Child, but we did not know who she was, only by her Atr tendance, and the Richnels of her Cloaths, it was easie to think The must be of Quality. After a long and sharp fight, we were taken, the greatest part of her People were kill'd; and the was fo frighted, that the fell in Travail, and as foon as the was deliver'd, dy'd. I was by her, and feeing this poor little Creature without a Nurse, and ready to periff, I resolv'd to nourish it up with my own, if 'twas possible. As soon as the Corfares were -o Maffers of our Ship, they divided the booty amongst themallo ricule themselves ofter their fashion; for example felves; they were in two Veffels, and so each took away with them the Lot that was fallen to them. Those remaining Yomen and other Servants which belong d to this Lady were on one fide of the Veffel, and I on the other; so that, Madam, continued the Woman, I was never able to learn what or who the person was, whose Child I saved. I now look upon her as my one Daughter, and she believes I am her Mother. So charitable a Deed, says the Queen, shall not go unrewarded a I shall take care of you, and the little Incognito I will keep. And she deed the Queen loves it so extreamly, that the Girl always wears very rich Cloaths. She follows her Majesty every where, and talks to her with that grace and freedom as sufficiently de-

Here are none of those solemn and pleasant Festivals which are at Versailles, when the Ladies have the Honour to eat with their Majesties. All is very reserved in this Court, and in my Opinion, nothing but a general and constant habit could prevent abundance of things from being extream tedious to them, Those Ladies which do not actually dwell at Court, never come to it, but when the Queen sends for them, and she is not allowed to send for them often neither. She lives for the most part with out any other Company than her Women, there was never any claresher to be of no mean Original. Perhaps time may dif-

Life more melancholy than hers.

When she goes a hunting, (and you must know, that of all the Queens that have reign d in Spain she is the first that has had this Liberty,) and is come to the place appointed for mounting on Horseback, she must set her seet upon the Coach boot, and so throw her self upon her Horse. It is not long since she had one, that being a little shy and skittish, would start away as she leaps upon him, and so she had a most grievous fall. When the King is there, he affifts her, but no body else dare come so near the Queens of Spain as to touch them and help them on Horseback, they had rather they should be hurt, and that their Lives should be exposed to the greatest danger.

She has fourteen Matreffes or Quilts upon her Bed, there's neither Flocks nor Feather-beds us'd here, these Quilts being made of Spanish Wool, which is the finest in the World; they are not above three singers thick, so that her Bed is no higher than one of ours in France. They make these Matresses so thin that they may the more easily be turn'd and remov'd; and indeed I have observ'd that they keep hollower, and are not near

It is the Cuftom in Madrid, for the Master or Mistresles of

They have another Custom, which I think odd and peculiar enough, and that is, when a Daughter has a mind to be marri'd, and is the eldest, and has already made her choice, though both her Father and Mother are against the Match, she need only go to the Curate of the Parish and tell him the Matter, and the busness is done. Immediately he takes her from her Parents House, and either puts her into a Convent, or to some devout Lady, where she remains for a little time; afterwards, if she perseveres in her Resolution, the Father and Mother are obliged to give her a Potion suitable to her Quality and their Estate, and in spight of them she is marry'd. Partly upon this Account it is, that such care is taken to keep their Daughters close, and to let no body speak to them, and so to make it difficult for them to take any measures for the management of an Intreague. Otherwise, provided the Cavallero be a Gentleman, it is sufficient, and he may marry his Mistres, though she should prove to be the Daughter of a Grandee of Spain.

Since my being in this Country, I think I have not neglected informing you of every thing; I will now proceed to finish my Memoirs of the Court of Spain, seeing those I first sent you please you so well, I shall send you the rest as fast as any thing happens and offers it self, that is worth your Curiosity and notice. I do also promise you to write you that Relation you defire of we. But for all these little Trisles, I must be good, dear Cousin, to grant me something that is considerable, and that is, the Countinuation of your Friendship, for which I have a just

e 1, h

Present State of SPAIN,

To the Year 1700.

Spain, and more particularly touching the Nobility thereof, which I shall endeavour to satisfy you in so far as is come to my knowledge, for you must understand the Spaniards are a proud reserved fort of People, with great opinion of their own, and as mean of other Nations, that makes them very difficult of access, and so by consequence, a hard thing for a Stranger to make that friendship among Persons of Quality, which is necessary for a due Information of matters concerning Persons of the first rank, which consideration joyned to the natural jealousie, of the Men of that Country as well as the accustomary reservedness of the Women, makes me often smile to hear our travelled Gallants relate their friendship with the Gentlemen, and Intreagues with the Ladies with so much falshood and considence.

The present King is Charles II. the Emperour Charles V. of the House of Austria, his Ancestor being the first of that Name: This Prince was born Sunday the fixth of November 61 at 12½ at Noon, to the great joy of his Father Phillip IV. and Mother Donna Mariana de Austria Sister of the present Emperour, his Nephew the Dauphin of France being born the first, his Father died the 25th of November 65. The next day the Councels went in State, and proclamed the new King, and kist his Hand. On the 8th of November the Town of Madrid lift up the Standard for the new King, by the Hands of Don Ramim de Gusman, Duke of Medina de les Tores, accompanied by the Nobility, King at Arms, Grc. Having mounted a Scaffold richly covered in the great Piazza, the oldest King of Arms having proclaimed filence three times, the Duke lifts up the Standard crying three times, (Castilla for the Catholick King Charles the Second of that name, whom God preferve,) all the People crying out Viva. They not using to Crown their Kings at present, a day or two after, Don Luis de Arragon Duke of Cardonna and Segorbe, the most ancient Knight of the Golden Fleece, Knighted him in presence of several Knights of that Order, put on him the Collar of the Golden Fleece, with the usual Ceremonies; the Princes of Astilliana, Auclino and Montalto, doing him Homage for Italy, Prince of Barbançon for Flanders, the Ambassadour for Germany, and the Duke of cardonna for Spain, he remained under the Tutulage of his Mother, till the Year 1675. when he took on him the Government; he is an easie Man, tall and thin, fair, with the Austrian great under Lip, but of mean Capacity, and not at all Active; which makes the Spaniards often cry out, when shall we have a King of our own Complexion, they speak very slightly of him, as of an innocent, but yet are very loyal, laying all the miscarriages in the Government on the Ministers, who are changed often enough.

As to the Nobility of this Kingdom, they may be divided into the higher and lowerthe; former comprehending only such as are Grandees, who are covered in Presence of the King, they were so ordered by Charles the fifth, to avoid the competitions between the great Men of Spain, and Princes of Germany, and in some fort to make them equal; there are said to be three degrees of Preheminence. Herein, the First come into the Kings presence, speak to him covered, and then put on their Hat; the Second speak to the King, and put not on their Hat, till the King has spoke to them; the Third speak to the King, and stand by, till the King commands them to cover. 95. Onnata, his Name Ladron de Guevara, his Estates in Ca-Rile: (Med. de los Torres.)

96. Oropesa his Name Toledo, his Estates in Castile.

97. Santa Gadea, his Name Padilla, his Estates in Castile. 98. Medellin, his Name Porto Carrero, his Estates in Palma.

Of these Grandees there are some more eminent then others. that Family the Duke of Medina Celi, Don Louis de la Cerda, Henriques de Ribera, Sandoval y Roxas, Ayala, Arragon, Fole y Cordova; may well be effeemed the first, as that by the Corda, he is Lineally descended from the Kings of Castile and France, and by the Arragon, the Mothers Family from the Kings of Arragon, all whose Royal enfigns he carries in his Arms: There is united in his Person seven Grandeesships, as enjoying the Titles and Estates of Medina Celi, Cardonna, Segorbe, Lerma, y Alcala, being five Dukedoms, Comares and Denia, two Marquifates, besides a great many other Titles, which only carry the preheminence of Titles of Castile, of which we shall speak hereaster; to these Titles he has the support of above 400000 Ducats per Annum. above 100000 Pound Sterling, fo that I doubt not, but he may justly deserve the appellation of the most Illustrious Subject in Europe.

Gusman Duke of Medina Sidonia was in very high esteem, till his concern in the Revolt of Portugal from Spain; the Duke of Braganca after King of Portugal, having married his Sister, who were Parents of our Queen Katherine, his revenue was 100000 Ducats by Customes of his PortSt. Lucar and 100000 Ducats by his Fishery of Tunny-Fish at Cortes, 100000 Ducats by Rents of Lands, and of the same Family. Is Gusman Duke of Medina de los Torres, St. Lucar the greater, Prince of Stillano, by which his name Caraffa, Conde de Olivares, and Conde de Omate, by which last his Name is Ladronde Guevara, and is Hereditary Postmaster General of Spain. This Family came to their Grandeur by marriage, and being chief Ministers to Phillip IV. they are counted the richest Subjects the King of Spain has, possessing near 120000—Ducats per Annum Revenue. N. B. a Ducat is about 4 s. Sterling.

Velasco, Duke of Frias, better known by the Title of Constable of Castile, esteemed the most Ancient; from whence that of the Poet, Tan Hidalgo como el Rey y mas Vicjo que Valasco, as much a Gentleman as the King, and more ancient than Velasco, an Hiperbolical speech to express the Antiquity of that Family. The late Constable being one day at Dinner with the Marquis del Priego, who is also Duke of Feria, as the custom was the Marquis's his Cook set the last Dish on the Table, the Constable commending his civilities, the Marquis replyed, he did well to commend thim for he was of his Family, upon which the Constable demanding his Name, which was Pedro Velasco, returned on the Marquis. Here you see the old Proverb consumed Majores Pedro que su Amo, Peter, is a better Man than his Master. The first Gentleman of the Family of Velasco; is the Marquis del Pico, Governour of the Cittadel of Antwerp at this time.

Henriques, Duke of Medina Riosca; better known by the Titles of Admiral of Castile and Mendosa, Duke of Insantado, by that of Admiral of Arragon, and several of these are united to other Families. The Lower Nobility of Spain, are such as though they enjoy the Titles of Dukes, Marquisses, Princes, Earles, Gr. yet have not the priviledge of covering in the King's presence, and are called Titles of Castile; among which the Grandees eldest Sons are chief. The Grandees have all the Style of excellency; but these only of Lordship, unless otherwise graduated by Offices or Places; these Titles are very numerous, the Spaniards being very Ambitious of Honour, and and by consequence many very poor. A friend of mine in Sevil told me; that in one Year in that City only, they had above 30 new Tities of Earles and Marquisses, made which before as he told me, Ino Comian) did not dine, and I asking him what they did now, he made answer, que no Cenavan, (the) did not Sup.) so true it is, they will starve their own Carcaffes and their Families, for an empty Title, and yet they will have a Coach and good Cloaths whatsoever become of the rest.

The Gentry are as numerous in Spain, as in any Country in the World, and their Families are very ancient, the reason of of their preserving them so well, is that all Estates in Land are intailed, and cannot be alineated, but in case of failure of Iffue, and that then not without a great deal of charge and trouble, which is the occasion that Land is so very dear, there worth 39 to 40 Years purchase. Also in every City in the Archives they keep a register of all the Families that belong thereto with the Alliances they make, which are also the more necesfary, because no one can be made a Knight without full proofs of his being clear for four Generations, by Father and Mother of the Blood of Jews and Moors, with whom the Spaniards have been very much mixed in former times, especially in Andalousia; therefore Men of Estates in Spain are extream Ambitious of Knighthood, because then their Blood is out of question, and every younger Brother of a good Family, is also very desirous thereof; both because that Honour may maintain him is that respect in the World, which his want of Estate would loofe, and also for that thereby they are capacitated more readily to obtain Offices and places, Civil and Military. I have known several made Knights, that all their Estate and Credit, would hardly amount to make up 60 Pound, for the charge of being invested therewith, and I remember to have feen 14 Knights in the Retinut of the Marquis of Laguna, when he went Vice-Roy to Mexico in his Livery, forthat we may well put the Knights of Spain, into the old Lift of the poor Companious.

The orders of Knighthood in Spain are these; (for that of the Golden Fleece, nor that of St. John's cannot be reckoned Spanish Orders; the former being given only to some very great Men, and that in Flanders and Germany as well as Spain, and is peculiar to the King of Spain as Duke of Burgundy, and Head of the House of Austria; the last is common to all the Papist Gentry in Europe.) therefore the Spanish Orders are St. Jago, Calatrava, and Alcantara. There is hardly any Grandee or Nobleman in Spain, that is not of one of these Orders, and it is beneficial as well as honourable; they having many Comenda-

ries belonging to there

The First Order of St. Jago is the eldest, though not esteemed the best, because they in producing the proofs of clean Blood, pardon the quarter part on the Mothers side which the others does not. The Habit is a long white Robe, and the Badge is a red Dagger, which they wear wrought on their Cloaks, and enameled on a golden Scollop Shell, which Shell you see St. Jagos Pilgrims wear.

This Order hath 42 Commendaries in the Province of Castiles and 45 in Leon, befides 10 Alcaydies and Licutenancies.

The Second Order is Calatrava, whose Badge is four red Flower de Luces Cross wise. It has 34 Commendaries, and eight Priories.

The Third Order is Alcantara, whose Badge is the same with Calatrava but green. It has 33 Commendaries, four Alcaidies, four Priories. All these Orders yield to the possessor of the several Commendaries, 440000 Ducats Yearly rent, besides the Master-ships which are worth 300000 Ducats per Amun, which are at present possessor the King: Those Offices by the Power and influence they have over the Knights of their several Orders, for some time past, were thought too great for Subjects to enjoy as formerly they did, over and above these Rents the several Orders allow all their several Knights, Professors, that have not Commendaries, and that will demand it 120000 Marvedies a Year for Bread and Water.

Further, for the employment and advancement of this numerous Nobility and Gentry, the King of Spain has to bestow about 72000 Offices Eclefiaftical, Civil and Military, amongst which some of the chief are, nine Vice-Royships, of Naples, Seicily, Arragon, Valentia, Navara, Sardigna, Catalonia, Peru and Mexico. Governments near upon as confiderable, Flanders Millan, Galicia, Biscay, Andalusia, upper and lower Murcia, Sevilla, Majorca, Minorca, Ivica, Canaries, in Africa, Oran, Scuta, East-India, Phillipine Islands. In America, Governour Captain General and Prefident of Chancery of St. Domingo. Island of Hispaniola, Governour and Captain General of St. Christophers of the Havana, Governour of Cuba, Governonr and Captain General of Porto Rico, Governour and Captain General of Florida, Governour of the Islands of Margarita, Governour and CaptainGeneral of New Andalousia, Governour and Captain General of Tucatan, Prefident and Governour of the New Gallicia, Governour and Captain General of New Bilcay, Goverbour and Captain General and Prefident of Guatimalo, Governour of Luconusco, Governour and Captain General of Hundulas, Governour of Maracago, Governour and General of Costa Rica of Governour Terrenates.

The Revenues of the Crown of Spain, are reckoned about 37 Millions of Dollars, wherein they reckon but 3 1 from the West-Indies yearly.

In Spain, in Castile alone are 5 Archbishops, 31 Bishops; the Revenues whereof are above 1 Millions. To make a better judgment of the Grandeur of Spain, consider that as it appears by the Books of Accounts of the Counsel of the Indies; there has entred into Spain from these parts, from the Year 1545. to to the Year 1667. 1550 Millions of Dollars, value in Gold and Silver, of all which the King has the part, besides which there always comes a great quantity out of Register, at least part of the whole, of which the Mountains of Potosi alone, have produced three hundred Millions of Silver; besides the Plate there comes from thence a vast wealth in Pearles, precious Stones, Cocheniel, Indigo, Vigonia Wool, and other Commodities.

In the Indies the King promotes fix Arch. bishops, 32 Bishops. In Airagon, one Archbishop, and seven Bishops. In Valentia, one Archbishop, and two Bishops. In Catalonia one Arch-Bishop, eight Bishops, and the Bishops of Majorca. In the Islands of Sardagnia three Archbishops, and four Bishops. In Italy eight Archbishops, and seventeen Bishops. In Scicily three Archbishops, and seven Bishops. Besides a great number of Abbots, Priors, and Dignities without number, of all which the Pope has not the spoils of the Dead, nor the Fruits of the vacant

The Government of Spain by its Constitution is a limited Monarchy, Successive in a right Line both Males and Females; the Male Line ended in Ferdinand, who united Castile and Aragon, by Marriage with Isabella of Castile, whose Daughter and only Child married Phillip the fair, by whom the Crown came into the House of Austria, Charles the 5 Emperour being sole King of that Family. Phillip the first dying before his Wife, the limitation of the Monarchy is by the Cortez, (or Parliament) composed of twenty Cities and one Town, viz. Burgos, Leon, Granada, Sevilla, Cordava, Murcia, Jaen, Madrid, Cuenca, Samora, Galicia, Guadalaxara, Valladolid, Salamanca, Avila, Soria, Segovia, Tora, Estremadura, Palencia and Toledo; each of which fends two Deputies, who are chosen by and out of the Aldermen, or Common councils of the respective Cities, who are Heriditary. These Deputies must bring decisive Procurations from their respective Cities; on their meeting they are covered in the Kings presence, and and fit take anOath of Fidel ty to him, and that they have no private Orders from their G ties, other then what their procurations express, and when they enter upon Bufinefs, they take an Oath of Secrefie among themselves; they have two Secretarys within themselves, and the eldeft of the Procurators or Members for Burgos, acts as Prefident or Speaker; but no Act can pass without the consent of all. If it be matter of grant to the King, and then their Votes are east or given in privately, but if it be matters of Justice, or private concerns which is first determined, they give their Votes publickly, and then the Majority carries it; when any Acts pass they carry it to the King for his consent, they are called by Letters Convocatory from the King, and Privy Council or Council of the Chamber, and dissolved by a notefaction of the Prefident of the faid Councel: But they leave a deputation at Court of eight Members, four for Action, and four for absence or Infirmities. The Cortes have never been called fince the Year 1647. when they gave the King the Millions or general Excise, and will not be called any more, unless upon the nemost exigences of Affairs; their Power being so great in calling Ministers to account, examining into all Male administration fince their last Session. But their Acts only bind the Kingdoms of Castile and its Dependants; that of Arragon, having its States and Justice apart, but are now also discontinu'd. fo that now the whole of the Spanish Government lies, in the Power of the King and his feveral Councils, who refides at Madrid, and whose Pragmaticas or Proclamations in the Kings Name, have the force of Laws in their feveral Provinces, and are, viz. The Supream Council of Castile, the Council of Arragon, the Council of the Indies, the Council of Italy and of Flanders, Council of the Chamberer Cabinet, which is only the Prefident and three or four of the Councils of Caffile at the Kings pleasure; and these are they that have the chief management of all Affairs of Government, though there is also the Council of State, which is above all in Title, though in reality it is more for State then use. Besides these, there is the Councils of War, of Revenues of the Inquifition, of Orders of Knighthood, of the Crufado, which are for the Management of these several matters.

But there are a great many exemptions from the common Course of Law, on account of Priviledges, as all Churchmen, all that belong to the Inquisition all Soldiers, all Knights, and all Persons belonging to the King's Revenue, all whom will appeal in case of profecution, Criminal or Civil, to their own Judges, or finally to their respective Councils at Madrid, besides the Power of the Church in preserving any other Person, that flyes to it from the ordinary Justicein any Case, from whence he cannot be taken, but by order of the Pope's Nuncio, or Legat, who is ufually the Archbishop of Tolledo, Primate of Spain, and generally a Cardinal, and a Spaniard. Thus have you a brief account of what has occurr'd to my notice touching Spain, or more properly Castile, wherein I had my Residence some Years; but the Government of Arragon, is or was very distinct, which I am not acquainted withal.
